Elected New Council President

Kolson To Colleagues: 'Start Your Engines'

New City Council President Peter Kolson offered a message for the future to his fellow councillors at Tuesday's inauguration ceremonies: "start your engines."

Kolson succeeds previous Council President Michael Cheney who under council rules cannot succeed himself. He will serve with Cheney and two other incumbents as well as five new members on the 1996-97 council.

Kolson, the Ward 1 councillor, began by thanking his fellow councillors and constituents and offering special thanks to several family members in the audience whom he introduced, including his wife Judy. He then gave a speech that was light on specifics in terms of his goals but offered hope for the future.

"The years ahead hold much promise and much hope," he said. "It is time now to begin. So, my fellow colleagues, these words I say to you councillors: 'start your engines.'"

He also touched upon what each of his new colleagues brings to the council:

•Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2: previous experience as Ward 2 councillor and in county government.

•Patrick McDermott, Ward 3: a knowledge of state government and neighborhood activism.

•Michael D'Amico, Ward 4, at age 20 the youngest councillor elected in the city's history: enthusiasm and a quest for constituent services.

•Stephen Durkin: expertise in education due to 12 years on the School Committee.

•Paul Harold, at-large: experience as a state senator.

Mayor James Sheets' priorities for the next two years include improved senior citizens' facilities and programs, a new Quincy Point school, revitalization of the Fore River shipyard and plans for the Quincy Center Concourse and a downtown hotel.

The mayor outlined his goals during his 42-minute fourth inaugural address Tuesday in the Quincy High School auditorium. The inauguration also included the swearing-in of five new city councillors and two new School Committee members.

The new councillors are Daniel Raymondi (Ward 2), Patrick McDermott (Ward 3), Michael D'Amico (Ward 4), Stephen Durkin (Ward 5) and Paul Harold (at-large). Christine Cedrone and Francis McCauley are the new School Committee members.

Sheets, who is still mulling a run for Congress in the fall, told The Quincy Sun last week that improving senior programs would be "a top priority" for him during the next two years. On Tuesday, he introduced a multi-faceted plan toward that end highlighted by the proposed creation of a senior center at the Naval housing facility along Quincy Shore Drive which includes Squantum Gardens and Naval Terrace.

"Quincy has the highest senior population of any city of comparable size in the Commonwealth or in the country," he said. "[A total of] 22.9 percent of Quincy's population is 60 years and older. Quincy ranks 7 percent above the national average in the number of its seniors.

"It is projected that poverty and hunger will become an even greater problem among aging Americans, especially among women, as we move into the 21st century. We must not allow this to happen in Quincy."

The mayor said his senior plan calls for the following:

•Utilizing the 48 units of street-level housing at the Naval Terrace complex for moderate, rental, non-subsidized senior housing.

Sheet's Major Goals

Mayor James Sheets listed the following among his major goals for the next two years during his fourth inaugural address Tuesday:

•A multi-faceted plan to improve the quality of life for Quincy's senior citizens highlighted by the proposed creation of a senior center at the Naval housing facility along Quincy Shore Drive.

•Revitalization of the Fore River shipyard.

•Eventual construction of a Quincy Center hotel which the mayor said depends on Citizens Bank selling the proposed site for the project.

•Appointment of a tourism director who will work to attract more people to the city's historic sites.

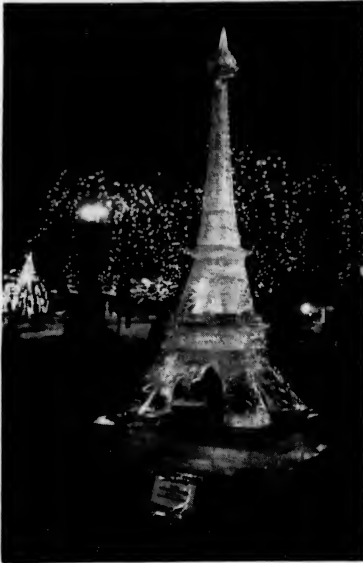

style residential home in Squantum Gardens into a health clinic operated, controlled, and paid for by Quincy Hospital.

•Expanding the current Council on Aging van fleet from six to 15, and creating a "transvan share-ride van service."

•Turning one of the units containing eight apartments into the new home for the Quincy Commission on the Family, which is designed to assist needy families across the city.

Elected New Vice Chairman

Mariano Looks Ahead To School Challenges

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ronald Mariano, new vice chairman of the Quincy School Committee, said at Tuesday's inauguration ceremonies he is proud of the committee's accomplishments in recent years and that he looks forwards to future challenges.

Mariano succeeds Daniel Raymondi, who is leaving the committee to begin a term on the City Council, as vice chairman. Under committee rules, however, Raymondi could not succeed himself as vice chairman even if he had remained on the committee.

"The past six years of my tenure on the committee have produced many changes and accomplishments....The school system has made tremendous strides since I was a teacher in the early '80s," he said.

Among the committee's past accomplishments Mariano listed:

- A recent new collective bargaining agreement between the teachers and the school system. Mariano praised committee members JoAnn Bragg and Linda Stice, as well as the Quincy Education Association and the city's school teachers, for their "hard work" that resulted in the agreement.

- Reopening of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, restoration of the Quincy High School auditorium, and construction of the Amelio Della Chiesa Childhood Center and additions to the Bernazzani and Parker elementary schools.

- The usage of $1.6 million to support the creation of system-wide technology infrastructure "to ensure equitable accessibility for all students."

- Plans for a new elementary school in Quincy Point and to meet the ADA requirements at Sterling and the Point-Webster middle schools.

RONALD MARIANO

The plan for the new school calls for Point-Webster, currently an elementary school, to become a middle school in order to relieve overcrowding at Sterling.

- Creation of programs such as an Alternative Learning Program for at-risk middle and high school students and a World Language Program at the middle school level.

- Efforts to keep class size below the maximum guidelines.

- A strong attendance and tardy policy.

Mariano, after introducing his wife Eve and Judge Warren Powers of Quincy District Court who he said was a "role model" to him when he was younger, recognized outgoing committee members Raymondi and Stephen Durkin, as well as Mayor James Sheets and the City Council, for their part in

Clear Paths For Letter Carriers

The managers of the Quincy, Wollaston and North Quincy post offices are requesting that customers help their letter carriers deliver the mail safely and efficiently by clearing the snow and ice from walk-ways and steps leading to their mailbox.

James Lundrigan, manager of the Quincy Post Office, James Daley, manager of the Wollaston Post Office and J.J. Burke, manager of the North Quincy Post Office, made their request in a recent letter that reads, in part:

"Last year, thousands of letter carriers across the nation suffered sprains, fractures or broken bones because they slipped on icy and snow-covered driveways, sidewalks, steps or porches.

"We do everything possible to deliver the mail regardless of how bad the weather becomes. While we realize it's not always easy to remove ice and snow, keep in mind that our employees are not required to risk personal injury on slippery surfaces to deliver the mail.

"With postal customers cooperating to reduce walking hazards this winter, they will be protecting not only their letter carriers, but their family and the rest of the community.

"Your cooperation and understanding will be appreciated."

THYROID: THE SPEED POLICE

It seems as though everybody is tired these days. While most cases of fatigue are due to the combination of too little sleep and too much to do, chronic tiredness can also be a sign of a thyroid gland malfunction. When the gland doesn't produce enough thyroid hormone, the result is hypothyroidism, a metabolic slowdown generally marked by fatigue (often most pronounced in the afternoon), constipation, dry skin and weight gain. Production of too much thyroid, called hyperthyroidism, can also cause fatigue, along with such symptoms as rapid heartbeat, sweating and weight loss. A misbehaving thyroid is usually diagnosed through blood tests. Treatment may include hormone pills, thyroid-blocking medications, and/or surgery.

P.S. People of all ages can have thyroid problems, but hypothyroidism is most common among women over 50. If you are feeling persistently run down, ask your physician to assist you with a diagnosis. ... And The Next Mayor?

As Mayor James Sheets took his fourth term oath of office Tuesday, his successor no doubt was sitting there in the Quincy High School auditorium listening, watching and maybe, day-dreaming a little.

Who?

No crystal ball can tell you that. Only the voters of Quincy when that election day comes.

SHEETS

But Quincy's mayors traditionally come out of the City Council. And, sitting there Tuesday, were four councillors considered the most likely future mayoral candidates: Tim Cahill, Mike Cheney, Paul Harold and Dan Raymondi.

As Sheets took his oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea and delivered his inaugural address maybe one, two, three or all four of them were thinking little thoughts like:

"Someday that will be me up there. I'll be standing there taking that oath and giving my inaugural address."

Will that January come for one of them? If so, for which one? And, when?

Will one of the four challenge Sheets if he decides to run for a fifth term in 1997? Of the four the one considered the most likely to do so is Cahill.

Cahill has publicly announced that this, his fifth term, will be his last. But he has since hinted he might run again. And there is speculation he might run for a county office.

But if he finds the political climate right for him in 1997 he just might make that mayoral bid he has been thinking about for awhile now.

Cheney, Harold and Raymondi are more apt to wait until Sheets decides to leave City Hall. And by then more attractive political opportunities may have come along for them to change their minds.

Of the four, only one has run for mayor in the past. Raymondi made a bid in 1981, losing to Frank McCauley when Arthur Tobin retired as mayor.

Raymondi and Harold are returning to the City Council after prior service. Raymondi gave up the Ward 2 seat he has now come back to make the mayoral bid in 1981. Harold left in 1979 and went on to become state senator.

Observers will be watching the four the next two years for any signs of an official mayoral bid.

FRANK McCAULEY, who departed City Hall in 1990 after four terms as mayor, is returning to the School Committee where he served 14 years—six as an elected member and eight as chairman by virtue of his office as mayor.

McCauley, who is now executive director of the state Retirement Board, doesn't consider going back to the School Committee after serving as mayor a political step-down.

"It is something I want to do and I look forward to doing it," he says.

He notes that he isn't the first mayor to later be elected to the School Committee. Quincy's first mayor, Charles Porter, served something like 15 years on the School Committee after leaving the mayor's office.

McCauley has no plans to try to top that.

He also notes that another mayor, Joseph LaRaia, returned to the City Council. And that President John Quincy Adams didn't feel he was lowering himself when he served in the House of Representatives after leaving the White House.

SHEETS AND McCAULEY are two of only three mayors to be re-elected unopposed. Thomas Burgin and McCauley had no opposition for one term each in 1940 and 1983 respectively. Sheets was given two terms unopposed in 1991 and 1993.

SPEAKING OF McCAULEY, who is a walking Quincy political history encyclopedia, he calls our attention to a recent boo-boo here.

We reported that newcomer Christine Cedrone, Linda Stice and JoAnn Bragg will give the School Committee three female members for the first time in Quincy's history.

Not so, says McCauley. He reminds us that there were three female members in 1978 when Mary Collins and Joan Picard joined Patricia Toland on the board.

Lincoln-Hancock Students Commended For Lobbying Minimum Wage Law

(The following letter was written to Steven Cantelli, a teacher at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. A copy has been forwarded to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Dear Mr. Cantelli:

Although your students have now doubt moved on, I hope you can make an effort to contact each one of them to extend to them my thanks. As you are probably aware, the Legislature recently adopted and subsequently overrode the Governor's veto of the minimum wage bill. I am so pleased that this bill is now law.

Reflecting back on the battle to win this vital campaign for the working poor and their families, I cannot under state the impact your class had on the process. Grateful for their support at our initial public hearing, I hope they understand how their willingness to get involved and their commitment to speak up on behalf of others will have a tremendously positive impact on hundreds of thousands of lives for many years to come.

As they continue to study their lessons, I hope they also take time to reflect on this success. By not only exploring the issues, formulating an opinion and articulating a position, but by also joining a team to work towards a greater good, they have achieved a monumental goal. Of course, such an effort applied in any task they choose is likely to result in similar success.

My best wishes remain with all of them. It was a great pleasure to be favorred with their support.

Richard A. Voke
State Representative

(Editor's Note: Cantelli's fifth graders worked very hard last year to get the minimum wage bill passed. They wrote letters, made calls and spoke to legislators at the State House at a judicial hearing meeting. According to Cantelli, many legislators, including Reps. Steve Tobin and Mike Bellotti said the kids' lobbying pushed it over the top.)

Studds Financial Aid Forum Sunday

Congressman Gerry Studds has completed plans for a forum he will host Sunday to help students and parents cope with the soaring costs of higher education.

The forum will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Harrington Center of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay. It is free and open to all residents of the South Shore and the Cape and Islands.

Studds said the 11th annual conference will offer students and parents an opportunity to listen to and speak with a variety of experts on how to manage the financial burden of higher education. It will focus not only on four-year colleges, but on financial aid for two-year colleges, vocational training, continuing education and graduate studies.

The conference will feature representatives from the American Student Assistance program, area colleges, military academies, private banks and lending institutions, tuition plan groups and financial advisers. All will be available for private consultation on individual questions.

Studds said those who attend the conference can obtain a detailed information packet containing financial aid guides from the federal government, brochures specifically for Massachusetts colleges and universities, workbooks, sample financial aid forms and information on scholarships and other aid available from private resources.

For more information, call 1-800-870-2626.

Quincy High Pony Restored

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy High School's model sculpture of Cyrus Dullin's famed "Appeal To The Great Spirit" was reinstalled as its accustomed stand in the school's lobby.

The sculpture was under extensive repair for two months following damage by vandals who stole it in October, damaging a hand and the torso of the Indian.

Since its installation by Principal Ernest Collins at the "new" high school, it had become the symbol of the school. It was the gift of the class of 1924 from the "old" high school (presently Central Middle School).

ADAMS ST. BUILDING VARIANCE OVERRULED

The state's high court, the Supreme Judicial Court, overruled the Quincy Board of Appeals' variance granting a business use in a residential area at 435 Adams St.

The court reversed the ruling of Superior Court Judge Edward DeSaurinier, saying that the Quincy board exceeded its power in granting a variance to Benjamin Kurtzman to use the property as a professional building.

CITY EMPLOYEES PROTEST PAY RAISES

A dozen city employees protested their treatment in an amended salary schedule that passed over Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's veto.

The Mayor said that complaints would be turned over to a salary schedule appeals board that would be set up shortly.

Among the appeals was one of the Quincy Planning Board which protested that the position of city planner was the only one not given a raise.

Dom's Asparagus Chicken Cutlet

The night my husband returned from a five day hospital stay, the family all gathered at the house and naturally we thought of food and what we would have.(Especially after eating hospital food).

Our son Dom (who lives three houses down from us) came to the rescue and made delicious chicken cutlets topped with asparagus, and cheese, stuffed mushroom and stuffed yellow and orange peppers.

I had leftover sauce, so my contribution was easy. Just a dish of pasta to go with Dom's gourmet meal..l

When the plates were fixed, the colors were so well blended, I took a picture of one of them.

The following recipe feeds from 4 to 6 depending on how many cutlets are made.

Dom's asparagus, chicken cutlet.

1 pound of chicken cutlets
1 egg mixed with a little milk enough flour to coat the cutlets enough parmesan cheese for coating olive oil for sauteing.
1/2 pound fresh asparagus shredded mozzarella cheese (enough for topping)

Mix the egg and milk. Flour the cutlets, then dip them in the egg and milk mixture and then the parmesan cheese. Saute them in the hot oil, place on paper towel to drain.

Cook the asparagus until they get as soft as you like. Place the cooked cutlets on a cookie sheet, put two or three asparagus on each cutlets and top it with the mozzarella cheese.

Bake in a 350 degree oven until cheese is melted. Dom said veal cutlets can also be used.

MONTCLAIR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL students Dickson Lee and Tricia Hall enjoy Pilgrim Health Care's FitKids recent performance at the school. The participatory theatrical production involves young audiences as it challenges them to make decisions and to develop healthy eating habits, exercise regularly and resolve conflict peacefully.

AMONG THE STUDENTS from Montclair Elementary School who recently participated in Pilgrim Health Care's FitKid's performance at the school are Anthony Ferrara and Andrea Ditullio. The free program is designed to help kids make healthy lifestyle choices.

FitKids Performs At Montclair School

Combining theater, education and audience participation. Pilgrim Health Care's theatrical program, FitKids, was performed recently at the Montclair School.

The 35-minute program teaches constructive ways to recognize and cope with feelings, resolve conflict, gain positive self-esteem and adopt healthy exercise and nutritional habits.

"Younger children have very fragile self-images," said Dr. Richard Elliot, a Massachusetts pediatrician who was among the health and education professionals who participated in the initial focus group used to develop FitKids program seven years ago. "Parents and teachers can contribute to building positive self-images by showing children what other choices they could make in a given situation."

FitKids, comprised of lively scenes about making choices, puts children in the audience in the "parental role"--at certain points in the drama they are invited to help the characters in the play make the wisest choice. In this way, the children "own the messages," which encourages them to apply healthy lifestyle principles to their own lives.

The program's message is intentionally direct: Eat right, exercise, feel good about yourself and resolve conflict peacefully.

Performed free of charge in approximately 500 schools and 100 school systems since its development in 1988, FitKids has delivered its message of self-esteem and healthy living to thousands of young children. For more information about Pilgrim Health Care's FitKids program, call (800) PHC-TEAM.

Artist Donates Painting For Library Silent Auction

Artist Deborah Seavey of Cohasset has donated a painting to the Thomas Crane Public Library to benefit its building fund.

The painting, entitled "Open Field," will be displayed as a silent auction item in the lobby of the main library, Quincy Square, throughout January.

Bidding starts at $100 and must be raised in increments of $25. Bidders write their bids on the bid sheet next to the painting, then fill in a bid slip and give it to a desk attendant.

The winning bidder will be notified by phone the first week in February.

The silent auctions are being held not only to benefit the building fund but also to arouse interest for the Goods and Services Auction which will be held April 11 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The December silent auction item, a luxury box at a Boston College basketball game, was donated by Hibernia Savings Bank. The February auction item is a pair of tickets to concert at Symphony Hall.

Evergreen Program Mulching Christmas Trees For 7th Year

The Quincy Evergreen Program will once again accept Christmas trees in need of mulching.

Trees may be dropped off at the Recycling Center in the rear of the Quincy Department of Public Works Building, 55 Sea St.

The program, which is now in its seventh year, is sponsored by Jay Cashman Inc., 77 Federal Ave. Mayor James Sheets' office also assists with the effort.

Program Chairman Leo Kelly said the program had another successful year last year, bringing the total number of trees mulched since it started to over 10,000.

"All the years have been successful," he said. "They've all been pretty much the same."

Kelly said it was decided that trees would be brought to the DPW this year, instead of the park department as in past years, because the DPW now has a chipper for mulching the trees.

Kelly added that it is important that people participate in the program, which prevents clutter in landfills through the recycling of trees and contributes to the environment by way of the evergreen plants participants receive.

Everyone who brings in a tree to be mulched will receive a coupon for a live 10-inch evergreen plant which will be available until April. Used gift wrapping paper may also be exchanged for an evergreen coupon.

Trees and wrapping paper may be brought to the DPW building weekdays through Jan. 12 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, Jan. 6 and 13 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The program is open to Quincy residents only.

A park department spokesman said last week those seeking more information about the program should call the DPW, but Kelly said interested residents should call the park department at 376-1252.

MWRA, Fire Dept. Reach $104,000 Grant Agreement

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority recently announced a new $104,000 grant agreement between the MWRA and the Quincy Fire Department for backup tunnel safety response services.

With the completion of the 4.8-mile Inter-Island Tunnel bore from Deer Island to Nut Island last November, the fire department may need to respond to an incident at the Nut Island Shaft as well as at the construction of the new headworks at Nut Island, officials said. The department currently has 15 firefighters who are trained in tunnel rescue and qualified to provide backup rescue.

Officials said the new agreement will provide the department with an increase of trained personnel, additional equipment and a site familiarization drill. Mock rescues will also be conducted in the Inter-Island Tunnel, they added.

The tunnel will be lined with concrete before it goes into operation in 1997. When finished, it will handle sewage from 23 communities south and west of Boston. Sludge pipes are also being installed inside the tunnel so the MWRA can eliminate the expense of barging sludge across Boston Harbor from Deer Island to the Fore River where it is processed into fertilizer.

"It is imperative to protect construction crews and MWRA employees if an incident arises while working in the Inter-Island Tunnel, and having the Quincy Fire Department as backup rescue helps ensure their safety," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald.

"As far as the MWRA is concerned, the Quincy Fire Department is one of the best operations in the country," he added. "The department has repeatedly responded to past problems at our Fore River, Nut Island and Long Island facilities."

The Quincy Fire Department has agreed that this proposal will cover the full services needed until the Inter-Island Tunnel Project is complete, according to officials. The length of time for the agreement is now through November 1997 and was required to allow rescue services during tunnel testing as well as the ongoing tunnel lining operation.

The fire department will serve as a supplementary response team to the contractor's primary and backup response teams with the Boston Fire Department.

The $104,333 grant agreement is structured so that $80,988 will be initially committed and $23,345 will be retained for as-needed items over the length of the agreement. A summary of the cost proposal includes: equipment, $60,753; site inspections, $3,548 and initial training, $40,032.

Simon Fireman Donates $500,000 For Hospital Women's Imaging Center

The Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation has received a gift in the amount of $500,000 from Simon C. Fireman, president and CEO of Aqua-Leisure Industries to develop the Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women at Quincy Hospital.

The new imaging center will house a mammography suite, two ultrasound suites and an education area. The renovations to this area began in Sept. 1995 and the Women's Imaging Center is expected to be operational in Spring 1996.

"I have lived most of my life in Quincy," said Fireman, "and I am hopeful that the benefits derived from the new Imaging Center for Women will allow the women of Quincy and surrounding towns the opportunity to live long, full and healthy lives in Quincy, or anywhere they choose."

According to Ralph DiPisa, chief executive officer of Quincy Hospital, "This gift from Simon Fireman, the largest single gift ever given to Quincy Hospital, will make a significant contribution in allowing us to build a vitaly important resource for our community. The Simon C. Fireman Center will provide women with the finest technology and educational support available for the early detection of breast cancer. It will also provide important diagnostic prenatal imaging to ensure the health of future generations."

Officials said the equipment to be used in the area is state-of-the-art, including a new ATL Ultrasound unit with advanced capabilities to perform breast imaging exams, and a Toshiba ultrasound unit with color flow doppler. Mammography equipment currently in use, the GE Senographe 600T will be moved to the new location.

The Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women will be located adjacent to the back lobby, near the main parking lot entrance. The hospital anticipates performing 1,000 mammographic procedures a year, and 5,786 ultrasound examinations.

Quincy Hospital's mammograph program is accredited by the state of Massachusetts, the American College of Radiology and the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA). The technicians in both mammography and ultrasound are all fully certified in these specialties.

The quality of the Quincy Hospital program is further demonstrated by its leadership role in the training of radiology technologists from Massachusetts Community College, officials said.

Fireman has distinguished himself as an internationally known business executive, a renowned administrator in the federal government, and as a notable leader in philanthropic activities. Fireman is founder, chairman of the board and CEO of Aqua-Leisure

Correction

An article on the Real Estate page of the Nov. 30, 1995 issue of The Quincy Sun contained several inaccuracies, according to the legal counsel for Eastern Connection Operating Inc., one of the businesses mentioned in the article.

A letter from Robert R.

Berluti & Associates cites the following mistakes:

•City Councillor Timothy Cahill is not an employee of Eastern Connection, as stated in the article.

•Eastern Connection is not a tenant of 100 Penn St., as stated in the article.

•The article stated that North American Security, another company, is "franchised to deliver packages under the Eastern Connection name." According to the letter sent in response, "Eastern Connection does not have any franchises and this description inaccurately depicts the relationship between Eastern Connection and North American Security."

[Ed. Note: The Sun received its information for the article from Cahill, who attributed the mistakes to "a miscommunication." We regret the errors.]

Middle School Students Take Part In 'Great American Speakout'

IMPACT QUINCY Tobacco Coalition Coordinator Mary Lou Gifford (left) thanks students for their help in collecting signatures for the Great American Speakout campaign which were sent to the FDA in support of President Clinton's proposed regulations on tobacco products that would ban vending machines and outdoor advertising within 1,000 feet of schools and require the tobacco industry to finance a $100 million education program on the effect smoking has on people's health. Middle school students from left are Kim Cruickshanks, Sterling; Maria Coughlin, Atlantic; Amanda Bagarella, Central and Sara Little, Broad Meadows.

POSTCARDS SIGNED BY about 1,000 Quincy middle school students recently were mailed to Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler as part of Impact Quincy's Great American Speakout, a cooperative effort between the organization and health educators at the city's four middle schools. The initiative is designed to promote a ban of the sale of cigarettes to minors. C-SPAN Program To Broadcast From Quincy Square Saturday

The C-SPAN cable TV network's weekly "Washington Journal" show will broadcast live from Quincy Square Saturday from 8:30 to 10 a.m., as the program continues a series on "presidential cities" around the country.

Being interviewed live in the network's educational C-SPAN School bus, parked in front of city hall, will be Mayor James Sheets and Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of Quincy's Church of the Presidents. The show also will include a video tour of the church, including the crypts where the nation's second and sixth presidents, John and John Quincy Adams are buried.

The "Washington Journal" crew also is expected to interview two Quincy High School students who will vote in the presidential election for the first time in 1996.

Helping to coordinate logistics of the live "shoot" with the city and arranging interviews are Continental Cablevision Quincy Manager Joe Hayes and Program Director Bill McColgan.

A Continental Cablevision camera crew also will be on the scene to produce a behind-the-scenes special on the C-SPAN program for later airing on Continental's Quincy Channel 3.

"This is a real honor for the City of Quincy and a boost for Quincy tourism to be featured on a national cable network with the prestige of C-SPAN," said

Continental's McColgan.

Sheets is being interviewed not only as the city's chief executive, but also for his knowledge as a professor of history at Quincy College, from which he is on leave.

The first half of C-

SPAN'S "Washington Journal," from 7 to 8:30 a.m. will air live from Quincy, Ill., to which local residents and organizations sent flood relief in 1993.

Continental Cablevision was instrumental in the founding of C-SPAN and continues to provide major financial support to the cable TV industry-funded network.

- Utilizing the current community center at Squantum Gardens for a senior social center including a store and variety shop.

- Teaming the new senior department with Beechwood by the Bay to work on developing senior programs, and eventually expanding the Squantum Gardens community center so that it includes social services and nutrition, multicultural, intergenerational, employment, Alzheimer's and education programs.

- Setting aside a portion of the site for construction of Quincy Community Action Program administrative offices and their Head Start program.

- Leasing the remaining Squantum Gardens apartment units to a single lessor "to ensure the integrity of the units and also allow the Department of Elder Services to maintain control of them."

- Transforming the Council on Aging into a new Department of Elder Services that will manage the facility, and retaining a consultant to assess the current units, project future maintenance and do cost projections for operation and maintenance. "The Council on Aging has done a great job with the resources at hand, but it is time for a new initiative," said Sheets.

- Making sure the facility supplements existing senior housing and does not compete with it.

Sheets said he will work with Naval, state and city officials to make the senior plan a reality and that he will ask the City Council to hold public hearings to receive input from elderly residents.

He added that Community Development Block Grant funds will not be used and "we will not move forward with this project as proposed unless it becomes self-supporting like Quincy Hospital and Quincy College."

Other top priorities Sheets cited during his address:

- Revitalization of the Fore River shipyard. The mayor noted that a Greek shipbuilder has filed an application for $230 in loan guarantees with MARAD (U.S. Maritime Administration), which will now begin analyzing the application in details. "This is encouraging news," said the mayor.

- Construction of a new elementary school in Quincy Point and an addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center.

- Continuation of plans to build the Quincy Center

Concourse which would link Burgin Parkway with Hancock Street in the downtown. "The Quincy Center Concourse must be built," he said. "If it is not, the southern end of Hancock Street will decline."

- Eventual construction of a Quincy Center hotel which Sheets said cannot happen until Citizens Bank sells the proposed site for the project. "We cannot become a tourist destination without a hotel," he said.

- Appointment of a tourism director who will work to attract more people to the city's historic sites.

Sheets also touched upon a number of the city's successes under his administration. Many of them are due to Quincy's increasingly strong fiscal status, he noted.

"Our attitudes of pride and self-worth are deeply rooted in our economic well-being," said Sheets.

Among the recent successes the mayor listed were improvements to school programs and buildings, park and recreation programs, and the city's overall cleanliness; several capital improvement projects; new businesses that have opened in the city and plans for others; and a drop in crime and the jobless rate. Quincy will work toward continued success in those areas as well, he said.

Sheets said he also was pleased about a recent announcement by Gov. William Weld regarding a state-funded commuter rail station that will open in the city in 1997.

The mayor expressed in conclusion his gratitude toward those who helped make the last two years a success and said he is eager to begin his fourth term.

"I look forward to working with the new City Council and School Committee, as well as department heads, staff and city employees, as we move forward in the next two years," he said.

receiving the Reebok Foundation Youth in Action Award, and praised the city for being the first New England community to participate in Kids Vote.

Mariano said, however, the committee must continue to work hard in the future.

"There are many things left to be done," he said. "Our staff, which is the most important asset in the school system must be provided the opportunity to improve and develop. We must clearly understand the dual objectives of education for living, and education for making a living.

"The revitalization of the Center for Technical Education as well as the expanded tech prep program will help us meet those objectives. The many business partnerships that our schools have established brings the modern workplace into our school system.

"Most importantly, we must be creative and open-minded because the world is changing very quickly, and we must provide our students with the skills to succeed."

tor and on the council.

Kolson did the same for his fellow incumbents:

•Cheney, at-large: his ability to lead and to organize and utilize the city's arts.

•Timothy Cahill, at-large: a voice for the concerns of businesses in Quincy Center and throughout the city.

•Bruce Ayers, Ward 6: a concern for handicapped affairs that has led him to bring them to the forefront.

"We must remember that though each is individually elected, we work together as a team," said Kolson. "Sometimes as a debating team and sometimes a team that makes the touchdowns together, but no matter what the vote or issue, each and everyone is here for the citizens of Quincy."

Kolson, noting that people sometimes wonder why one would serve as a councillor, listed Wollaston Beach, Quincy Bay, the Adams National Historical Site, Woolworth's in Quincy Center and the city's parks and playgrounds, school system, churches and synagogues, youth, Senior Olympics, athletic teams and holiday celebrations as among the reasons people should be proud to be residents of Quincy.

"Let us never forget as we sit in our chambers and decide our future the words immortalized in the film 'The Wizard of Oz:' 'there's no place like home, there's no place like home,'" he said.

Council On Aging Awarded Americorps Grant

The Quincy Council on Aging was recently awarded an Americorps Elder Leadership Program grant through the University of Massachusetts, Boston Gerontology Institute.

The Elder Leadership program promotes volunteer service to strengthen community efforts to assist frail elderly and is part of a national service program. Members serve as volunteer coordinators stimulating volunteerism of all ages.

Of the 15 members assigned through the Gerontology Institute's program, the Quincy Council on Aging received five positions. The positions have been filled and the members have all received a week of training at U-Mass, Boston.

According to Quincy Council on Aging Director, Brian Buckley, Quincy received one of the largest grant awards through the program.

"We certainly were fortunate to be awarded five positions out of the 15 slots available. I believe only Boston with six slots received more. Of course, this is reflective of our large senior population as well as the quality of our proposal", Buckley said.

The five members selected to be the Americorps leaders in Quincy are Bradley Delano, Teresa Hornbrook, Arnold Levine, Jane Mudge and Lena Trough. Assigned to the Quincy Council on Aging, all five members will work in the city's neighborhoods trying to recruit volunteers for visiting, telephone re-assurance and other volunteer services geared to Quincy's elders.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

The Market Is Firm, But Growth Is Slow

By TONY PARKER

The New England residential real estate market this year has much in common with Ol' Man River: it's not surging, slacking or changing in any fundamental sense. But like the great river, it just keeps rolling along.

Market projections indicate that 1995 will equal or fall slightly below 1994 sales levels. Fourth quarter 1995 figures are ahead of last year's for the same period, but fourth quarter 1994 was the low point in an otherwise banner year.

Despite flat sales growth throughout New England, some markets are doing better than others, and regional companies like DeWolfe New England are benefiting from their broad geographical reach. DeWolfe's sales volume is considerably ahead this year, and year-end figures will show a substantial increase over last year's totals. In fact, DeWolfe's nine-month totals were almost equal to 1994's full-year totals.

Residential Sales And The Economy

The outlook for residential real estate sales in New England closely tracks the projections for the regional economy.

While the national economy is embarked on a strong, steady growth path, New England's economy, and its real estate market, continues to plod along. According to reports from the 12 Federal Reserve Bank districts, New England is the only region of the country that is still in a recovery mode. Every other region is now in the expansion phase of the business cycle with growth rates projected to be in the 2.5 percent to 3 percent range.

The difference is particularly evident in job growth figures. Although the New England economy continues to add jobs, the rate of job growth is substantially lower here than in other regions of the country. Today, New England is only halfway back to its pre-recession employment levels. In raw numbers, the New England economy has recovered only 300,000 of the 600,000 jobs it lost since 1989.

Within the region, the northern three states, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, appear to be closest to full recovery. DeWolfe's 10 New Hampshire sales offices, which service all of New Hampshire and counties in southern Maine, are recording increased sales reflecting the growing strength of the economy in those states.

Of the three southern New England states, Massachusetts appears to be recovering faster than Rhode Island and Connecticut, but even in the Bay State job creation has not caught up to pre-recession levels.

Moreover, when the recession hit, job losses were felt most heavily in the manufacturing industries, and although manufacturing jobs are usually the first to go in a recession, they also are the first to come back in a recovery. However, the defense and computer industries, linchpins of the southern New England economy and those hardest hit by the recession, have undergone fundamental structural changes that make it unlikely the lost jobs in those fields will ever be recovered, at least not in the same numbers. What job gains that have been made are in the service sector, from software and biotech to legal services and fast food restaurants.

Impact On Residential Real Estate

Most forecasters predict that New England will not enter an expansionary phase until late 1998 or 1999. Until then, growth will be slow, and inflation will be kept in check by the increasingly fierce competition in the marketplace. With a non-expanding economic pie, the only way for companies to increase market share and profitability is to do their jobs well enough to attract more customers than their competition.

This means the basic restructuring that has taken place in the banking and computer industries is likely to occur in the real estate industry. And probably sooner than later.

What form is this restructuring likely to take? First of all, real estate firms will be forced to supply more, not fewer, services to their customers than ever before. Providing more services while increasing profitability requires improvement in the efficiency with which those services are delivered.

Consequently, agents will become more professional, adapting to the computer revolution and recognizing that the latest developments in communication technology have changed the way both buyers and sellers receive information. They will build strong personal referral networks, and expand the growing trend toward the use of assistants. What's more, they will affiliate with a company that has a full-service menu—buyer brokerage, mortgage financing, relocation services, among others—and attracts customers and clients with this value-added component. As a result, the industry consolidation that has taken place recently is likely to accelerate in the coming years. Mid-sized companies will be quickly drawn to the decision point of whether to make a major investment in technology and services or combine their firms with companies that can offer them immediate access to the tools they will need to compete.

The beneficiaries of this change will be the consumer, first of all, and then the real estate companies and professionals who get on board and go with the river's flow.

Redecorating Your House To Get Your Money Back

Q. We just bought an older home that needs extensive redecorating. However, we'll probably only live in this house for about three years. How can we best spend our money so that we get it back when we sell?

A. It's important to look ahead because many people purchase a home without thinking about how easy or difficult it will be to sell in the future. In most cases, updating the decor of a home will either make it sell for more money, make it sell faster or both. Either way, your investment in redecorating the home should pay off at resale time.

But before you redecorate, talk with a real estate professional. Find out what buyers are looking for in home decors. Attractive neutrals and the new earth tones will probably be the best ways to update the interior color scheme.

In addition, try to use moderately-priced materials when you redecorate. The cost of expensive designer wall coverings may be hard to recoup at sale time.

Remember to save any leftover paint, carpeting or wall coverings in case you need to do some touch-ups before putting your home on the market.

Quincy Public Schools To Receive $12,000 Grant

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano, and Stephen Tobin announce that the Quincy Public Schools will receive a $12,000 State Adult Basic Education Family Literacy Challenge Grant.

The City of Quincy is one of only 15 Massachusetts communities to receive the grant, which will allow Quincy Public Schools to build on existing children's educational programs to provide the same educational services for adults.

The program will create an environment where parents and their children learn together important educational skills such as English as a Second Language and family education services, officials said.

The grant is one of many state and federally-funded grants dedicated to educational reform. Recipients of the grants are selected through a highly competitive process conducted by the state Board of Education.

"These grants are designed to provide essential support of hundreds of innovative programs across the Commonwealth," said Morrissey.

Quincy 2000 Looks Back At 1995, Ahead To 1996

By JOSEPH MANNARINO

The Quincy 2000 Corporation is the City of Quincy's public-private partnership for economic development. Its mission is to provide a multi-faceted economic development program that produces employment and business opportunities for the entire city.

Over the past year, membership in the corporation has grown by 30 percent. The growth and diversification of the partnership forged with government, labor, and small and large businesses requires a wide-ranging agenda and a comprehensive plan of action.

In looking back over the past year, there have been many successes and a few disappointments. The decision by Decelle not to open a store and the closing of Rite Aid, both in Quincy Center, were disappointing. Both having to do more with the overall financial make-up of these corporations rather than with the vitality of Quincy Center or in the health of the local and regional retail market.

There have been delays in securing a hotel development, and the shipyard revitalization has not taken form as quickly as planned. However, Quincy 2000 will continue to work with the city in making these projects a reality.

The accomplishments of 1995 included small business development from Quincy Center to North Quincy. The Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program provided the technical training and the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool provided the capital to purchase much-needed equipment and working capital for both start-up and existing businesses. Quincy 2000 has also contributed to the "Quincy means business" attitude that now exists in the city. A climate that has seen the office vacancy drop to approximately 6 percent and also the attraction of national and international companies like SAR Engineering and Quad Graphics to Quincy Center.

The corporation also has begun the planning process for the redevelopment of Quincy Center. A blueprint that will be produced for Quincy Center's future so that merchants, property owners and city officials can chart the progress over the next five to 15 years.

By far the greatest challenge of 1995 has been tackling the complex issues surrounding the Quincy Center redevelopment effort. The dramatic changes in retailing continue to re-shape the landscape of cities and towns across the country, including Quincy. The consolidation of corporations and the dramatic shift of large retail stores to regional malls and power centers, forces the traditional downtown retail center into a state of transition.

Quincy Center, because of the strong local market and the strength and diversity of the regional economy, has held up far better than many other cities across New England. The Center is becoming specialized with food and entertainment places as well as attracting the off-priced and discount stores such as T.J. Maxx, Maurice the Pants Man, No-body's Perfect, and Savers.

One of the largest challenges for planners of Quincy Center in the year ahead will be to better identify the type of Center that will provide a unique shopping environment and one that can't be easily duplicated by other local towns and cities. In re-designing Quincy Center, there must be elements of excitement, convenience, accessibility to parking, and a sense of safety for the visitor. Some of these elements currently exist, but others need to be developed or enhanced. All of these elements will be included in the comprehensive Quincy Center master development plan that is currently underway as part of a joint task force headed by the Quincy 2000 Corporation.

The longer-term strategies, such as improving accessibility to Quincy Center, require a number of components including the construction of the Concourse roadway project. Many of the short-term strategies, such as improving the appearance of the buildings, are now underway.

The Quincy 2000 Commercial Building Renovation Program was developed over the past summer and was kicked off in October. The program is one of the largest community-wide commercial building renovation efforts in New England. Over $300,000 in matching grants will be distributed to tenants and property owners in Quincy Center, Wollaston, and North Quincy over the next year. There has been a tremendous response by both tenants and landlords in participating in this reinvestment program.

The program is funded through the city's Community Development Block Grant Program (CDBG), which limits the expenditure of these funds to areas, delineated by the city and HUD, as Commercial Area Redevelopment Districts (CARD). Combined with the city's multi-million dollar public improvement projects for the improvement of the parking facilities, planting of street trees, construction of brick sidewalks, repaving of roadways, and placing of utilities underground, the Quincy 2000 building renovation program will make a difference in the appearance and vitality of the older core commercial areas of the city.

The first completed renovation project is Tony's House of Pizza at Hancock and Beale Sts. in Wollaston. The face-lift has made a significant, positive impact on the appearance of the area. The project included replacement of oversized and very bold signage, the cleanup of the brick facade, a fresh coat of paint, and the installation of an awning.

Some of Tony's neighbors are so impressed with the renovation project that they are now completing the applications to participate in renovating their store fronts. These applicants and others from around the community are designing their facade restoration plans and by all indications the entire allocation of funds could be spent in the year ahead.

Other successful Quincy 2000 programs of 1995 include the Loan Pool, the Sign Grant Program, and the Retail Incubation Program. In 1994, Quincy 2000 brought together 14 banks for the purpose of providing a pool of $5 million in start-up capital and loans for existing businesses in Quincy. The program has created home-grown businesses that occupy vacant commercial space throughout the city and it has assisted existing businesses in expanding their consumer products lines.

Of the approximate $700,000 loaned by the pool over the past year, over two-thirds of the funds have gone to new and existing businesses in Quincy Center such as Presidential Camera, Hancock Convenience, Infinity Books, and Sweet Jeanne's. The other loan pool recipients are scattered throughout the community and include Body Craft, Custom Fabrication, Ginger Betty's, and Purdy's Ice Cream. Despite the continued consolidation of the banking industry, the Loan Pool will continue as one of the most innovative small business capital funding programs in the Commonwealth.

The Sign Grant Program, which was established in 1993, is available to businesses in Quincy Center, Wollaston, and North Quincy to assist them with initial start-up costs. In two years, Quincy 2000 has provided over 50 businesses with grants of up to $1,000 for a new sign. The sign program provides an economic incentive for businesses to locate in Quincy as well as to better coordinate signage within the business districts. The continuation of this highly successful program is expected in 1996.

Another very successful program implemented over the past year has been the Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program. Essentially, the program provides training to potential entrepreneurs who are eager to open their own business in Quincy. The curriculum includes technical aspects of creating a business plan, how to choose a store location and the basics of customer relations and product marketing. Some of the many graduates over the past year have successfully applied to the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool, received capital, and are now occupying once-vacant commercial space throughout the city. The year ahead will include a more targeted incubation program that will provide technical assistance to micro-enterprises and employment generators, and a series of seminars geared to the small business owner.

The goals for the year ahead also include assisting the business districts that are not currently eligible for federal CDBG program funding; redevelopment of the Fore River shipyard, the vacant Patriot Ledger building, and the former Jordan Marsh warehouse; and the development of a Quincy Center hotel. Quincy 2000 will continue working alongside governmental agencies and corporations to make these projects a reality.

Some of these projects may now become more attractive to developers as a result of a financial incentive program now available to the city. In late 1994, Quincy 2000's application to the state for designation as an Economic Target Area was approved. One of only 20 other areas in the Commonwealth, Quincy can now offer some innovative financial incentives for particular development projects. Quincy 2000 will work closely with the city to certify eligible areas and projects for the year ahead.

In addition to the established programs, the Quincy 2000 Corporation will announce new programs that have been on the drafting table in 1995. The new programs in 1996 will include a comprehensive Tourism Program that provides visitors with a guide to the many events of the city, promotion and coordination of the various attractions, and inclusion of the business community into the whole tourism effort. Quincy 2000 will reach out further to promote job creation programs and to assist businesses in areas outside of the central business districts of Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy.

Also extremely important is the stabilization and growth of Quincy's industrial base. Further erosion of this vital business sector negatively impacts the diversification of the city's economy.

Lastly, Quincy 2000, along with the mayor's office, will develop a comprehensive marketing program for the promotion of the city.

The Plan of Action for 1996 is aggressive, but achievable. It must be comprehensive, innovative, and also flexible to meet the needs of the community and to provide for a healthy economy in the future. With limited resources, Quincy 2000 will need to strengthen its partnership with the other service and business organizations throughout the city to realize the goals and objectives of the Plan of Action. We look back at 1995 with a sense of pride, and we look forward to 1996 for the challenges that lie ahead.

Coughlin's 24 Points Not Enough North Boys Bow To Boston Latin, 57-47

Junior forward Tom Coughlin scored 24 points and collected nine rebounds to pace North Quincy, but accurate free throw shooting down the stretch lifted Boston Latin over the Red Raiders, 57-47, in the final of the North Quincy Holiday Tournament Saturday.

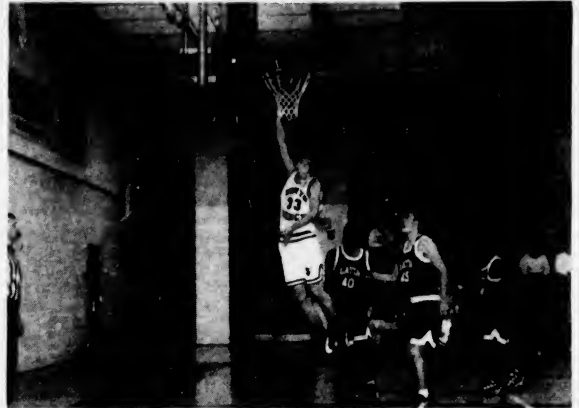

Late in the second half, with Latin ahead 45-43, North Quincy turned the ball over, leading to another Latin basket.

With the score 47-43, the Red Raiders were forced to send Latin to the foul line and make the visitors hit their free throws. In the final 1:30 of the game, Latin sunk 10 of 10 free throws to ice the victory and capture the title.

Senior guard Jim Rendle, who was named to the all-tournament team, added 15 points and six assists for North Quincy.

The Red Raiders advanced to the final with a 57-50 victory over St. John's Prep. Sophomore center Brian Ross led the way for the Raiders with 23 points and 15 rebounds. Rendle contributed 17 points and eight assists to the victory.

YOU AUTO KNOW by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty BETTER MAINTENANCE, CLEANER AIR

Many of the gains realized in making the air safer i.e. breathe in many localities are due to reduced emissions resulting from the Clean Air Act Amendments passed in 1990.

Those car owners who believe that they are contributing to cleaner air simply by virtue of driving newer cars may get an argument from those who drive older, well-maintained automobiles. According to a bus test of nearly 60,000 cars in a busy area near Los Angeles, new cars can pollute as badly as old cars. When "gross polluters" identified by on-road remote sensors were pulled over for an emissions control system inspection, it was found that maintenance was more important than age when determining the polluting effect of the car. The message in this is to change the oil on schedule, check and replace the various filters, inflate the tires properly and do not drive with worn spark plugs if you want clean air, regardless of your car's age.

HINT: Keeping your car properly maintained is all the more important if you regularly make trips under 10 miles because slower speeds translate into lower fuel efficiency and greater pollution.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO would like to remind you that the professionals here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) look forward to the challenge of giving your car the same level of personal attention they give their own. Whether you need to have an emission control system checked or reworked or more extensive repairs done, make us your first stop. NQ Girls Track Off, Running

The North Quincy High School girls indoor track team came out of the blocks in strong fashion as it opened the season with impressive wins over two Old Colony League opponents.

The Red Raiders began the season with an impressive 63-23 thrashing of Taunton and followed with a 62-29 victory over Plymouth South.

"Our superior depth was the major factors in the wins," said coach Geoff Hennessy, whose team is looking as strong as it has in several years.

The Red Raiders have a busy vacation week ahead. They were scheduled to take on Notre Dame and Fontbonne yesterday (Wednesday) at the Reggie Lewis center and they travel to Providence over the weekend to take part in the two-day Brown Invitational.

North Quincy's triumvirate of Jen Pineo, Kristy Deptula and Wingsze Yuen continued the domination of the shot put it displayed last year with a 1-2-3 sweep in the event against both opponents.

The Red Raiders also swept Taunton in the mile, behind the efforts of Colleen Cotter, Lauren Molloy and Vivian Chan, who placed 1-2-3, respectively; and in the dash, behind Casey Ngo, Kellie Johnston and Yuen.

Other first-place winners against the Tigers were Pineo (300), Carrie Jarvis (2 mile), Phyllis Poon (hurdles) and the 4x176 relay team of Ngo, Johnston, Pineo and Poon. Kelly Duggan and Dorothy Cronin controlled the 1,000 with second- and third-place finishes. Jasmine Gonzalez and Mary Sullivan captured the same two spots in the 600.

Sharon Lee placed second, just behind Pineo, in the 300, while Jennifer Campbell wrapped up the second-place spot in the 2-mile run.

Rounding out North Quincy's list of top-three placements were Suk Ng (hurdles) and Beth Crowley (high jump).

Winners in the meet against Plymouth South were Gonzalez (600), Pineo (300), Duggan (2 mile), Poon (hurdles), Ngo (dash) and Crowley (high jump).

The 4x200 relay team of Ngo, Gonzalez, Ng and Johnston also captured a No.1 finish.

Placing 2-3 in the mile were Cotter and Molloy while Erin Tormey and Campbell did the same in the 1,000.

Jarvis followed Duggan in the 2 mile, Ng was right behind Poon in the Hurdles and Johnston took second behind Ngo in the dash.

Sullivan was third in the 600.

The North Quincy girls also made a strong showing at the Brandeis Invitational, placing 10th out of 30 teams despite only entering four of 14 possible events.

Pineo and Deptula were third and fifth in the shot put; Ngo and Johnston were fifth and sixth in the dash; and Poon was fifth in the hurdles.

Crowley (high jump) and Ng (hurdles) also participated but just missed scoring.

Squirt C's Roll

The Quincy Squirt C team opened the District 3 playdowns with an impressive 6-2 win over Braintree.

Patrick Casper scored on the opening shift off a pass from Patrick Maxey. Tommy Walsh drove one home on the next shift, assisted by Ryan Feldoff. The two-goal lead was extended when Timmy Coughlin fired a long shot after Steve Summerling found him breaking out of the Quincy end.

With the score at 3-0 at the end of the first period, Braintree began to test goalie Matt Peters, whose outstanding netminding repeatedly turned back the attack. He had support from defenders Danny Durocher and Joe Norris.

Braintree got one in but the score was soon answered when Feldoff fired in off assists from linemates Kyle Carmody and Tommy Walsh. Patrick Maxey then scored for Quincy with assists from Linsey Langile and Casper. The second period ended with Quincy ahead 5-1 as defenders Steve Price and Summerling teamed with Peters to fend off a relentless Braintree attack.

In the third period, Steve Dunn and Tim Gleason pressed the play into the Braintree end, narrowly missing on several shots. Maxey scored his second goal of the game on a pass from Casper for Quincy's last goal mid-way through the period.

With less than a minute left Braintree managed another goal as goalie Peters began to show some wear and tear. Coach Frank Casper was thrilled with the hustling, aggressive play of the entire team although it was missing Andy McDonough, Mike Brewster and Gene Nazarro, who were on the injured reserve list with the flu.

The team now advances through the playdowns against the Mohawks.

North Quincy High School lists 592 students on its first quarter honor roll.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

For centuries, letters were a principal means of communication between people. Many letters of the past have found their way into literature, and the early forms of the modern novel were written in the form of letters to and from the principals in the story.

During World War II, Kate Smith, one of our country's greatest singers, urged folks on the homefront to write military people to help keep up their spirits during one of the worst wars in history. She made famous the statement: "If you don't write, you're wrong."

This statement still rings true today. Writing to people is a concrete way to touch them. There's something about a nice letter that continues to bless with the passing of years. A person can read a letter over and over again; meaningful phrases can be reread. Letters can be "tucked away" and be brought out when a person needs assurance; sometimes a feeling of togetherness; sometimes a feeling of love.

Wouldn't today be a good time to sit down and send a few thoughts to a friend or a relative?

Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., is seeking volunteers to assist with expanding programs and services, according to Sharron Beals, the community center's executive director.

"Our programs are diverse and intergenerational," she said. "Our Child Development Program offers care for infants, toddlers, pre-schoolers and after-school children. Elder Action offers a range of services, classes, social events and activities. The center also offers an impressive array of Adult Education and "Be-Fit" classes and courses.

"Volunteers are currently needed in many areas. We're looking for someone to lead a morning Book Review Group. We'd like someone to provide tips to 'wanna-be' cross-country skiers when snowfalls permit. Some would like to launch a chess club.

Volunteers with skills in arts and crafts are needed for the After School Program. Walking with a toddler, rocking a baby, reading to pre-schoolers, helping with the Elder Lunch program, and other volunteer opportunities are available.

Those interested should call Beals or Mary Centola, volunteer coordinator at 471-5712.

Water Samples Exceed State Lead Action Level

Water samples in Quincy have exceeded the Lead Action Level established by the Lead and Copper Rule of the Massachusetts Drinking Water Regulations, according to the city's Department of Public Works.

DPW Senior Water Services Inspector Brian Carlisle said test results from across the city indicate that some, but not all, homes have a high lead content. Those who have children in their homes are encouraged to have their water tested, he said, since long-term exposure to the problem can affect a child's mental development.

"As a parent, I would be concerned," said Carlisle.

The problem is generally caused by corrosion inside of pipes, he added.

Carlisle said the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is currently going through going through a state process in order to begin a new program called Corrosion Control which should take care of the problem in the long run.

He quickly added, however, that people can avoid the problem in the meantime simply by running water from faucets until it is cold before drinking it, and avoiding the use of hot water for cooking purposes. Cold water can be boiled for cooking, he said.

"It's a serious problem, but it's easily remedied," he stressed.

As a result of the high lead levels, the city is required to conduct a Lead Public Education Program.

The city failed to conduct the program in 1994, as required by the state's drinking water regulations. Carlisle said the program was conducted in 1993 and 1995, but he is unsure why it was not done in 1994.

The Lead Public Information Program involves distributing information that explains the health effects of lead and the steps that the consumer can take to reduce exposure to lead in drinking water through the following avenues:

- Information sent to all consumers in each water utility bill.

- The editorial departments of major daily or weekly newspapers.

- Public schools and/or school boards, the city health department, programs targeting women, infants, and children such as Head Start program(s) whenever available; public and private hospitals and/or clinics, pediatricians, family planning clinics, and local welfare agencies.

• At least five radio and television stations with the largest audiences that broadcast to Quincy through public service announcements.

Carlisle said the DPW can, by request, test the water at residential homes. Citizens are also encouraged to purchase a home testing kit at the DPW or at a state-certified laboratory, he added.

For more information on having water tested, learning ways to reduce exposure to lead drinking water or finding out about the problem in general, contact the Quincy DPW, 55 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169 or call 376-1911.

Tax Returns By Telephone

Thousands of taxpayers in Quincy and across the state who enjoy the convenience of shopping by phone will soon also be able to file their federal income taxes by making a telephone call.

The Internal Revenue Service's file-by-phone program will expand nationwide in 1996. Also, like shopping and banking by phone, TeleFile will said Francine Crowley, IRS district director, as she recently announced the expansion and improvements in the program.

"TeleFile will not only save taxpayers time and now be totally paperless.

About 200,000 Massachusetts taxpayers who now use the federal 1040EZ form will be able to use a touch-tone telephone instead. The taxpayers will end their call by using a Personal Identification Number that will substitute for the signature required on paper returns.

"Filing taxes doesn't get any easier than this."

It Wasn't Like '78 But:

Blizzard Of '96 Leaves Own Mark

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Tuesday's nor-easter paled in comparison to the Blizzard of 1978 but the snowstorm created its fair share of obstacles and problems well after the last snowflake had fallen.

Financially, the Blizzard of 1996 further strained an all-ready depleted snow removal budget. Public Works Commissioner David Colton said storm will cost at least $275,000, bringing the season's total to more than $650,000.

Mayor James Sheets said additional snow removal efforts would take place if need be and money on future storm costs would come from free cash.

Sheets also praised the Department of Public Works and others who battled Monday's blizzard. "I think we've done an exceptionally good job," Sheets said shortly after surveying the condition of city streets Tuesday.

About 20 inches of snow fell in the city between 6 p.m. Sunday and 9 p.m. Monday, slowing traffic, closing schools and creating ghost towns in the retail districts. That heavy snowfall, coupled with the other snow which has fallen this season, is hampering snow removal efforts, Colton said.

"Streets are getting narrower. The sidewalks, bus routes and crossing guard locations are covered with snow. You can only pile (the snow) so high before it slides back down into the street," a weary Colton said.

The snow coverage, which ranges three to six feet locally, has "made everything more difficult," Colton said.

To date, 52 inches of snow has fallen this season. More was forecasted Wednesday and this weekend. Colton said the snowy winter has set one record and could set another.

"This is the most snow we've ever had on the ground at any one time," Colton said. Moreover, January, February and March average approximately 40 inches of snow annually.

"If we have a normal winter in terms of snowfall the rest of the winter, we'll be up to around 90 inches. The record is 92," Colton said.

Public schools were closed Monday and Tuesday because of the storm. A decision to reopen the schools would be made by Supt. Eugene Creedon. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday but Colton said the schools probably

Snow Emergency Still In Effect

Quincy's snow emergency, declared on Sunday at 5 p.m., was to remain in effect until at least 5 p.m. today (Thursday) to help the city's snow removal effort.

"The snow emergency was extended to keep as many cars off the streets as possible. We have to clear sidewalks and many roads are narrow," Public Works Commissioner David Colton said.

The snow emergency means parking is prohibited on main streets and allowed only on the odd-numbered side of secondary streets.

Also, a resident parking permit is required to park a vehicle, for two hours or longer, between the hours of

1 and 7 a.m. Such a permit does not allow parking in violation of any other rule or regulation. Permits, valid for one year from the date of issue, are available through the police department and

What You Can Do To Help Situation

With an unprecedented amount of snow on the ground, the city is asking property owners to help Quincy dig out from Monday's blizzard.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton is calling on residents to dig out fire hydrants and to shovel sidewalks in front of their homes in the interest of public safety.

"The city has 2,500 fire hydrants and the fire department, which has been digging them out, cannot get to all of them. If you have one near your home, please dig it out before it freezes. It's really for the public's own protection," Colton said.

People can also help by clearing sidewalks.

Motorists are also asked to pay special attention on the roads by driving slower than the posted speeds. Oversized snowbanks can hinder visibility and put children and others in danger.

Anyone with questions concerning residential street plowing can call the DPW at 376-1943.

It Was Tame Compared To Blizzard Of '78

The Blizzard of '96 had its moments of fury but overall it was pretty tame compared to the blockbuster Blizzard of '78.

The 1978 northeast storm which brought the city to a virtual standstill for almost a week, went down in the books as the most furious storm in New England recorded weather history.

In some ways, it was like a winter hurricane with winds that gusted up to 90 miles per hour and dumped between 26 and 27 inches of snow.

It was the heaviest snowfall for the region since the Boston Weather Bureau began keeping records in 1870.

High tides surged five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum. Several hundred people had to be evacuated.

Fifteen hundred customers were without power during part of the storm.

The MBTA Red Line between Quincy Center and Andrews Station ceased to operate during the height of the storm which piled 18-foot high snowdrifts across the tracks. The drifts were finally cleared the next day by an army of 200 shovelers.

All vehicles except those on emergency missions were banned from the streets by Gov. Michael Dukakis's state of emergency declaration.

There was some looting in the city but unfortunately no fires as most of the side streets were impassable for three days.

Quincy Schools To Receive $70,000

State Rep. and new School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano announces that the Quincy Public Schools will receive over $70,000 through educational reform competitive grant awards.

Mariano said the grants were given to the Quincy Public Schools through a competitive process as a result of limited funding at the federal level. In addition to those funds, he added, the system also receives substantial funding through Chapter 70 aid which represents the dollars provided to school districts through the Foundation Budget formula of the Education Reform Act of 1993 and additional state and federal funds such as Title I, School Building Assistance and non-competitive "entitlement" grants.

"As a former teacher in this system, I am very pleased to announce that Quincy will receive these funds," he said. "Through the leadership of Supt. Gene Creedon and the dedication of its faculty and staff, the Quincy Public Schools have always provided a first-rate system.

"It is my hope that additional funding such as this will continue to allow the system to develop innovative programs that encourage and foster learning and development of all our students."

Mariano noted that the total award of $70,389 is comprised of four individual grants: McKinney Grant for educating homeless children, $27,690; Education Reform restructuring of schools (school-college partnerships), $10,000; Education Reform restructuring of schools ("High Schools That Work" programs), $25,000; teen dating violence prevention, $7,699.

"As 1996 begins, these funds will provide wonderful opportunities for our system as a whole," said Mariano. "It is my hope that 1996 will be yet another great year in the history of education in Quincy."

GOOD NEWS ABOUT LUMPECTOMY

A diagnosis of breast cancer used to be an almost automatic prescription for radical mastectomy. Then came the lumpectomy, removal of a tumor without taking large amounts of surrounding tissue, and women were elated to learn that cancer could be treated successfully without disfiguring surgery. However, survival rates of lumpectomy patients were questioned by researchers last year, and many women with breast cancer were faced with an agonizingly unclear choice between lumpectomy or more drastic mastectomy. Now the National Cancer Institute reports that, based on worldwide studies, the survival rates for lumpectomy patients with follow-up radiation can be as good as for those who undergo radical surgery.

P.S. Every individual case is different. Get all the information you can and then talk things over with your doctor.

Many treatment options are available today for breast cancer, so it is best for women with this condition to ask many questions about which treatment might best suit their long and short term interests. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Remembering 'The Pony'

Don MacDonald, who did his best to teach me something about problems of democracy at Quincy High School some...ah...er...years ago, has been jotting down memories of his 38 years as a teacher in Quincy.

One is of "The Pony," which took its place of honor when the present Quincy High School building opened in 1924 and became the symbol of the school.

Down through the years, "The Pony," a favorite meeting place for students, has seen all, heard all, and could be counted on keeping it all confidential.

Life, down through the years, hasn't been all that easy for "The Pony" which, among other things, has survived kidnappings, (or is that ponynapping?) other pranks and various degrees of damage.

Anyway, if you are a present or former Quincy High School, you might smile at MacDonald's reminiscing. Here goes:

"In 1924, when the present Quincy High School building had its grand opening, a reproduction of Cyrus Dullin's "Appeal to the Great Spirit" adorned the foyer of the building's main entrances. This, of course, is a copy of the original found at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

"As the years passed, the sculpture became the symbol of the school. Students would agree to meet each other after school "at the Pony." The student newspaper was called "The Pony Express."

"On rare occasions, the statue would disappear for awhile, the victim of some students' prank.

"On one occasion, some adventuress (school basketball players was the story I got, years later) students removed it and kept it hidden for some time.

"In addition, they replaced it with a very nervous live horse (borrowed without the owner's permission) which manifest its nervous condition by depositing its "calling card" on the floor.

"You can well imagine the conditions that thrust themselves on the unsuspecting custodian as he opened the school the following morning.

"At the time of the June, 1962 retirement party for Principal George (Gus) Wilson and Leland (Andy) Anderson, assistant principal, "The Pony" was again missing from its stall undergoing repair as a result of another abduction.

"This situation inspired teacher Warren Findlay, to present the following parody, to be sung to the music of Yankee Doodle Dandy:

"Quincy High had a horse t'was nothing but a pony.

"George learned one morning of its loss by message telephony.

"All the students want it back in the hall so handy

"That's a job, alas, alack for good old Gus and Andy.
"It is a symbol on our ring.
"It looks right pert and toney
"Don't leave the job for Eddie King"
"He'd just say, 'Aw, baloney.'
"Get the pony in his stall with his rider dandy
"Time you both got on the ball
"So...gid'yup, Gus and Andy.
"Some boys once brought a substitute and built a little hovel to house the mammoth equine brute but overlooked the shovel.
"Get the pony in its space and we'll feed it candy.
"Nothing else can take its place—
"not even Gus and Andy!
>(*Eddie King was the incoming principal.)

SPEAKING OF QUINCY High School and memories, Peter Kolson found himself with one when he took his oath as City Council President at last week's inaugural ceremonies.

Kolson was standing on the stage in the new auditorium but it was the exact spot he stood in the old auditorium as a student in 1963 at Memorial Day exercises and spoke in tribute to George Underwood, Jr. who was killed in Vietnam in 1962.
"As I stood there, I found myself thinking of that day and of George," Kolson says.

KOLSON

RABBI JACOB MANN of Beth Israel Synagogue, who gave the invocation at Mayor James Sheets' inaugural last week, probably has seen more Quincy mayors inaugurated than anyone else in Quincy today.

MANN

He goes back to Mayor Charles Ross's terms in the 1940's and includes Mayors Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Frank McCauley and Sheets. Eight mayors in all.

The Rabbi drew a chuckle when he observed that Sheets has been given "nine wisemen," (the City Council) to "help or not help."

OBSERVATION via the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter (and from wherever they got it: "It's a strange world of language in which skating on thin ice can get you into hot water."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1923 POSTCARD view of the old Masonic Temple building on Beale St. in Wollaston. Later it became the home of the Wollaston Post of the American Legion. The site, located across from Barry's Deli, is now the location of a branch of the Fleet Bank. Notice the Wollaston Theater had not yet been built, the Coca Cola sign was painted on the side of Klein's drug store, it is probably still there.

Don't Give Up Your Freedom Of Choice For A Few Dollars

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It used to mean something to provide a quality service, especially in the medical field. In the past, you went to the family doctor that your parents and their parents went to. You chose him because you knew him, he knew you and he was always there when you needed him.

Now, in the age of managed care and HMOs, you go to the nearest doctor who is in your plan. You may not even see your primary care physician (PCP) but rather his associate or a nurse practitioner, and they may not know you. If you need a specialist, you have even less choice or who you'll see. The specialty providers are generally more restricted than the PCPs.

HMOs are desirable because they appear to offer a comprehensive package at reasonable rates. However, what they do is offer limited services by a restricted number of providers. The providers are usually chosen by their size and negotiating power and not by the quality of services that they provide. The networks are then closed to other providers.

The small private practice that makes the extra effort to provide the care you would choose for its quality cannot compete with these large corporations and are literally being pushed out of business.

If the insurance companies are only going to pay a set fee for a given service, I don't understand how an insurance company that is acting on the consumer's behalf can refuse participation to providers willing to accept their fees. Competition promotes excellence and the competition for high quality health care is systematically being dissolved. As a greater number of smaller private practices are being strangled out of these networks, only the larger, less personal clinics are surviving.

It the consumer that loses. All of us are faced Revaluation Figures Finally Released

By PAUL HAROLD

Cole, Layer and Trumble, the company hired to reassess the city, ended a long deadlock with Mayor James McIntyre and Board of Assessors, by releasing valuations on properties in wards 1, 5 and 6. The surprise move ended a five-month stalemate with the city.

The company had refused to release its report on the three wards as a way to force the city to make the final payment of $60,000 on its $190,000 contract. Mayor McIntyre had withheld the last payment until the assessors had time to check the appraisal firm's work.

Chief Assessor William Callahan had intervened with the company, noting that state aid to schools could be held up without the new valuations.

CHIEF FINN TO ENFORCE SNOW ORDINANCE

Police Chief Francis Finn called for strict enforcement of the city ordinance requiring homeowners and businesses to clear their sidewalks within five hours after the end of a storm. Legal action could result in a $20 fine.

Stricter enforcement came as the result of complaints that school children, especially elementary school students, were forced to walk in the streets to get to school.

Mayor McIntyre said it was the property owner's responsibility to clear sidewalks and that the city had no obligation to do so.

FEDERAL GRANT AIDS PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Congressman James Burke announced a grant for $71,000 for major beautification improvements to Merrymount Park, Black's Creek and the Hancock Cemetery.

Richard Koch, director of the park department, said the funds would provide for the construction of new football and soccer practice fields at Merrymount Park and the extension of Adams Field.

The city matched the grant with $15,000.

Quincy Municipal Credit Union Donates $3,000 To Hospital Foundation

The Quincy Municipal Credit Union recently contributed $3,000 to the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation in support of the newborn nursery and the Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women at Quincy Hospital.

The new nursery at Quincy Hospital opened last September. It is staffed by a Board certified neonatologist and neonatal nurse practitioner who provide specialized care for premature or ill infants. The new nursery includes state-of-the-art monitoring equipment and other medical technology in a warm and nurturing environment.

The nursery provides 24-hour neonatal coverage for babies who might previously have had to be transferred into tertiary care institutions in Boston. It is also considered an ideal setting for babies who were originally in a neonatal intensive care nursery at a tertiary care institution and are ready to transfer to a community hospital near their homes for growth and monitoring.

The Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women will open this spring. The Fireman Center is designed to ensure the comfort and privacy of women needing imaging services. It will utilize up-to-date mammography and ultrasound equipment and have a designated room for teaching women about self-breast examination and the early detection of breast cancer. The Fireman Center will also provide important prenatal imaging and diagnostic services.

Contributions such as this one from the Quincy Municipal Credit Union are an important source of support and enhance Quincy Hospital's ability to provide quality care for our community.

QUINCY MUNICIPAL CREDIT Union recently contributed $3,000 to the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation in support of the new nursery and the Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women at Quincy Hospital. Joint Meeting For Two Concourse Committees

The two committees involved in planning for the Quincy Center Concourse will hold a joint meeting today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) is composed of Quincy residents appointed by Mayor James Sheets. Members represent city government, business and residential property owners and senior citizens advocacy.

The Quincy Center Concourse Project Task Force is comprised of city officials, private business interests, traffic control specialists, and engineering consultants.

The CAC has been for the past two years and approved the concept of linking Burgin Parkway with Hancock Street. It also approved the concept of having the $5.6 million concourse connect with both the east and west sides of Hancock Street in the area of the now-vacant Kincaide lot in the downtown business district.

Last November, the City Council voted 8-1 to approve an appropriation of $400,000 requested by Sheets to proceed with preliminary plans. Officials said the money will be used to prepare an environmental impact report and road design and engineering details of the concourse.

The two committees will now consider more of the specific details involved in possible landtakings and the route to be followed in the east-west roadway engineering designs.

Serving on the CAC are: David Ezickson, chairman; Arline Goodman, James Hession, John Keenan, Kathy Missell, John Noonan, Bernard Reisberg, Charles Ryder and Mary Smith.

Task Force Committee members include: DPW Commissioner David Colton, chairman; Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino, Traffic

the mayor; George White, and representatives from Whitman & Howard, engineering consultants.

wouldn't reopen until after the sidewalks, bus routes and crossing locations were cleared. That was not expected until Friday at the earliest.

Colton said clearing miles of sidewalks, the 21 school crossing guard locations and the city's 50 school bus stops was a top priority Tuesday.

"We're going to try to get all the sidewalk routes done. It's going to take more time than usually. I think by Friday we'll be at the point where we normally are after a snowstorm."

After the sidewalks, crossing guard locations and bus routes are cleared, Colton said snow removal would shift to the business districts. He said he hoped that would start early next week.

But, that schedule would certainly change if Old Man Winter packs another punch.

"If we get another storm, we'll wait until after the storm passes. You don't want to duplicate efforts and keep the men out all night."

Approximately 100 pieces of equipment were pressed into service during the storm. Most of the 160 DPW employees and private sub-contractors worked 20-hour shifts Sunday and Monday plowing, salting and sanding the city's 250 miles of streets. About a half dozen Sewer, Water and Drain department employees worked 36 hours straight from 8 p.m. Sunday to 8 a.m. Tuesday. Besides plowing, the workers repaired three watermain breaks in that span: two on Newport Ave. near Brook St. and another on Macy St.

About 500,000 tons of salt were applied to Quincy streets. Colton said an equal amount of sand will also be spread in the coming days to make roads, especially secondary streets, more accessible and passable.

Colton, who has worked for the Quincy DPW for 13 years, including commissioner since 1989, said Monday's storm ranks among the all-time worst.

"I think Monday's storm was one of the worst I've seen in terms of snowstorms because of how much snow we got and how much we had on the ground before the storm," Colton said. Twelve inches had fallen on Quincy only a few days before the blizzard.

"The biggest problem was the length of the storm and the amount of snow we got. It started snowing around 6 p.m. Sunday and didn't stop until Monday around 8 to 9 p.m. That's 27 hours it's snowing.

"As long as it's snowing," Colton continued, "we have to be out there plowing the main roads and keeping them clear. You can't wait until it stops—you have to keep on top of it.

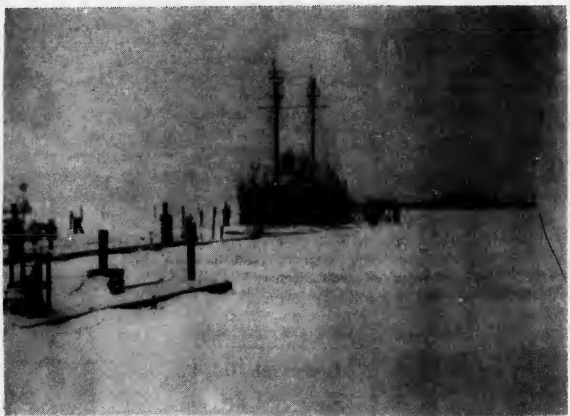

"Keeping on top of the snow falling for 27 hours was the biggest obstacle."

RESERVOIR RD. ON Forbes Hill took on an all-winter look Monday afternoon during the storm.

IT WAS BLOWING hard along the East Squantum St. causeway to Squantum Monday morning.

THE LIGHTSHIP NANTUCKET is all snowed and iced in at Marina Bay Monday.

THE SQUANTUM YACHT Club holds its ground as high tide approaches Monday.

IT WAS PRETTY as a picture—two pictures in fact—after the storm bid farewell to Quincy. Shown here Tuesday morning are a view across Town River looking from Quincy Point and Avalon Ave. following plowing.

cost $10.

There are streets in the city where parking is restricted to one side of the street by posted signs. On those streets, the signs will be obeyed and the odd/even rule will not apply.

Any vehicle left on a street which obstructs snow removal equipment may be towed by the chief of police or the commissioner of public works.

A decision to lift or extend the snow emergency will be made today (Thursday), Colton said.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Appraisals And Inspections

Q. In relation to selling a home, what is the difference between an appraisal and an inspection?

A. Real estate appraisals and home inspections are two different services that are typically involved in a home sale. The appraisal process includes a documented opinion of a property's value and marketability. A state-licensed or state-certified appraiser is a knowledgeable professional who evaluates the worth of the property based on its intended use.

A home inspection, on the other hand, involves a professional evaluation of the condition of the structural components of a home. In addition, the inspector will also evaluate the mechanical components, electrical system, plumbing, etc. Dues to the hands-on testing, an inspector may find mechanical defects with the home that an appraiser may not.

Ways To Avoid The Winter Selling Blues

By CATHY LONGLEY

Blustery cold weather and hectic holiday obligations can often discourage buyers from looking for a new home during the winter months.

Winter buyer hesitations usually prompt concern among sellers that their homes may stay on the market longer than anticipated.

To attempt more prospective winter buyers this year, enhance your home's "curb appeal." For example, if your home has been on the market for more than half a year, it may be the right time to alter your sales marketing strategy. Consult your real estate sales associate and ask how you can produce more buyer activity for your home.

Revisit the current listing price and determine if it is too high for the current market. Discuss with your sales associate your past marketing plan and what type of marketing plan you can anticipate for the future. Request a specific outline of where your home has been marketed and where it will soon be featured. Effective marketing exceeds newspaper advertising and inclusion in the Multiple Listing Service (MLS); a qualified sales associate will utilize many different methods to get your home sold.

Contact the office manager if your current sales associate is not marketing your home sufficiently or keeping you updated on the buyer activity that your home has experienced. A manager's role is to offer sales associates the resources needed to satisfy customers. If you are experiencing challenges with your home sale process or your sales associate, it is beneficial for all parties involved if the manager is made aware of such customer concerns.

Be sure that your current asking price is comparable to other homes sold in winter months. Home priced in accordance with comparable properties that sold during peak seasons may be too high for the present market and may not sell as quickly.

After a realistic sale price has been established, take time to beautify your home as much as possible. By opening curtains and lifting shades, your home will look brighter and more colorful. It is also recommended that you showcase spring and summer photos of your home and grounds so that prospective buyers get a feel for your property during peak months. Photos of perennials, landscaping or trees in bloom can really motivate buyers to purchase your home.

Attention to winter maintenance will certainly work in your favor. By raking leaves, removing fallen branches, shoveling walkways and keeping a clutter-free driveway, your home will show better. Check your furnace to see that it is up to par and relatively quiet, and keep the temperature of your home at a comfortable level. Your basement should be dry and draft-free.

Avoid decorating your home with holiday knickknacks; the buyer should get a sense of the home and the space available in its everyday condition.

Many buyers request a septic tank inspection of an underground oil tank. Avoid delays towards closing by getting these professional evaluations done before the mid-winter months when the ground is often rock solid. Advance planning will enable you to avoid delays later on.

Tour your home as if you were the prospective buyer. Begin in the basement and work your way up. By doing this, you will see cluttered sections and areas that may require repairs.

Making the interior and exterior of your home bright, clean and clutter-free will prove to be beneficial during all seasons. Follow these guidelines 12 months of the year--and most importantly, during the dreary winter months--and you will garner more attention from buyers.

Bellotti Supports Reduction In College, University Tuitions

State Rep. Michael Bellotti has voiced support of the state's Higher Education Coordinating Council's proposal recommending a five percent reduction in tuition at state colleges and universities.

The proposal follows numerous years of rising tuition costs and mandatory fees to compensate for decreasing state appropriations.

In concurrence with Chairman James Carlin of the Higher Education Council, Bellotti said tuition costs at state colleges and universities are too expensive. As a result of spiraling tuition costs and mandatory fees, higher education has been placed out of reach or become a financial burden for many families statewide, he said.

"Access is the key to providing higher education at the state level," said Bellotti. "Though state colleges and universities provide a tremendously valuable service, they have become increasingly inaccessible to many middle and working-class families. The Higher Education Coordinating Council's proposal will contribute toward re-opening the doors of higher education."

Bellotti added that while he supports efforts to reduce the costs of attending state college and universities, however, he is equally committed to maintaining the quality of education being offered at state institutions.

C-SPAN SATELLITE TRANSMISSION truck was towed by Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano and his crew because of frigid weather conditions Saturday night. The diesel-powered vehicle would not start because of the cold.

Cold Weather Cuts C-SPAN Program Short

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Freezing temperatures created problems with a live C-SPAN broadcast in Quincy Center Saturday night, causing a special program by the cable television network to be cut short.

The C-SPAN program "Washington Journal" featured Quincy as part of a series on "presidential cities." The show also featured a live broadcast from Adams, Ill. prior to the Quincy segment.

Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano said the wind chill factor Saturday was 25 degrees below zero and caused problems with C-SPAN's diesel-powered satellite truck which he noted is "a $1 million piece of equipment." Emergency Management personnel towed the truck from the Adams Inn in North Quincy to United First Parish Church in Quincy Center where the broadcast took place.

Siciliano added that the cold also caused problems with the truck's generator and members of the Army National Guard in Quincy came to the rescue with a generator of their own. He also noted that the freezing temperatures were so bad, the locks on the truck had to be cut so that the vehicle could be opened.

Siciliano praised the efforts of the National Guard personnel as well as three members of Emergency Management's Incident Command System Team who also assisted during the event: Thomas McGrath, Stephanie Szabo and James Timcoe. Emergency Management set up a command post with refreshments at the site, he added.

Bill McColgan, program director of Continental Cablevision in Quincy, said the end result was a Quincy broadcast that lasted about 15 minutes due to the cold weather. Originally, the segment was to run from 8:30 to 10 p.m.

McColgan said C-SPAN was still able to conduct an interview with Mayor James Sheets--which featured pre-packaged shots of various Quincy sites while the mayor spoke--as well as shots of the inside of First Parish including the crypts of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their First Ladies.

An interview with Dr. Sheldon Bennett, First Parish minister, had to be canceled because of the unanticipated time constraints.

"It's a little disappointing, but overall it went well," said McColgan. "We were happy to bring them here. It was still a great opportunity to showcase the City of Quincy."

Three local high school students who were to be interviewed during the show--Jill Fishman of Quincy High and Amy Laplume and Terrence Roche of North Quincy High--will be featured on a future C-SPAN program as well as a regional program produced by Continental Cablevision, according to McColgan.

Asked about the shortened program, Sheets expressed sentiments similar to McColgan's.

"I was absolutely disappointed, particularly for the young people who were supposed to go on," he said. "I would have liked more time. But I was pleased with what was broadcast."

'Tot Time' Program Registration Starts Friday

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces the Quincy Recreation Department will begin registration Friday for "Tot Time", a program for preschool age youngsters and their parents.

A parent and tot recreation program for children age 3 through 5 years, it will feature one and a half hours of supervised play, one day a week, in the Ward 4 Community Center at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center.

"This program is designed to provide an opportunity for increased socialization among parents and children through games and activities conducted by recreation staff," Welch said. "The department has received many requests for this type of activity particularly during the inclement weather of the winter months."

Welch thanked the Ward 4 Civic Association for its assistance in organizing this activity, which is open to all Quincy residents.

The program will cost $20 for a 10-week period and will be held on Fridays from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Enrollment will be limited and taken on a first come, first serve basis. Registration will be at the main office of the Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery.

The program will start Friday, Jan. 19. For more information, call 376-1394.

Quincy Girls Get In Win Column, 62-30

The Quincy High School girls basketball team won its first game of the year, blowing out Plymouth South, 62-30, in Old Colony League play.

Kerri Connolly led Quincy (1-6) with 17 points, six rebounds and four steals. Angela Hogrell added nine points and nine rebounds for the host Presidents, while Erin Barry contributed eight points and eight rebounds.

Jen DeCost led Plymouth South (0-7) with eight points.

The Presidents traveled to Barnstable Tuesday, host Taunton Friday at 7 p.m., and visit North Quincy next Tuesday at 7 p.m.

North Boys Host Powerful Milton Friday

Coming off a 76-46 loss at the hands of Barnstable last week, the North Quincy High School boys basketball team must rebound quickly, because a powerful Milton squad pays the Raiders a visit Friday at 7 p.m.

The Raiders' game against Old Colony League foe Taunton Tuesday night was postponed due to the blizzard.

On Saturday against Barnstable, Brian Ross led North with 18 points and Jim Rendle added 13.

North (1-3 in OCL, 2-4 overall) was missing starters Tom Coughlin and Mike Doyle due to illness, though coach Ted Stevenson said both are healthy and will be ready to play Friday night.

"Against Milton, we're going to need everybody to play well if we're going to have a chance to win," Stevenson said. "I saw them beat Southie, so I know we have our work cut out for us."

"They're a super, super team, so we have to come ready to play and not make any mistakes. We have to shoot well and take away their inside game."

Led by seniors Lamar Reddicks, Bob DeLaCruz,

Lavar White and Earl Pemberton, Milton toppled undefeated South Boston two weeks ago and is considered one of the stronger teams in Eastern Massachusetts.

"Reddicks is as good a player as you'll see around here," Stevenson said.

"We'll definitely have our hands full dealing with him. I think we have the height to contend with their inside game, but it's going to be tough to stop. They've also been able to dominate on the boards, so we can't allow any second opportunities. If we do all the right things, then we'll win. If we don't, we won't. It's as simple as that."

Stevenson added that Milton's defense has been nearly impenetrable this season, as it has held all of its opponents (except South Boston) under 36 points a game.

Beginning with the game against Milton, North plays seven games in 12 games against strong Old Colony League opponents Silver Lake, Plymouth South, Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham.

Mite A's Win Twice To Begin New Year

The Quincy Mite A's began the new year with impressive one-goal victories over Westwood and the Belmont Mite A's.

In a 3-2 win over Westwood, Kevin Richardson scored twice with assists from Brendan Linnane and Myles Clancy. Andy Patten added an unassisted goal as he carried the puck the length of the ice and beat the Westwood netminder.

Dave Orente, Paul Lennon and Mike McKeon all turned in strong performances on offense, keeping the Westwood goalkeeper busy the entire game.

Forward Matt Haskins helped keep the puck in the Westwood end, and defenseman Billy Jones stopped the Westwood forwards when they entered the Quincy zone. Quincy goalkeeper Pat Maloney played well, preventing Westwood from tying the game in the final period.

Kevin Richardson's goal in the third period lifted Quincy to a 2-1 win over Belmont. The goal was assisted by Mark Lewis and Matt Haskins. Lewis scored Quincy's first goal in the second period, assisted by Haskins and Billy Jones.

Also playing well offensively for Quincy were Danny Reginnini, Paul McLean, Dave Orente and Alex Shaffer, who kept the pressure in the Belmont zone throughout the game.

Defensively, Brendan Linnane, Myles Clancy, Andy Patten and Billy Jones kept the puck out of the Quincy zone and goalkeeper Pat Maloney turned away all but one of Belmont's shots.

North Freshman Girls Top Latin, Barnstable

Following consecutive poor offensive showings, North Quincy High School's freshman girls basketball team Raiders regained their shooting touch and recorded victories over Braintree, Latin Academy and Barnstable.

Under coach Doug MacFarland, back to back home victories last weekend raised North's record to 4-2.

North Quincy's Kim Huerth scored eight first-half points to give the Raiders a 20-10 halftime lead en route to a 35-16 win over Latin Academy.

In the second half, North was led by Sara Kiley, who scored six points. Rachel O'Hara (three blocks) and Diedre Jacobs keyed the low post defense which held the visitors to five field goals.

In their next game, the Raiders' defense held Barnstable scoreless for the first six minutes of the game as North opened up a 19-4 halftime lead.

Eleven players tallied for North, led by Rachael Powers with seven points. Kate Lavery added six and Ashley Crawford and Lauren Luzzo scored four points each as the Raiders coasted to a 36-18 win.

Thousand Buddha Temple Opens In Quincy Point

The Massachusetts Buddhi Siska Society recently held an open house for its new Thousand Buddha Temple at 53 Mass. Ave. in Quincy Point.

The temple is located at the site of the former Montello's function hall. It is the society's first official temple outside the Boston area.

City officials in attendance included Mayor James Sheets, City Councillors Timothy Cahill, Michael Cheney and Paul Harold; Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, former Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, Police Chief Francis Mullen, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey.

Others at the event included Dr. Sheldon Bennett of United First Parish Church, Fr. Daniel Graham of St. Joseph's Church, Rev. Adolph Wismar of Wollaston Lutheran Church, Iman Talal Edid of the Islamic Center of New England and Joseph Finn, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition/Father Bill's Place, who was accompanied by members of his family.

In all, more than 100 community members braved the cold weather to visit the newly-renovated temple and to enjoy a Buddhist vegetarian brunch.

"The organization did an excellent job transforming a run-down function hall to a new temple," said Sheets. "Quincy is very pleased to welcome this opening."

"I am glad to see the new location as the former site (34 Buckingham Rd. in Wollaston) was not appropriate for nearby residents," said Cheney. "The parking problem has been alleviated with new spaces paved in."

The temple houses two large prayer halls with room for 100 to 200 participants, a library, a reception room and living quarters for 100 to 200 participants.

Mark Donovan Creates Navy Ice Sculptures

Mark Donovan, son of Charles and Edith Donovan of Quincy, recently was commissioned by the U.S. Navy to sculpt ice at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, for the 50th anniversary of V-J Day.

Donovan produced 10 multiblock sculptures including commemorative logos, eagles and three air-peace replicas: B-25, P-51 and F-14.

Three of the finished sculptures were displayed in a wardroom reception attended by President and Mrs. Clinton, Leon Pannella and 30 other dignitaries. The remaining sculptures were displayed in the hangar bay for a dinner dance held for 2,000 World War II veterans and their families.

Another of Donovan's ice sculptures, an award-winning depiction of a gold mining scene he created in Alaska in 1994 with two colleagues, made the front cover of the November issue of Alaska Magazine.

A Thought For The Week

The Golden Rule is only meaningful if we apply it in all our interactions with other people.

In our busy and hectic way of living there are times in everyone's life that we may not understand why people do what they do.

There are times in our lives when we become upset about family, work or health challenges. We become impatient with others at these times. Couldn't it be said that these are the times when we should especially try to use the Golden Rule so that we do not take out our frustration on others? ...

In applying the Golden Rule as a guide to living and working in harmony with another, we are giving others the understanding and kindness that each of us wish to receive.

"Whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them." Matthew 7:12

"It's a good system," he said. "This system seemed to be the most efficient way of approaching it. And we're pleased we have a substantial amount of money for the reimbursement."

The overbilling problem was first discovered by Quincy Atty. Daniel Raymondi when he found out two of his clients had been overbilled. Sheets noted that it took between six and eight weeks to establish the reimbursement system, which was set up through the city solicitor's office.

be entitled to have their Norfolk-Bristol account credited. Only emergency ambulance service bills are affected.

Residents who had no medical insurance when the service was used, or residents who were entitled to free medical care when the service was used, should not have been charged for emergency ambulance services. No Quincy resident should have been billed more than the Medicare or private insurance-prescribed rate for services.

Those who believe they have been overcharged are encouraged to apply for a refund. Walk-in account reviews will be held, by request, in the solicitor's office at City Hall between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

In addition, requests will be taken Thursday, Jan. 25 from 6 to 10 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall as well as in a number of senior housing complexes on various dates.

For more information, see Page 9 of this week's issue or contact Paul Hines at the solicitor's office, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Morrissey Heads Major Committee

By MICHAEL WHALEN

State Sen. Michael Morrissey has received several impressive committee appointments from new Senate President Thomas Birmingham.

Morrissey announced this week he has been appointed chairman of the powerful Committee on Governmental Regulations. He will also have a seat on the prominent Ways and Means Committee, he said.

Other committees Morrissey will serve on include Transportation, Health Care, and Natural Resources.

Morrissey said he is pleased with all of the appointments, particularly the first two.

"Governmental Regulations came as a shock," he said. "It usually goes to people who are more senior—not that I don't have the experience, but it usually goes to someone with more longevity."

"And I think it's the first time in 20 years or longer that someone from Quincy got a seat on Ways and Means. I think it's been since (former Mayor-Sen.) Arthur Tobin's time."

"I guess my fortunes have risen," he added with a laugh.

Morrissey said Governmental Regulations deals with a number of prominent issues, the most controversial of which is currently casino gambling.

"It's considered one of the more powerful and high-profile committees because of the subject matter," he said. "One of the top three or four committees in the Legislature."

Morrissey is new to the Transportation and Natural Resources committees and retains his seat on Health Care. He will no longer serve as chairman of the Committee on Public Service.

In particular, he said he is pleased to serve on Transportation since there are a number of important transportation issues in Quincy, including the planned Quincy Center Concourse.

"My sitting on Ways and Means could also help the concourse," he said.

Under previous Senate President William Bulger, Morrissey served as chairman of the Committee on Public Service (which deals with retirement and collective bargaining issues) and a member of the Committee on Health Care. Before that, he served on several others, he said.

because of make-ups," Stevenson said. "These are teams we should be beat if we want to win the league. From now on, our depth has to come through a little better than it has. If it does, we should come out of this alright."

Despite his squad's sub-.500 record, Stevenson is optimistic about North's chances of turning its season around and winning the OCL.

"We started with the elite of the league -- Weymouth, Barnstable and Bridgewater-Raynham -- all on the road," Stevenson said. "We're also a very young team, with three juniors, one senior and one sophomore in the starting lineup."

"We have hardly anyone with varsity experience, but as the season continues, our players are gaining varsity experience and will keep improving with every game. I've already seen signs of improvement, which is nice to see with the tough schedule ahead of us."

Emergency Management Does Its Part During Storm

Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano and his crew were on hand to help the city through this week's storm.

Siciliano said Police Chief Francis Mullen put Emergency Management on standby Sunday at 4 p.m., a status that lasted until Tuesday at 12:30 a.m.

He added that following an order from Mayor James Sheets, Emergency Management opened the Atherton-Hough School and Squantum Community Center as emergency shelters in case anyone wanted to be evacuated. No evacuation took place, he noted.

Siciliano said a number of dialysis patients, doctors, nurses and QVNA members were transported by Emergency Management to Quincy, Carney and Mass. General hospitals. Many seniors also were transported to various appointments, he added.

About 60 volunteers participated in the operations, and about a dozen Emergency Management and volunteer vehicles were used, according to Siciliano, who expressed gratitude toward those who volunteered their four-wheel drive vehicles.

He also praised the Quincy Department of Public Works and the Transportation Department for their efforts during the storm.

"It was a job extremely well done," said Siciliano.

Siciliano also noted that Monday around 12:44 p.m., high tides accompanied by winds of 40 to 60 m.p.h. were a concern to several callers from Houghs Neck, but added that there were no real problems in the neighborhood.

"The new seawalls down there are a real plus to the city," he said.

Siciliano said Emergency Management Area II Director Thomas Rodger of Bridgewater stayed in constant contact with the city in the event the state resources would be needed.

"Thankfully, we didn't need any," he said.

He added that the Blizzard of '96 is likely the worst storm the city has seen since the infamous Blizzard of '78.

"I would compare this with the '78 Blizzard," said Siciliano.

GETTING A CHARGE?

The alternator and the voltage regulator in your car team up to provide the electricity needed to keep the battery charged. While the alternator generates the electrical current necessary to charge the battery and power the electrical components as the engine runs, the voltage regulator controls the amount of current the alternator produces. Without the voltage regulator, the amount of current produced by the alternator would damage electrical components and the battery. Normally, the alternator and the voltage regulator are reliable and provide trouble-free service. If there is a reduction in current, therefore, it is far more likely that the alternator drive belt is to blame. Because a loose alternator drive belt can significantly reduce the current output of the alternator and cause the battery to run down, belt tension should be checked frequently.

HINT: When an alternator is suspected of providing insufficient electricity to keep the battery charged, an alternator-output test can be conducted to measure the amount of current that the alternator sends to the battery.

CLEARING THE DECKS—U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum Director William MacMullen uses a snowblower to remove snow from the deck of the U.S.S.

U.S.S. Salem Proving To Be A Popular Tourist Destination

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The USS Salem, the centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy Point, is financially afloat and proving to be an increasingly popular tourist destination, according to its executive director.

"We're underway under our own power and our outlook for next year is to turn it up a few knots," Director steel to a ship with personality."

Since opening to tours seven months ago, MacMullen said the Salem has been visited by 12,000 tourists as well as another 6,000 people associated with various groups including ship reunions, Boy and Cub Scouts and other associations. In that time, MacMullen said the ship has made tremendous strides as a tourist destination and point of interest for thousands. And, he confidently predicts, the ship's popularity and success should continue in 1996, the museum's first full year of operation.

"Having 20,000 individual visitors and another 20,000 people in group tours is realistic. We can do it," MacMullen said.

Among the keys to success, MacMullen said, are marketing and communication. Publishing a museum newsletter, joining the Greater Boston Convention and Meeting Association, and networking the Salem's uniqueness as a modern-day naval "Plimoth Plantation" have been instrumental in the ship's popularity. Of course, word-of-mouth is also important and guests of the Salem have raved about it.

For instance, James Peterson, committee chairman of Boy Scout Troop 47 in Plymouth, thanked MacMullen and his staff for a "most memorable experience aboard" the Salem. In his letter, Peterson said, "The crew made every effort to ensure

April, June Extra School Days Possible

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The snowy winter the region has experienced could result in school makeup days in April and/or June, according to School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

Creedon said the city's elementary schools already have missed five days because of snow, the secondary schools have lost four days and the high schools, three. The state mandates that the students attend school 180 days out of an 185-day schedule, allowing for five snow days.

The superintendent has the authority to make a recommendation regarding makeup days to the School Committee, which has the final say on the matter. Creedon said the committee was to discuss the issue last night (Wednesday).

While he was reluctant to speculate on what his recommendation will be—since it is unknown how many more, if any, snow days will be—Creedon said cutting into the April vacation, if necessary, would likely be his first choice.

"I certainly could consider April," he said. "But I don't know yet. I could be persuaded to change my mind."

Another option besides April is the week of Monday, June 24 through Friday, June 28, he added. Since July is considered the beginning of a new school year, no days could be used during that month, Creedon noted.

The superintendent said he likely will not consider using days during the students' February vacation because the weather is too unpredictable.

"I don't believe we would do anything with different with February," he said. "We're not out of the weather months yet."

Creedon added that Saturdays also will not be considered, mainly out of respect for the city's Jewish community.

The superintendent also noted that any decision the School Committee makes regarding makeup time would have to meet approval with the city's school teachers. Creedon said a "task team" made up of School Committee members and teachers' union representatives likely will be formed in the near future to discuss the possibilities.

A similar team was formed in 1978, he added.

'A Gentle, Holy Priest And Friend'

Community Mourns For Fr. Cornelius Heery

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Rev. Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy, is remembered by friends and colleagues as a gentle, holy priest and a "friend to all" who was always there for people of all ages and creeds.

Fr. Heery died last Friday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton from complications of a heart attack he suffered Jan. 5, according to a spokesman for the Keohane Funeral Home in Wollastone.

Ordained a priest in 1951, he had served at several other churches before becoming pastor of Sacred Heart in 1976. In addition, Fr. Heery was the longest-serving vicar in the history of the Archdiocese of Boston, serving as episcopal vicar of the Quincy Vicariate.

Among those who offered words of tribute:

Mayor James Sheets: "Fr. Heery was the friend of all and the pastor to all. He would send me notes encouraging me when things weren't going well, and he sent notes to my son Luke when he was at North Quincy High telling Luke he was praying for him.

"He really was a pastor for all men and women. His influence far exceeded his parish. He was a very dear friend of mine, and he will be greatly missed."

City Council President Peter Kolson: "He was a kind and gracious servant of his parish and generally, mankind. A man of extraordinary love for his community and for his fellow man, inside and outside of his parish. Summing it all up, a very kind and gentle servant, and a job well done."

School Supt. Eugene Creedon: "I certainly remember him

SEN. EDWARD KENNEDY speaks to student assembly at Broad Meadows Middle School Tuesday about the school's efforts to raise money for a school to be built in memory of slain 12-year-old human rights activist Iqbal Masih of Pakistan (seen in photo in front of podium). Students raised $50,000 for the school. At right are students who led the drive and Grade 7 teacher Ron Adams.

Kennedy Praises Broad Meadows Students On 'Iqbal School' Efforts

Sen. Edward Kennedy praised students at Broad Meadows Middle School Tuesday for their efforts to raise money for a new school in Pakistan in memory of a slain 12-year-old human rights activist.

The students recently worked together to raise $50,000 to build a school in memory of young Iqbal Masih, who was shot to death last Easter Sunday while riding his bicycle in his native Pakistan. The boy, who visited Broad Meadows in December 1994, had been sold into child slavery by his parents at age 4 but escaped six years later and subsequently became an outspoken opponent of such practices.

Some have speculated Iqbal's death was part of a conspiracy by the carpet industry owners in his country for whom he worked as a slave.

Kennedy, who has supported the Broad Meadows students' efforts, applauded them for doing their part to keep Iqbal's memory alive. The students recently received the Reebok International Human Rights Award in New York for their hard work.

"Iqbal's sad life and tragic death shocked the conscience of people in many different lands," he said. "Your project to build a school in his name in Pakistan will be a beautiful and fitting memorial, and an enduring reminder of the important cause he brought to the world's attention."

"Today, as we remember the life of Iqbal, let us renew our commitment to his cause and do more to end child labor. We know that it is a serious and continuing problem in many countries. A report by the U.S. Department of Labor in 1994 estimated that there are 100 million child workers in the world today."

Kennedy said the treatment of the young slaves, who are often sold by parents so poor they are desperate for money, is "inhumane." He added that people in this country should purchase only carpets identified with a Rugmark, a special label designed by a man in India that is only put on carpets not made with child labor.

Kennedy added that he has contacted Pakistan's Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on the matter and that she supports the students' efforts. He also noted that he has linked Broad Meadows Internet information on Iqbal to his own Internet page, so that anyone who contacts the senator may learn more about the Iqbal School project.

"So keep up the good work," he told the students. "I look forward to continuing my work with you on your campaign to build this school. I'm proud of all of you. Your leadership is making Iqbal's dream come true, and making the world a better place."

Mayor James Sheets has made it official. He's not running for Congress.

But it came as no surprise to political observers who are tuned in to City Hall. They are wondering why he took so long to say he would not be a candidate.

In fact, The Quincy Sun's "Sunbeams" column predicted as far back as Nov. 16 that Sheets would not run. That was right after Gerry Studds had announced he would not seek re-election.

Under a headline that read, "Sheets Seen Not Running," the column said, "Those close to Sheets would be quite surprised—probably stunned—if he decided to make a run for the 10th Congressional seat Gerry Studds is leaving."

"And if you listen to him talk, he doesn't sound like a candidate waiting in the wings to make a momentous announcement."

"He talks about things he feels still have to be done—in Quincy—not in Washington. Things to be done during his administration."

Sheets, in making his announcement Tuesday, said there are four reasons, in no particular order, for his decision not to run:

• A seat in Congress would require that he be away from his family at least four days a week, something the mayor was unwilling to do. "But there was no pressure on me at home not to run," he said. "My children and my wife urged me to run."

• He did not feel it was right for him to ask Quincy residents to re-elect him to a fourth term as mayor and then announce immediately following the inauguration he would be seeking another office. "It just wasn't in my heart or my head to do that," said Sheets.

• His schedule as mayor would conflict with any Congressional duties, and future plans he has for the redevelopment of the Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center, construction of a downtown hotel and others would suffer.

• He felt he could make a more of a contribution in Quincy than in Washington, D.C., given his age (60) and the fact that he is a Democrat and the majority of Congress is now Republican.

Sheets maintained, as he has in the past, that running for Congress has always been one of his greatest dreams, but added he felt it was a dream he finally had to let go.

Sheets said he met Tuesday with Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt—who is running for the seat being vacated by Studds—and told him he is not committing his support to any candidate for the time being.

The mayor added, however, that the fact that Delahunt is a resident of the city will have a major impact when he makes his decision about whom to support.

Raymondi Proposes Open Forum Before Council Meetings

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

At Tuesday night's City Council meeting, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi introduced a motion suggesting that future council meetings begin with a 15-minute open forum allowing residents to speak on any matter of concern to the council.

Raymondi said the open forum will give "an opportunity for the City Council to formally indicate that it values the thoughts and concerns and comments to the extent of hearing them at each and every meeting."

Raymondi added that he "wanted to provide an opportunity for the residents of Quincy to appear at the forum without going through a formal procedure." This, he said, "will enable any person who would like to approach the City Council on any matter to be able to do that."

If there are pressing issues that warrant more attention, and a lesser matter cannot be resolved at the forum, the council may then "extend the time or move it into committee."

Precautions During Winter Emergencies

- Keep accumulated snow away from oil fill pipes, dryer vents and heating equipment power vents.
 - Try to keep snow away from foundations.
 - Flat roof with parapets: try to remove snow.
 - Pitched roof: remove snow accumulated from the base of roof and from valley areas.
 - Skylights: on low-pitched roofs, remove snow.
 - Use a plastic shovel on roofs so you do not damage roof surface. If you are not in good physical condition, do not attempt strenuous labor, particularly climbing onto a roof. All ladders must be properly secured.
 - Keep means of egress clear and basement exits if possible.
 - Clear decks of accumulated snow.
 - Remove icicles, particularly at entrances.
 - Do not store a snowblower or snowblower fuel inside your home or business. Keep them in a garage or a storage shed.
 - Adopt the fire hydrant and storm catch basin near your home and keep them clear.
 - Keep your snow shovel, broom and auto windshield scraper inside your house so you have ready access to them.
 - If you are in good health, please assist any disabled or elderly neighbors.
- For more information or in the event of an emergency, call the Quincy Building Department at 376-1450.

MIXED-UP MEDICATION

The warnings are everywhere. They are so common that the words of caution may be taken for granted. Perhaps for this and other reasons, the problem of taking drugs that can interact dangerously with each other is a growing one. A recent study by Harvard University of more than 6,000 elderly people found that almost one-third of them were taking combinations of drugs that could be harmful, resulting in such possible side effects as heart problems, mental confusion, lethargy and weakness. Among the most common culprits were pain relievers with propoxyphene (such as Darvon), antidepressants with amitriptyline, the blood-thinning drug dipyrindamole, muscle relax-ants, and indomethacin (for arthritis). P.S. To avoid drug interactions, bring all drugs (including non-prescription ones) you are taking to all doctor's visits. Make sure you notify your physician about whatever medications you are taking. Get the information you need to live a healthier life—no matter what your condition. For more information visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St. in Quincy, or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550, office hours by appointment. Father Heery: Someone Special

Fr. Cornelius Heery probably would have said something like: "Please don't make a bug fuss over me."

So, we won't. Just a little one.

The beloved pastor of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy and a good friend to the entire Quincy community was a humble man.

He was also a softspoken man but he easily got your attention and held it—more than someone else could do with a blaring bullhorn. When he spoke, you listened.

He preferred to shun the spotlight and go about doing his thing quietly and without fanfare. And he did his thing very well: caring for people.

Fr. Heery died Friday night at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. His death at 72 is not only a tremendous loss to his family, Sacred Heart Parish and the Boston Archdiocese, but to all of Quincy.

"He did so much for so many," said Tom Koch, whose family has been very close to Fr. Heery since his arrival as pastor of Sacred Heart in 1976. "He never said 'no' to anyone."

He was so unassuming. He did everything in a quiet way—usually so quiet no one else knew he was doing it. He was a humble, gentle man. Everyone who knew him loved him."

Fr. Heery suddenly didn't feel well the week before. He became ill Thursday (Jan. 4) and felt worse on Friday. He thought it was the flu. But apparently, it was actually his heart and the start of what was to be a massive heart attack.

And that Friday night, as ill as he was, he went out on a sick call to one of his parishioners. When he came back, he was feeling worse, and was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The Friday he died would have been the start of his 21st year as pastor at Sacred Heart. In April, he would have celebrated the 45th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

He was Vicar of the Archdiocese South Region since the early 1970's—longest serving in the Archdiocese.

Under his pastorate, major improvements were made at Sacred Heart Church and school including the complete renovation of St. Joseph's Oratory, the lower church and the installation there of beautiful commemorative stained glass windows.

Fr. Heery enjoyed a close relationship with North Quincy High School that became his adopted high school alma mater. He celebrated a Mass for the football team each week before a game and wrote weekly letters to members of the team. He attended football, basketball, baseball games and other sports when he could and was often at the school for rallies.

And he proudly wore his Yakoo hat and sweatshirt given to him by Dr. Allan Yacubian, the model for the cherished NQHS symbol.

He wanted to reach out to youth. And, he did.

Fr. Heery kept a close, interested eye on the community and its activities.

He nominated two who became recipients of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award: the late Richard Koch, Sr. in 1987 for his work with charitable and community causes and, last year, Fr. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church for helping the poor and homeless.

His modesty always came through. Like the time we wanted to do a full-page feature on him. He thanked us but declined, suggesting instead that we do one on another Quincy priest who he said was "more deserving."

He was a faithful reader and booster of The Sun. When he went to Ireland in 1994 with a group of Quincy residents including Mayor James Sheets, he brought along copies of The Sun's Historic Quincy supplement and distributed them including one to the mayor of Dublin.

We at The Sun have lost a good friend.

Fr. Heery was a priest's priest and a priestly priest as anyone who knew him will agree.

Tom Koch said it well.

"Fr. Heery was a saint. If he isn't in heaven, there is no heaven. But there is a heaven, and he is there. And I'm sure he got a great big welcome."

And, a friend who picked up a Mass card at St. John's for him, said: "I'm wondering why I'm getting this card. If ever anyone didn't need it, he didn't."

But for those of us fortunate to have known him, he will always be here—always remembered as someone special.

Delegation Works To Help Police Against Those Who Resist Arrest

Members of Quincy's State House delegation have been active recently in supporting local police crime-fighting efforts.

Delegation members said their latest success aims at providing officers with statutory protection from those who resist arrest.

"Having worked hard to become supportive partners to the Quincy police force, we as Quincy's representatives are extremely pleased that our advocacy for this measure has proven successful," said Rep. Stephen Tobin. "Our courageous officers should not have to bear assaults while cleaning our streets of the unsavory elements which pose a danger to us all."

Prior to the legislative action, Rep. Ronald Mariano said, resisting arrest was not a crime in Massachusetts. Citing statistics from 1993 which report that Boston saw over 530 incidents of injuries to officers resulting from attacks while apprehending suspects, delegation members said the arguments for that action were clear and forceful.

"While we in the Legislature continue to address the root causes of crime, the plain fact is that our police face bigger risks today than ever before," said Mariano. "As we enact stricter penalties for violators and make sure a sentence rendered is a sentence served, criminals can become more combative. We owe it to our officers in Quincy to ensure their safety as they ensure ours."

Delegation members also said their actions are indicative of their commitment to fighting crime and providing supports for public safety officials in the City of Quincy, as well as in the Commonwealth.

For example, Rep. Michael Bellotti noted that some of the victories they helped secure in 1995 included: $12.16 million for a community policing grant program to put more police officers on the street, creation of a new warrant management system in the trial courts, enactment of the Victim Rights Law to empower crime victims with additional statutory rights and initial approval of a prison bond bill which will add prison cells and relieve dangerous overcrowding in state prisons.

"Happy to announce this action, we will continue to combat crime in every possible manner," said Tobin. "Whether it be the obvious strategies of supporting police and judicial personnel or in more subtle forms such as enacting policies which will create jobs and educate our kids about the evils of drugs, providing Quincy's citizens with a safe community remains a top priority for me and the Quincy delegation."

Boston Should Provide Environmental Review Before Using Moon Island

[A copy of the following letter, dated Jan. 4 and addressed to state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Cox was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.]

Dear Ms. Cox:

Confirming our call to your office yesterday, we are writing to advise you that we join the Save the Harbor-Save the Bay and the Seaside Environmental Alliance of Squantum in requesting that you insist that the City of Boston provide you with a complete environmental impact review before any further use is made of the shooting range on Moon Island, abutting Squantum.

Without any notice by Boston, the beautiful Moon Island hill was defaced two years ago, and despite protests, no attempt has been made to reforest and replant vegetation there. Of course, Squantum residents are continually disturbed by the gun firing from dawn to after dark, and the spent lead cartridge shells peppering the island and clam flats are environmental concerns. Also, we believe that the firing range creates a hazard for vehicles traveling along Moon Island Road to and from Long Island.

The ideal solution would be for the City of Boston to relocate the firing range to a distant sand pit away from residential neighborhoods; in lieu of that suggestion, we believe the use of the Moon Island firing range should be limited to the hours of 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. during the winter months and to 9 p.m. in the summer, with other restrictions pertaining to the layout of the range.

An environmental impact review would bring to light other good reasons for not using, or restricting the use of, the Moon Island firing range. We trust that you will protect the public by requiring the review to be made and uses be curtailed.

Meeting Feb. 1 On Marina Bay Condo Proposal

Ward 6 City Councillor, Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting Thursday, Feb. 1 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the cafeteria located at 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay.

The purpose of this meeting is to inform the residents and other interested parties of a plan being submitted by the Thorndike Development Corporation/Marina Court Associates Limited Partnership to develop and construct 330 low-rise condominium homes for sale on 19.7 acres known as Parcel 37 at Marina Bay. The proposed Marina Court Planned Unit Development (PUD) application abuts Victory Road in the Marina Bay development complex.

The proposed development consists of two- and three-story traditional New England-style clapboard and shingle-style architecture to be developed in 26 buildings. A central amenity area is proposed including a pool, clubhouse and meeting rooms.

"I believe a councillor's most important role is to keep the community informed," said Ayers. "I am having this community meeting prior to the applicant going before the Planning Board for a public hearing Thursday, Feb. 15 at 7 p.m. to be held at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., second floor Conference Room." "As I have done in the past, I want to give the community ample time to hear the plans so that they may voice their input towards this proposal."

Deadline Jan. 26 For Fire Exam Applications

Rep. A. Stephen Tobin announces that the deadline is near for those interested in the next civil service examination for municipal fire fighters.

Applications for the test are due to the Department of Personnel and Administration by Jan. 26. The test date is April 27.

"Dedicating oneself to the protection of life and property of a community is a very noble and courageous endeavor. I want to wish the best of luck to all those civic-minded citizens who will take the challenge of participating in this exam," said Tobin.

For those who submit an application, a two-part examination awaits. Applicants must pass both sections, written and physical, to be included on the eligible lists for Massachusetts cities and towns.

As a general rule, Tobin said that candidates must also meet other criteria such as being between the ages of 19 and 32 as of January 26. Some municipalities, however, do allow applicants over the age of 32 as long as they pass both sections of the examination and meet certain medical and physical standards. Only non-smokers will be accepted and some departments require a valid driver's license.

To secure an application, interested parties can visit the Massachusetts Department of Personnel and Administration at One Ashburton Place in Boston on Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. To obtain an application by mail, call Tobin's office at 722-2396.

as a priest who was very much a priest, totally dedicated to his vocation. He was a very kindly man, very thoughtful, and you could always approach Fr. Heery no matter what the situation. I know he was particularly kind to my family over the years.

"His concern for the kids in the public schools, especially North Quincy High School, also made him unique. Sacred Heart has lost one of the greatest priests who ever served the parish."

Fr. James Hawker, priest in residence at Sacred Heart for 24 years: "The thing that impressed me the most about him was that he really touched the lives of people of all ages. He cut across all barriers. All the kids in the parish were like his children, they really were."

"It was such a privilege for me to live with him. He was a great inspiration and model to me, and a great guide. He had such deep faith—that's the bottom line. He was such a beautiful leader, and the parish life here will continue to grow because of so many wonderful things he did."

John Salenius, permanent deacon at Sacred Heart for 17 years: "He was very interested and active in the ecumenical movement and always had the door open to other faiths. He worked hard to create an air of Christian friendship among all the denominations."

"He loved all the kids at North Quincy High School and throughout the city and always had a tremendous open-door policy for young people."

"I just can't say enough good things about him. He was a very, very giving and gentle man and a leader by action, not just word. He's just reached out to everybody at every level. I think we're all better people for having known him."

Fr. Timothy Harrison, Sacred Heart parochial vicar for 4 1/2 years: "He was always a person who welcomed people—just constantly welcoming people. He lived his whole life for the parish, and it was important to him that he keep the church open as much as possible."

"He was a man of prayer, and he prayed for people he knew every day in the chapel from 5 to 5:30 p.m. In a real way, I know that he's still with us, and that God's taking good care of him."

Fr. James DiPerri, Sacred Heart parochial vicar for two years who knew Fr. Heery as a friend before joining the parish: "He was an outstanding priest of God and for God's people. He cared for the spiritual needs of the people of the parish and the civic concerns for the people of the City of Quincy."

"He was active with the youth at North Quincy High School, and cared for all the youth in a very humble way by his presence at rallies and school functions."

"Fr. Heery was very proud of the fact that he was the longest-serving episcopal vicar in the history of the Archdiocese of Boston, and he had a wide breadth of priest friends. He loved the priesthood, and he had a very fulfilling life as a priest because he tried his best to manifest God's love to others by his actions."

Fr. James Curtain, pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church and a classmate of Fr. Heery's at St. John's Seminary in Brighton: "We were ordained together on April 11, 1951. What a wonderful priest he was, a true churchman. His whole life was the church."

"He was very humble and unassuming in his way, and he reached out to kindly and compassionately to everyone—the sick, the needy, everyone."

"He'd host gatherings for priests, and 70 or 80 priests would show up. He had a great sense of humor and was a good athlete. We played tennis together for years."

"He will be sorely missed."

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John the Baptist Church: "I've had an amicable relationship with him for 19 years. He was an idol to be imitated, and certainly a very saintly and holy priest. It's a great loss for both Sacred Heart Parish and the community."

Fr. Peter Quinn, St. John the Baptist pastor, who knew Fr. Heery for about 30 years: "He was just a really gentle, kind man and a very grace-filled individual. People felt very valued, just very, very important, in his presence. He just had the ability to make people feel how loved they are by God."

Fr. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church: "He's always been an inspiration, a great leader, kind and compassionate to all the parishioners of all the various parishes. He will be greatly missed."

Dr. Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church: "He was a gentle, kind, loving and caring pastor who reached out beyond his parish to everyone in the city. I personally appreciated his support of the Quincy Interfaith Clergy Council."

"It was a shock for me to receive the news so suddenly," added Dr. Bennett, who annually worked with Fr. Heery on a Nativity Pageant held during the Christmas season. "I will miss him."

Rev. Alicia Corea, co-minister of Houghs Neck Congregational Church: "I was shocked when I heard about his death. It's so sad. He was always so hospitable."

Rev. Corea, who last saw Fr. Heery at a ecumenical AIDS Healing Service last Nov. 28, noted that she included Sacred Heart Parish on this week's prayer list at Houghs Neck Congregational in memory of the "loss of their beloved pastor."

Rev. Adolph Wismar, pastor of Wollaston Lutheran Church: "Fr. Heery was one of the finest Christian clergy that I've had the privilege of knowing. He was a commanding presence and a giant of a man in our community."

Rev. Wismar also praised him for his ecumenical endeavors. He noted that Fr. Heery was an active participant of the Wollaston-North Quincy Inter-church Council and the annual host of the Festival of Lights which he said is considered the largest single ecumenical gathering in Massachusetts.

A funeral Mass for Fr. Heery will be celebrated by Bernard Cardinal Law today (Thursday) at 11 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church. Obituary, Page 20

Street Sense Is Common Sense

Test Your "Street Smarts" 10

Do You:

- Jog or walk by yourself early in the morning or late at night when the streets are quiet and deserted?
- Stuff your purse with cash, keys, credit cards, checkbook - and then it wide open on a counter, desk or the floor? Put your wallet in a jacket, which you then hang up or throw over a chair?
- Let your mind wander - thinking about your job, or all the things you have to do - when walking or driving?
- Think it's a waste of time to lock your car when you'll be back in a few minutes?
- If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, you need to change a few habits. Even if you answered "no" made a perfect score, read on. Spend a few minutes now to prevent trouble later.

Basic Street Sense

- Where you are - on the street, in an office, building or shopping mall, driving, waiting for a bus or subway - stay alert and tuned in to your surroundings.
- Send the message that you're calm, confident, and know where you're going.
- Trust your instincts. If something or someone makes you uneasy, avoid the person or leave the area.
- Know the neighborhoods where you live and work. Check out locations of police and fire stations, public telephones, hospitals, and restaurants, or stores that are open.

On Foot - Day and Night

- Stick to well-lighted, well-traveled streets. Avoid shortcuts through wooded areas, parking lots, or alleys.
- Don't flash large amounts of cash or other tempting targets like expensive jewelry or clothing.
- Carry a purse close to your body, not dangling by the straps. Put your wallet in an inside coat or front pants pocket, not in a back pocket.
- Try to use automated teller machines in the daytime. Have your card in hand and don't approach the machine if you're uneasy about people nearby.
- Don't wear shoes or clothing that restrict your movements.
- Have your car or house key in hand before you reach the door.
- If you think someone is following you, switch directions or cross the street. Walk toward an open store, restaurant, or lighted house. If you're scared, yell for help.
- Have to work late? Make sure there are others in the building, and ask someone - a colleague or security guard - to walk you to your car or transit stop.

What A Difference A Year Makes!!!

These photos of the Jan. 14-15, 1995 "heat wave" appeared in The Quincy Sun a year ago today.

A RECORD 66 degrees is registered outside Colonial Federal Savings Bank on Beach St., Wollaston Saturday as winter "heat wave" hits the Quincy-South Shore area.

THE SLIDE AT Caddy Park on Quincy Shore Dr., was popular for youngsters Saturday. Here the Moshen family of Quincy children, Reem, 2; Musab, 4 1/2 and Lulowa, 3, enjoy their turn.

A WALK THROUGH Caddy Park was a summer-like treat Saturday for Maureen Flaherty (left) and Pauline Trenholm of Merrymount and for Roxie, a four-year-old Labrador Retriever.

THE SCENE AT Wollaston Beach looked like a day in summer over the weekend as the parking lot was filled with cars.

TALL TASK--Julia White, 22 months, of West Quincy, got into the "spring of things" during Saturday's record 66 degree temperature but found the basket a long, long way up.

STROLLING AROUND Wollaston Beach in shirt weather are Roger and Andrea White of West Quincy, their daughter Julia (in carriage) and nephews Robert and William Gardner of Squantum.

RELAXING ON THE seawall at Wollaston Beach and getting some sun Saturday is Dorothy Ryan of Wollaston.

that our time on the ship was both a learning and fun experience. The scouts and leaders really enjoyed program and shipboard humor."

Weston Cub Scout Pack 152 concurred. "Your entire staff was wonderful. They were ta person, enthusiastic and always going out f their way to be helpful and informative. This was as true for the volunteers working on the ship as it was for those involved in the overnight program," wrote Cubmaster Jed Diehl.

To become a year-round tourist stop and destination, MacMullen understands the importance of hosting reunion groups, Boy Scouts and other organizations on the weekends during the winter, which is the slow period for local tourism.

"We want to have a stabilized program for the winter when we don't have a lot of people visiting on a daily basis. It will also allow us to do ship repairs and interpretations on the weekdays which bring the ship alive," he said.

Surprisingly when one considers the amount of storms the area has had so far this season, the Salem's programs have been going full steam. MacMullen said every weekend through April is booked with some group on the ship, and other activities are planned right into the summer and beyond.

"We're hosting a meeting of Boy Scout Councils representing 300 people, including 120 for an overnight Saturday through Sunday," MacMullen said, adding more Boy Scout Troops are booking tours and overnights.

The Salem is also a hot spot for ship reunions. The 500-member LSM (Landing Ship and Machinery) Association will have a reunion on board in May. Moreover, the 1000-strong USS Long Beach Association will come to Quincy in July.

The reunion groups generally take the ship over for two or three days. They conduct ceremonies and an open house. The members stay at nearby accommodations, including the Adams Inn in North Quincy, which in turn helps the local economy.

"We're making it so that we become the headquarters for the reunion groups," MacMullen explains. "If they need to tour the Boston Harbor Islands, we'll take them on a boat. We're a destination, not just part of a weekend."

Attractions on the Salem are also on the upswing. An exhibit called "Quiet Shadows" featuring women in the Pacific during World War II will open shortly.

And, next month, the International Plastic Modelers Society with 150-200 members will visit the ship. MacMullen said the Society, which will do a show on the Salem, is interested in affiliating with the Salem as its East Coast chapter. Also planned is a series of ceremonies by the Western Front Association, a historical society which studies World War I.

Retirement, birthday and anniversary parties are also fast becoming frequent festivities on the retired heavy cruiser. "A few weeks ago we had a big retirement ceremony for a sailor from the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. It was very nice," MacMullen said.

The Salem is also in line to host the 1998 Historic Naval Ships International Conference, an indication of its rise in the Historic Naval Ships Society. The Society is comprised of retired warships recommissioned as museums. "We were voted the finest vessel in the fleet. Everyone wants to know how we're doing it," MacMullen said.

The reason for the Salem's popularity is its overnight program. Groups such as Boy Scouts experience a battery of simulations aboard the vessel, including first-aid drills, navigation in the Combat Information Center and damage control (such as shoring up bulk heads).

"They all start with a tour and a fire drill, then they go to work on the drills. During the drills, they're told to remember as much as they can. The next morning, there's a scavenger hunt on the ship and everything on the tour is featured in the scavenger hunt," MacMullen said.

A tremendous amount of work was done by dedicated staff and volunteers in preparing and readying the ship for visitors last spring. Since opening, that work has continued. There's a new heating system, new toilet facilities and a new safety system with emergency exit lights. The interior of the ship is being painted.

The acquisition of artifacts is also ongoing. MacMullen noted the museum recently received a half million dollars worth of items from Washington Naval Historical Center. Among them: signal lights, silverware and a set of china which was Admiral William Halsey's, the fleet admiral in the Pacific during World War II.

Financially, the Salem is managing as a non-profit, privately funded museum.

"We're meeting our financial obligations," MacMullen said. "We'll break even with a small surplus. This year we won't be saddled with renovating the ship and getting it opened. Now, things are in place and we're looking forward to our first full year of operation."

The Salem is open during the winter months on Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. (last tour departs at 3:30 p.m.) It is also open holidays and the museum is slated to be open throughout the February school vacation week.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Property Tax Abatement And The Taxpayer

By Eileen Partridge

This is a property revaluation year in Quincy, and you have just received your tax bill that reflects the current assessment on your house or commercial property.

Assessors are required to assess all property at its full and fair cash value as of January first of each year. The assessment you just received is intended to represent 100 percent of the property's "Fair Market Value". This is understood to be "the price an owner willing but not under compulsion to sell ought to receive from one willing but not under compulsion to buy. It means the highest price that a normal purchaser not under particular compulsion will pay at the time, and cannot exceed the sum which the owner after reasonable effort could obtain for his property."

In receiving the new tax bill, the property owner may feel that the new assessment overstates the market value of the property. When this happens, the tax payer is entitled, under the laws of the Commonwealth, to file for a tax abatement.

The deadline for filing for this fiscal year is Jan. 29. You may file for an abatement only for the current tax year and only if your taxes are paid in full

(both the preliminary and actual fiscal year 1996 tax bills). An application for abatement is available in the assessor's office, and instructions regarding abatement and exemption applications and other pertinent information are printed on the tax bill. At the time you file, you will need to state your opinion of the value of your property. The Board of Assessors will consider your case at a hearing and notify you of the decision.

When an applicant is granted an abatement, a refund check or a certificate evidencing the assessors' intent to abate the tax is issued to the tax payer. If, in your case, you receive a notice of denial or are abated an amount that you feel is unjust, your request for an abatement has not come to an end, it has just become a little more involved.

You now have the right to file an appeal with the state Appellate Tax Board (ATB). A hearing before the ATB generally proceeds in much the same manner as a hearing or trial in any other administrative agency or court. In presenting your case, certain documents must be introduced into evidence. It would be advisable to keep copies of all documents or originals that are part of the appeal process.

•The application for abatement filed with the Board of Assessors, with the date of filing (the original of this document is presented by the city).

•The original tax bill with the date of payment and the amount of interest paid, if any.

•The taxpayer may be asked to present a tax return relating to personal property, if personal property is also taxed.

•You should have on hand the formal written notice of denial from the local tax board case.

The burden of proof to show overvaluation lies with the taxpayer. Prior to considering an appeal through the Appellate Tax Board, you may want to engage a local real estate appraiser to perform an evaluation to determine the value of your property. This would be sufficient to at least establish if the effort of an appeal to the ATB and a full appraisal are worth the road trip.

Dr. Steven Windwer Sets Patients On Road To Recovery

Milton Chiropractic Providing Needed Service

By LIAM FITZGERALD

For more than five years, Dr. Steven Windwer has been relieving the pain and starting patients on the road to recovery at Milton Chiropractic and Rehabilitation (MCR) Inc., 111 Willard St., West Quincy.

Why did Dr. Windwer, 32, a native of Long Island, N.Y., decide to open a chiropractic and physical therapy practice in Quincy?

The answer is simple: Dr. Windwer did a few demographic tests and discovered that the city's residents were underserved in receiving adequate chiropractic care.

Despite not knowing anyone when he came to Quincy five and a half years ago, it did not take long for Dr. Windwer to build a strong clientele, mostly through word of mouth.

"I let other physicians know I was around and could help people out with chiropractic care, and talked to some of the people around town," Dr. Windwer said. "But the number one referral source we've had since we opened is patients telling their friends about us, without a doubt."

"I've seen patients from as far away as Rhode Island and Gloucester, but the majority of my patients come from Quincy, Milton, Boston and the South Shore," Dr. Windwer added.

What does Dr. Windwer enjoys most about his profession?

"I like being able to help patients by educating them and helping them live healthier lives through good nutrition and exercise," Dr. Windwer said.

While MCR offers effective treatment and various services, the three most common ailments, according to Dr. Windwer, are headaches, backaches and neckaches.

For example, if a patient suffering from back pain pays Dr. Windwer an initial visit, he will first consult with the patient to learn about the history of the ailment.

Then, the patient will undergo an examination, during which Dr. Windwer will palpate the spine to find the areas which are not functioning the way they are supposed to.

Following the examination, he may take x-rays to make sure nothing more serious is going in the back area. He then explains what he has discovered, show the patient the x-rays and discuss methods of relieving the person's ailments. Once this is accomplished, the doctor will attempt to reduce the pain and get the patient on a treatment program.

"We want to find the cause of the pain, not simply mask the problem, which various drugs can do," Dr. Windwer said. "We fix the problem, and really help people out a lot."

Originally just a chiropractic office, Dr. Windwer added a state-of-the-art physical therapy room three years ago, which contains various exercise machines on which patients can choose to work out on after chiropractic treatment.

Massage therapy, which started at MCR four years ago, is another treatment Dr. Windwer's office provides. Two massage therapists work out of his office to help his patients.

Since he began his practice, Dr. Windwer has seen a steady increase in the number of patients who decide to seek chiropractic care and physical therapy.

Dr. Windwer believes this increase is a result of people tiring of using prescription drugs to rid themselves of the pain--temporarily. People want a definitive end to their suffering, he said. Lately, more and more people are opting to take the more natural route and have their ailments treated by a chiropractor.

People have also found that chiropractic care is more cost-effective than the traditional medical treatment, Dr. Windwer said.

Dr. Windwer said he utilizes his skills in physical therapy to strengthen tissues and places the patients on exercise schedules. He also said that many patients are eager to get on physical therapy after chiropractic treatment.

"Being a physical therapist helped because some people are skeptical about seeing a chiropractor," Dr. Windwer said. "People are usually skeptical before they come in. Then, once the procedure is explained, they usually understand what we're trying to do and it makes a lot of sense to them."

In recent years, "tons of good literature" on the benefits of chiropractic care have increased the number of patients who walk through the door, he added.

Dr. Windwer said the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services recently released a study citing spinal manipulation as the recommended treatment for lower back pain.

Spinal manipulation, which is offered at MCR, is performed by gently manipulating misaligned vertebra, which releases pressure on joints and nerves, which in turn leads to relief of muscular tension.

In addition, MCR offers effective treatment of work, auto and sports injuries, whiplash injuries, sprains and strains, arthritic pain, carpal tunnel syndrome, among others.

MCR also provides services such as extremity mobilization, electrical muscle stimulation, ultrasound, spinal rehabilitation, home exercise programs, fitness and wellness programs and nutritional counseling, among other services.

Dr. Windwer is the official chiropractor for Northeastern University, where he goes every week to tend to students and athletes in all sports. He is also the team chiropractor for the Connemara Gaels football team.

In addition to these positions, Dr. Windwer teaches at Boston University as an instructor in the physical therapy program.

Milton Chiropractic and Rehabilitation, Inc., is open Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to noon and 3 to 7 p.m., Thursdays from 3 to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. To make an appointment, call 471-4491.

Bob, Eric Seamans Co-Publishers Local Father-Son Team Launch New England Hockey Newspaper

A father-son publishing team from Quincy have launched a new hockey monthly newspaper which is making its debut on the newsstand.

Twenty-five year-old Eric Seamans, and his father, Robert Seamans are founders of the New England Sports Communications, and co-publishers of New England Hockey Journal, a new, crisp, colorful and exciting monthly newspaper focusing on the winter game, and the people who live it.

The Seamans likened the new publication to owning a National Hockey League team: it's a dream come true.

"It was well worth the 16 hour days I've been working preparing and getting the paper off the grounds," Eric Seamans said. "New England Hockey Journal offers the ultimate format for the New England hockey reader. The newspaper offers everything any hockey enthusiast could ever want."

"New England Hockey Journal will cover bouncing pucks from Maine to Connecticut and points in between, and beyond," Seamans continued. "In the professional ranks, that means the Bruins and Whalers as well as New England's four American Hockey League outfits."

"On the amateur circuit, we'll be keeping tabs on the colleges, mainly Hockey East and the ECAC, as well as the schoolboy, youth, and development leagues. Chronicling the action will be an all-star lineup of writers, including Stan Fischler, legendary hockey expert, Tom Henshaw, veteran hockey journalist, and member of the Professional Writers Association, Mike Loftus, Bob Monahan of the Boston Globe, outstanding feature writer John Craig and others."

The publication will also include informative articles on health and conditioning by Dr. Wayne Westcott, a member of the President's Fitness Council; nutritionist Nancy Clark, the author of several books, and others.

In-line skating, the sports newest trends and tastes, will also be covered.

"Our goal at New England Hockey Journal is to give you something different than your morning sports section, and something more than names and numbers on your scorecard. We want to give you something to think about," Seamans said.

The 24-page premier issue, which hit the newsstands last week, includes many interesting and entertaining articles. Topics include Ray Bourque, Harry Sinden, and Harvard University captain Brad Konik.

For more information on the New England Hockey Journal or to order a subscription, call 773-9955.

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty HEAVY DEMAND FOR LIGHT TRUCKS

Owning a truck may have been associated with owning a construction business in the past, but today's light truck is more likely to be parked in the family garage than the construction yard.

Of the 925 new-vehicle models recently made available to American consumers, 421 were light trucks. This number of light truck models is up from 368 only five years earlier. Why are car buyers increasingly turning to light trucks? Whether they have growing families, interest in outdoor pursuits, or simply want greater carrying capacity, car owners of all types like the versatility and storage space that light trucks provide. On top of that, this category of vehicle can often be outfitted with four-wheel traction to provide superior road grip and off-the-road capability. As manufacturers further improve the comfort and driving characteristics of light trucks, the demand for them seems poised for an even steeper uphill climb.

HINT: The growth in light truck sales is accounted for mostly by vans and sport-utility vehicles.

add the burden of the morrow to the weight before we are required to bear it."

Yes, it is important for us to give our full attention to what is at hand today. If not, we may think about the past or the future so much that we fail to draw the most from life today. When we are interested in what is happening now, we are vitally alive in the now.

Let us welcome each day with complete interest. Let us concentrate on the present moment. Let us begin our day by affirming: "I am vitally alive and interested in what is happening now."

who serves as chairman of the School Committee by virtue of his office, said he has no problem with using time in April or June as long as any recommendation made by Creedon meets approval with parents' groups and the Quincy

Education Association. "It's very difficult to use the vacation weeks because people sometimes make plans well in advance, but we'll see what happens," he said.

Sheets added that the School Committee generally has accepted such recommendations by the superintendent in the past.

School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano voiced similar sentiments but noted that he would prefer to see June days used first because of families' plans for April vacation.

"My first preference would probably be to add a couple of days at the end of the year, depending on how many more snow days we need," he said. "We'll keep our fingers crossed. You're not really giving people a lot of advance notice if you're planning on using April vacation days."

Thomas Walsh, president of the Quincy Education Association, could not be reached for comment.

Since the Blizzard of '96 Jan. 8, Creedon said, he has received many phone calls regarding the number of school days that have been used. The most common concern has been voiced by working parents, he said, who have expressed reluctance to leave their children alone at home while they go to their jobs.

Creedon said he under-

stands parents' concerns but added that schools cannot be opened if there are any problems that could endanger the students' safety. For instance, the reason Quincy's middle schools have had one more snow day than the high schools is because of accessibility problems at three of the middle schools--Atlantic, Broad Meadows and Sterling--caused by deep snow at those properties.

"I have to have a certain level of confidence during those circumstances, and when the city is safe is possible, that's when the schools reopen," he said.

Ordinarily, Creedon noted, all secondary students are considered in a different category from the younger elementary students and would have had the same number of days off.

Creedon said he has met regularly with Mayor James Sheets and other city officials to discuss the safety factor before deciding on whether to call off school. He added, however, that even if school is in session, parents should use discretion when it comes to their children's safety.

"I would certainly say the parents are the decision makers regarding whether to send their children to school," he said.

New DARE Middle School Program Starts Today

The DARE Club, a new concept and program in the continuing collaboration between the Quincy Public Schools, the Quincy Police Department, and the Quincy Recreation Department in teaching students about the dangers of alcohol, tobacco, other drugs, and violence, will meet in the city's middle schools starting today. (Thursday).

The DARE Club will meet two afternoons each week from 2:30 to 4:45 p.m. in the four middle schools: Central, Broad Meadows, Atlantic, and Sterling. All clubs will meet Mondays and Thursdays, and the program will continue through June 1996.

All sixth grade students will be invited to participate with parental/guardian permission.

The goal of the program is to reinforce the existing fifth grade program.

The program will be recreation-based, and will include non-competitive games, team sports, fitness training, and other general wellness activities. In addition, there will be speakers, films, and discussions about the dangers of drugs, alcohol, and tobacco, along with several community service projects.

DARE Officers Bob Edgar and John Grazioso and School Health Director John Franceschini will be assisted by additional school teachers and recreation leaders during the six-month program.

Funding for the program was awarded to Police Chief Francis Mullen and School Supt. Eugene Creedon from a "Safe and Drug-free" school grant.

For Outstanding Community

Joseph McConville Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Joseph F. McConville, Jr., of Chickatabot Rd., Merrymount who has freely given a good part of his life to Quincy youth and to his city, is The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of the Year" for 1995.

McConville, who is 65, was selected by a panel of judges from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

The 11th recipient of the annual award, he will be honored at a reception in March at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Established in 1985, the award honors an individual for outstanding community service over a period of time or in a specific year.

"I'm thrilled," McConville said, when informed of his selection, "but are you sure there wasn't someone else more deserving?"

There were other deserving nominees in strong contention but after considering all 35 nominees, the panel of judges selected McConville for the honor.

McConville, who has been personnel manager at Boston Gear Works since 1947, has been active in the Quincy Youth

11,000 Homes, Firms In Dark 6 Hours Seek Cause For Huge Outage

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The cause of a power outage that left an estimated 11,000 homes and businesses in the dark for more than six hours early Tuesday morning was still unknown at press time.

The outage happened after power was lost at a Boston Edison substation in North Weymouth that supplies power to two Massachusetts Electric substations in Quincy.

Results of the problem included extra police on the streets, a one-hour delay in the opening of the city's schools, and a new printing location for The Patriot Ledger.

The outage began at approximately 1 a.m., according to Mike Monahan, a spokesman for Boston Edison. Although at press time he could not identify the exact cause, Monahan said the outage occurred after something triggered a power loss at Edison's Edgar Power Plant substation in North Weymouth.

The substation provides power to two Massachusetts Electric substations on Field and Copeland streets in Quincy, Monahan said.

Monahan added that he did not know how long it would take to determine what caused the initial Edison power loss but said

Like A WWII Blackout

Police Chief Francis Mullen said at this week's Quincy License Board meeting his department was out in force during the temporary power failure parts of Weymouth.

Mullen said he was awakened by one of his men at 4:30 a.m. and immediately called Mayor James Sheets and woke him up to advise of the situation. Neither of them were aware of the severity of the power failure before the phone calls, he noted.

Mullen said there were a lot of things to discuss, especially the delay of school openings. The city's schools opened an hour late on Tuesday.

He likened the power failure to the "blackouts" during World War II when Old Ledger Building Doubtful As Juvenile Court

Reports circulating in Quincy Center this week have the old Patriot Ledger building on Temple St. becoming a juvenile court.

But, it apparently is not going to happen.

A county source told The Sun Tuesday that the idea "is dead" and said lack of off-street parking was a main reason.

Mayor James Sheets acknowledged Tuesday that he and his executive secretary, Michael McFarland, had talked with the county commissioners about the possibility of a juvenile court being located at the long-idle building which has been vacant and up for sale for nearly eight years.

The Ledger, which still owns the building and has been trying to sell it, moved to new quarters in Crown Colony in 1988. The original asking price reportedly was in the $1 million to $2 million category although it is now assessed well under.

When asked about the building, Sheets told The Sun his impression after talking with the commissioners was that they are not inclined to make a deal with the Ledger because of existing parking problems in the downtown area.

He said he agreed the parking problems should be addressed first before such a deal went through.

"I don't think the Ledger building is an option for the court system," he said.

He also said, "There has been no contact between the Ledger and this office on that building."

William Ketter, editor of the Ledger, when asked about the possibility of the Temple St. building becoming a juvenile court, indicated that it was news to him.

"I have no idea," he said when asked by The Sun.

Sheets said he talked with the county commissioners after a meeting of a "task force" he meets weekly with on Wednesdays.

It was mentioned at the meeting that the Norfolk County court system "is looking for courtrooms for juvenile courts," he said.

And someone, he said he did not remember who, brought up the Ledger

Environmental Impact Minimal, Authorities Say 800 Gallons Of Home Heating Fuel Spill After Truck And Car Collide

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

About 800 gallons of home heating fuel spilled after a car and truck collided Monday morning at Dimmock and Burgin Parkway, but authorities are confident the environmental impact will be minimal.

The accident, which closed a section of Burgin Parkway for nine hours, involved a passenger car driven by 72-year-old Rosalie Branton of Brae Road in Quincy and an oil truck driven by 28-year-old James Stewart of Holbrook.

Police said Branton and Stewart were each taken to Quincy Hospital. Branton complained of chest pain while Stewart, whose truck flipped over on its side onto a sidewalk, walked away from the scene. Stewart had minor injuries, including lacerations. Neither Branton nor Stewart were admitted.

According to police, Branton was driving east on Dimmock Street when the accident happened at about 9 a.m. near the end of the morning commute. Police said the car and the truck, which was heading north on Burgin Parkway, collided. The truck apparently swerved to avoid impact, hit a sign and flipped over, knocking down a light pole and tree.

Branton was cited for failing to stop at a red light, police said.

The truck was carrying about 1800 gallons of heating oil when the accident happened. Lt. John Menz, Quincy fire department hazardous materials officer, said about 800 gallons spilled from the aluminum storage tank. The remaining product was siphoned into an oil reclamation truck at the scene.

Although a significant amount of oil ran down Burgin Parkway, leaked into the catch basins and reached the Furnace Brook and Black's Creek, Menz said about "99 percent" of the oil should be recovered.

"Some product got into the Furnace Brook. I wouldn't be surprised if it were a couple of hundred gallons. I'd say 99 percent of it will be recovered. The tide was in so we could contain (the spill) better," Menz said.

Booms and highly-absorbent pads were placed at several locations along Furnace Brook to contain and clean up the spill, including near the MBTA bridge, on Hudson St. behind the Armory and on Southern Artery near Black's Creek. Menz said crews were on the scene on Tuesday and that the cleanup would probably be finished in a few days.

The rollover knocked one tree down and another was removed by the Quincy Forestry Department on Tuesday because of the spill. Menz said a 20 by 10-foot section of contaminated soil will be replaced by good soil.

Menz credited crews from Cyn Environmental, the Department of Environmental Protection and the Coast Guard with working quickly to minimize the environmental impact. DEP is notified of any spill over 10 gallons. The Coast Guard responds if there is a chance the problem could impact the ocean.

Menz said no oil reached Quincy Bay. He said Black's Creek was the fuel's farthest point.

At least 60 pounds of Speedy Dry (cat litter without the deodorizer) was spread on Burgin Parkway. The oil was swept up and removed by Cyn Environmental for proper disposal, Menz said.

Menz and other officials at the scene agreed the situation could have been a lot worse.

"After the truck flipped over, the motor was still running. It was also lying on top of a utility pole which was still active. Those first responding helped the injured people and shut off the engine. Luckily, Mass Electric came quickly and shut off the power line.

"There's a potential for something like that (a disaster) when you come in contact with electricity," Menz said. A similar accident involving a gas truck would have been much more dangerous, he added.

As many as 12 different local and state agencies responded to the accident. They included Quincy Fire, Quincy Police, Department of Public Works, Emergency Management, Quincy Health Department, Coast Guard, MWRA and the State Police Truck Team which investigates accidents involving trucks.

Burgin Parkway, from Dimmock St. to Presidents Lane, reopened to vehicular traffic around 6 p.m. Monday, Menz said.

Rain, Melting Snow Cause Flooding Sewage Dumped Into Bay

A combination of heavy rain and melting snow resulted in sewage and flooding problems over the weekend, according to Quincy Department of Works Commissioner David Colton.

Colton said Monday the flooding situation was "pretty much back to normal," although it was a busy weekend for about two dozen DPW employees who worked to help residents with flooding problems in their basements.

Most of the basement flooding occurred in South

Quincy section of the city, Colton said. He added that the majority of sewage problems took place in Adams Shore, specifically in the vicinity of Sea Street and Moffat Road.

Colton said the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) system was "overtaxed" by the rains and melting snow, forcing the MWRA to bypass its Nut Island treatment center in order to get sewage out more quickly and keep it from backing into homes.

"It was an extraordinary amount of water in the system," he said.

MWRA officials said this week the Nut Island plant has dumped 60 million gallons of sewage treated only with chlorine into the ocean water. On Monday, officials said the overflow could continue for several more days, making it one of the worst spills on record.

While dumping sewage can pose a threat to beaches and shellfish beds, Colton said damage caused should be "temporary and minimal" because the sewage is so diluted by rainwater.

Sheets In Washington For Mayor's Conference

Mayor James Sheets left for Washington, D.C. Tuesday to attend the annual winter conference of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Sheets said he and the other mayors from across the country were scheduled to meet with President Clinton today (Thursday) at a reception from 3 to 4 p.m. Following that meeting, Sheets was to join the other mayors in meeting with Sen. Edward Kennedy at 5 p.m.

The mayor said he hoped to discuss several issues pertaining to the city, including Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding, the planned return of shipbuilding to the Fore River shipyard, and the future use of Naval facilities at Squantum Gardens. He added, however, that he was unsure how much time he would have with the senator since other mayors had their own topics for discussion.

Sheets was scheduled to return from the nation's capital Friday afternoon. City Council President Peter Kolson will be acting mayor in his absence.

Cahill Candidate For County Treasurer

TIM CAHILL

City Councillor Tim Cahill is a candidate for the office of Norfolk County treasurer.

Cahill, 37, announced Tuesday he will seek the Democratic nomination in this fall's election.

Cahill, who is starting his fifth term as a councillor at-large, said that if elected he will complete his term as councillor and serve full-time as treasurer.

The treasurer's post is now held by Robert Hall, a Republican from Needham.

"I see the treasurer's job as an opportunity to continue serving the public in a position where I can save the county money and ensure that county employees are treated fairly," Cahill told The Sun.

"I intend to serve as a full-time treasurer and hope to instill pride in the office and prove to Governor Weld that there is a place for county government in Massachusetts."

Weld has been pushing to abolish county government.

"I intend to make a formal announcement of my candidacy in early spring and will campaign vigorously throughout the entire county and not simply use Quincy as a springboard," he said.

"It is time to end the politics and the lawsuits that have emanated from the treasurer's office for the past six years," Cahill said.

Hall has a suit against the Norfolk County commissioners over who controls the data processing in the county--the treasurer's office or the commissioners.

Cahill has served as chairman of the city council's Finance Committee and Economic Development Committee in the past.

He notes that the council, while he was Finance Committee chairman, cut the mayor's budget $300,000 one year.

"This set the tone," he said, "for fiscal responsibility in the city and a stable tax rate for the last two years."

Cahill said that as a small businessman with 14 years experience, he is a fiscal conservative. He is the former owner of the Handshakes restaurant in Quincy Center and at present has a courier business.

Cahill has served on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board and is a member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Cahill was born in Norwood and has lived in Quincy 35 years.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT TB

More and more these days, you are likely to come across the mention of tuberculosis (TB). Often these mentions are tucked in the obituaries of the elderly or of people with AIDS. What does this mean for the average person? Everyone should be aware that TB can still be very much of a threat to health. TB is an infectious, contagious bacterial disease, whose symptoms often include a persistent cough, a cough that brings up blood, lack of appetite, weight loss, night sweats and fever. Untreated, TB can kill. Caught early, the bacteria can be eradicated. TB testing is essential, especially for those most at risk, including children, the elderly and people who live or work in crowded quarters.

P.S. Tuberculosis is the world's leading cause of death from infectious disease.

TB testing is essential for early detection, especially as new strains are making treatment more difficult. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli makes sure you receive the tests necessary for your health. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. We make our patients feel at home.

Cahill Will Get Nice Send-Off

Tim Cahill's decision to run for Norfolk County treasurer will come as welcomed news to mayoral and council at-large hopefuls.

But they shouldn't get too excited, too soon.

If Cahill unseats Republican treasurer incumbent Robert Hill, it doesn't mean he will quickly disappear from the local political scene.

First of all, he says if he is elected treasurer, he will complete his city council term which would still have a year to go.

That means no special general election to fill the seat. And no council appointment to fill it.

In the latter case, if there was a vacancy and tradition was followed, the spot would go to Larry Chretien, who gave up the Ward 3 seat to run at-large and finished fourth in the runner-up spot.

But opportunity would be knocking in 1997 with Cahill completing his term and creating an at-large vacancy.

Chretien would probably have another go at it. And two or three of the present ward councillors would give it a good look.

It would be inviting for Peter Kolson (Ward 1) who would be going into that election campaign while still city council president. Dan Raymondi (Ward 2) Steve Durkin (Ward 5) and Bruce Ayers (Ward 6) would give it serious consideration.

And, that of course, would open up a couple or more ward seats.

Mayor James Sheets and those who would like to succeed Sheets will probably give Cahill a nice send-off as he launches his campaign for treasurer.

Cahill has long been considered one of four potential mayoral candidate and the most likely of them to challenge Sheets in 1997 if the latter runs for a fifth term which he is expected to do.

As county treasurer, Cahill would be out of that scenario.

The other three considered future mayoral contenders are Paul Harold, Michael Cheney and Raymondi. With Cahill out of the way, it narrows the competition down. But does it?

In politics there is always a but.

"If I am elected county treasurer, I intend to complete the six year term," Cahill says.

By that time he will still be only 43. Still young enough—with time to spare—to someday return and run for mayor.

Six years might be good timing. Sheets could still be in the mayor's office finishing up his last term in the new century.

"I'm not saying I would never run for mayor," says Cahill. "You don't close doors."

Ah, politics.

MAYOR SHEETS presented several reasons last week for not running for Congress this year but he overlooked one big one.

If he had run, it would have meant two Quincy candidates chasing the Democratic nomination which would not have been politically wise.

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt announced his candidacy last November, moments after Gerry Studds said he was retiring. And Delahunt wasn't about to back off for Sheets.

With Sheets a candidate, it would have split the crucial Quincy vote, weakening both Delahunt and him and allow some other Democrat in the district to grab the nomination. Like, for example, Harwich businessman Steve Ford, a former aide to Studds, who is an announced candidate. Other district Democrats are expected to get into the race.

As the lone Quincy candidate in 1992 Paul Harold came out of Quincy with a whopping vote but it didn't stop Studds who rolled to victory in other parts of the district.

A split in the Quincy vote between Delahunt and Sheets could have derailed both of them.

And this was why when Sheets was saying he was still giving thought to running, most political observers were saying he wouldn't.

FRIENDS AND COLLEAGUES will honor Mary Catherine Iannoni, a Quincy education legend, at a retirement party today (Thursday) from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club Clendale Rd.

She recently retired as head guidance counselor at Central Middle School, closing out a distinguished 50-year education career. She had served at Broad Meadows Junior High School prior to Central.

Students who had her as a teacher or guidance counselor were fortunate. She was dedicated to them—giving them her all, year after year. And that was a lot of devotion, understanding and teaching talent.

The committee includes Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, Central Principal Lou DiMartinis, former Principal Vin Moscardelli, Camille Courtney and Mary Lou Petrelli. Tickets are $15 and may be obtained from committee members or at the door.

Happy retirement, beautiful. You deserve many years of it.

DID YOU KNOW that almost half this year's City Council members are bachelors? Bruce Ayers (Ward 6) was the lone bachelor last year but is now joined by three more: Pat McDermott (Ward 3), Michael D'Amico (Ward 4) and Paul Harold, at large.

And, by the way, isn't this Leap Year?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1951 POSTCARD of the old Mayflower Diner on Southern Artery. At that time the Artery was Route 3, and from Boston it was the main road to Nantasket and points south to Cape Cod. This is now the site of a McDonald's restaurant. Brand new at the time of this photo this gleaming stainless steel structure had replaced the original bus shaped blue diner. In 1951 six other similar diners prospered in Quincy. They were: DeVoe's and Glover's on Hancock St. in North Quincy, the United on Hancock St. in Wollaston, the Pilgrim and Eddie's in Quincy Ave. and the Capeway on Washington St.

He Didn't Like The Snow Plowing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Farmer's Almanac calls for more, and unless Quincy has a special deal with Mother Nature, this could be one of our most snow-filled winters on record.

During the week of Jan. 7-13, Greater Boston was hit with three storms that dumped over two feet of snow and more than a half-inch of rain before the week finally ended. The mayor went on record saying what a great job Quincy did when it came to plowing our streets, but School Supt. Eugene Creighton had to close all schools most of the week and Grades K-8 for the entire week.

The problem, I feel, was that Quincy just hasn't kept up with the storms in the same timely fashion as, say, Weymouth, Milton and Boston to our south, west and north respectively. Quincy fell behind with the New Year Blizzard (Jan. 2 and 3) and went down for the count after that. Since then, we've gotten a Blizzard of Rhetoric from City Hall about the great work being done but that was simply talk. The MDC is to be commended for the great work they did along Quincy Shore Drive, but that agency wasn't using foolish little pick-up trucks with plows attached.

Contracting out plowing to folks with small pickups isn't the answer. You get what you pay for, after all. The side streets of North Quincy and Wollaston were scary-looking and nearly impassable for emergency vehicles such as fire apparatus and ambulances. The city even copped out by turning a number of two-ways into one-way streets.

I can't believe the condition that neighborhood streets were left in. Apparently, the new motto for Quincy must be: "God put it there, God can take it away." I traveled through various Boston neighborhoods such as Charlestown, the North End, South Boston and Mission Hill and a city with few driveways was head over heels better when it came to plowing snow and clearing roads. Boston, Milton and Weymouth picked up a passing grade from me while I flunked the City of Quincy.

Two years ago, Atlantic Street was designated an Emergency Artery by the city. During this winter from hell, a Beacon Hill cowpath probably was more passable for cars to navigate. This winter is still young and more storms will find that jet stream to New England. We may get more blizzards of epic proportions or pains in the you-know-where Alberta Clippers. Quincy had better improve their act considerably.

It is time for Quincy to contract for bigger pieces of plowing apparatus or better still do it themselves as was done in the past. We don't contract police or fire services and perhaps plowers should be right up there as a public safety measure.

Police Made Holidays Happier For Special Needs Children

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As the feelings of the holiday season are fast leaving our minds, being replaced with thoughts of bills and snow, I write to say "thank you" to Detective Robert Clark and all of the wonderful police officers who gave their time and money to make the holidays extra special for some of the special needs children in the Quincy area.

Detective Clark planned and orchestrated a perfect Christmas party held at Pat Flanagan's on the Parkway. The children were entertained by a clown and music, had all of the pizza and soda that they wanted, and were presented gifts by Santa! The Police Athletic League (PAL) program headed by Detective Clark, is certainly to be commended for a job well done. The families were invited, and the spirit of Christmas was present at every table!

For some, the holidays can be a depressing time, but on this day, there were no sad eyes. In the words of one child, "I have been counting the hours until the party!"

Detective Clark and his fellow officers are to be commended and admired for a job well done!

Council, Committee Clash Over NQHS Land Taking

By PAUL HAROLD

The School Committee's vote to take 11 homes for expansion of NQHS came in direct opposition to a vote of the City Council that authorized a $12.5 million bond that prohibited land taking.

Mayor Walter Hannon, however, thought that "this modest land taking" could gain council approval. He and other city officials had met with state Secretary of Education Paul Parks, who noted that the "council bond" might not receive 65 percent state reimbursement.

Council President Arthur Tobin labeled the taking of homes on Hunt and Oliver Streets "cruel" and scheduled a special meeting of the council to address the issue.

150 ATTEND CHRISTMAS AWARDS NIGHT

One hundred and fifty people attended the annual Christmas Festival Awards Night at Peter's Landing on the Southern Artery.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Win Bettinson of WJDA, with speakers, John Kerrigan, QCBCA director, David Leitch the association's president and general chairman of the festival activities George Fay.

Gnocchi From Leftover Spuds

What do you do with two leftover baked potatoes? Especially if you don't like tossing them. Would you believe I made home-made gnocchi? (It's a pasta usually made with potatoes and flour.)

It happened recently at our house (a rarity to even have leftovers). I decided to try using them for the gnocchi. It turned out to be a lot easier making them for two instead of 15 or 20 as is the custom.

Gnocchi For Two

two potatoes (mashed)
1 tablespoon sour cream (which was also leftover from the baked potatoes) in place of half an egg which I didn't have.

1 cup flour enough water to make a smooth dough. (add more flour if needed)

Mix the potatoes with the sour cream and add the flour and water and work with the mixture on a floured board until you can handle it without it being sticky.

After the dough is blended, roll it in long strips, cut in bite size pieces. With your finger, slide each piece on the floured board until an air pocket forms. (if you don't care to do this, just cut the dough and leave it just as it is)

In salted boiling water, add the gnocchi and cook until they float on the top. Drain and add tomato sauce and grated cheese and you've got it made!

Cause Of Huge Power Outage Still Sought

officials were looking into the situation.

David Tedone, a spokesman for Massachusetts Electric, said about 11,000 of its 35,000 customers in Quincy were affected by the problem. The initial power failure in North Weymouth originated in the manholes near the Edgar substation, he noted, although at press time he also did not know the exact cause.

Tedone credited the employees at Boston Edison for repairing the problem so quickly. He noted that the power of about 3,500 customers was restored in about two hours and that everyone "other than a couple of scattered customers here and there" had their power back by 7:30 a.m.

Monahan added the "a very small part" of Weymouth also was briefly affected by the problem.

Mayor James Sheets, who toured part of the city during the outage, also praised the Edison workers as well as Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Police Chief Francis Mullen and Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano for their efforts during the outage.

"They did a great job," he said. "We got a handle on it very quickly."

Gorman said flood water likely was what caused the problems in the Edgar substation manholes but added at press time that was not a certainty. He noted that the outage caused a chain reaction from North Weymouth down to the corner of Washington Street and Ring Avenue in Quincy Point that resulted in a number of explosions that lifted up manholes and caused fire and smoke to pour out of some of them.

"And the manhole at Ring Ave. and Washington threw a lot of water into the street," he added.

Gorman said a number of alarms across the city also went off as a result of the power loss.

"We were hampered with alarms," he said. "The fire and police departments received numerous calls due to the activation of alarms."

The fire department also checked on senior citizens throughout Quincy and evacuated tunnel workers at the Town River Project, the chief noted.

Gorman said there were no injuries during the outage, adding that the city was lucky the problem occurred in the early morning.

"I'm quite sure it would have been different if it had happened during rush hour," he said.

The outage also had other effects on the city:

"Because the city's traffic signals were not operating, Police Chief Francis Mullen had extra police officers on the streets waving flashlights as well as police cars with blue lights turned on to further improve visibility."

School Supt. Eugene Creedon called for a one-hour delay in the opening of all Quincy Public Schools in order to ensure the safety of the students.

"The Patriot Ledger" required production of its Tuesday newspapers at The Boston Herald. Editor William Ketter said The Ledger was able to get all of its papers on time (although it was forced to print a single two-section edition instead of its usual three four-section editions) because of a special "cooperative arrangement" with The Herald that is used in times of emergency.

Quincy Hospital switched to an emergency generator until power was restored.

Five of the city's 10 elderly housing complexes and three nursing homes lost their electricity. Sheets said the city was preparing to evacuate some senior citizens, but that was not necessary because the power was restored so quickly.

The outage was the first major power failure for the city since June 1989, when about 4,800 customers in North Quincy and Wollaston lost power for 13 hours after an explosion and fire at a substation on Hancock Street in Wollaston.

Outage Like WWII Blackout people had to pull down their shades so there would be no visible lighting. He said that Washington Street was "so pitch black you couldn't see a thing" and the fact that there was no visible moonlight made it seem darker.

Mullen said he then instructed all officers cars to turn on the blue lights on their cars for safety and said as he gazed down Washington Street, "it looked like a beacon with all those blue lights"

The power was restored by 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Board Denies Transfer Request From Brannigan's

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday denied a request from Brannigan's to transfer stock from Mark DiBona to his brother Robert DiBona.

Mark DiBona, who owns half of Brannigan's with the current manager Ed Maloney, also owns Cagney's. He told the board he "needs the capital from the sale" to run Cagney's properly.

His brother Robert, who is seeking to purchase Mark's half of the business, told the board that the transfer "seems so simple and has turned into such a commotion." He assured the board that there would be no problems with him owning half of Brannigan's and his relationship with Maloney.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he thought it appeared to be an "internal disagreement" between both parties and said "are we going to come back again next month with the same problem?"

The board had written to Steve McGrath, city solicitor about the corporate dispute in which McGrath stated that if either party was unhappy with the the board's decision, the owners could appeal to the ABCC.

Atty. Lou Casses representing Maloney apologized to the board for appearing before them for the third time and called the issue a "blatant power play" on the part of the DiBonas.

DiBona's attorney, Bill Sullivan said "Mark has been held captive in his own corporation."

In making the motion to deny, Building Inspector Matt Mulvey cited two reasons: The Source of repayment of the loan (if purchased) was not clear and relations between the proposed parties, does not appear to be working out.

Seconding the motion was Fire Chief Thomas Gorman who said, "we can sit here all morning as to who wants to be the owner, who doesn't."

Police Chief Francis Mullen told the DiBonas and Maloney, "you people have to come to an agreement between yourselves" before appearing again before the board.

Lottery Changes Keno Policy

In a policy change from the State Lottery, any business that wants Keno in their operation has to advertise from now on in the newspaper and then notify the Quincy License Board.

Chairman Joseph Shea told the board at Tuesday's meeting that each month the Lottery will advertise those persons applying for Keno license in the newspaper. The license board will respond to each applicant.

Board members had expressed disapproval to convenience stores having Keno distracting those persons wanting merely to purchase "bread and milk."

Shea said this is the first time he had received a list of Keno applicants. They are as follows:

Darby's Public House, Washington Street; Granite Rail; Cottage Avenue; Sully's Bar, Chestnut Street; Alfredo's

Restaurant, Franklin St.; S & S Beale St. Diner; Well's Grill, Hancock Street; Old Colony Liquors, Southern Artery; and the Corner Food Mart (near Central Middle School).

The board objected only to the Corner Food Mart because of its proximity to Central.

Shea said he would contact the manager of Keno licenses and forward the information to him.

PROCESSION INCLUDING Bernard Cardinal Law leaves Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy following funeral Mass for Fr. Cornelius Heery, longtime pastor of the church.

1,500 Attend Funeral Mass For Beloved Sacred Heart Pastor Fr. Heery Fondly Remembered For His Kindness, Caring

By MICHAEL WHALEN

An estimated 1,500 mourners overflowed Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy last Thursday to attend the funeral Mass of the Rev. Cornelius Heery, longtime pastor of the church.

The Mass was celebrated by Bernard Cardinal Law, who said Fr. Heery was known of his caring manner and "not only 'talked the talk'" but also "walked the walk" of priesthood.

The Rev. Cornelius McRae, spiritual director of the North American College in Rome who traveled from there to give the homily of the Mass, said "kindness" is the one word he thinks of when he remembers the late Sacred Heart pastor.

Fr. Heery, 72, died Jan. 12—one day short of his 20th anniversary as pastor of Sacred Heart—at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton. He had spent a week in the hospital after suffering a heart attack Jan. 5.

Fr. Heery had served at various other area churches before becoming pastor of Sacred Heart on Jan. 13, 1976. In addition, he was the longest-serving vicar in the history of the archdiocese, serving as episcopal vicar of the Quincy Vicariate. He was in the first group appointed as vicars in the early 1970s.

The funeral Mass was attended by bishops, priests, religious sisters, city officials, representatives from churches of other faiths, students from North Quincy High School (where Fr. Heery was active with the football team and other aspects of student life), parishioners, friends and family members. The overflow crowd filled the church's chapel and extended into the basement, where another large group watched the Mass on closed-circuit television.

Fr. Timothy Harrison, parochial vicar at Sacred Heart, said approximately 1,500 people attended the Mass. Among them were about 250 priests, which represents about "a good solid quarter" of those in the archdiocese, he added.

During the Mass, Cardinal Law commented on the "uncommonly large number of priests and bishops" that was in attendance and said it was a fitting tribute to Fr. Heery.

"From the moment that I came here, no one welcomed me more warmly than did Fr. Neil," he said. "He in his own life exemplified how priesthood gives us a joy and a peace that is incomparable. He not only 'talked the talk,' but he 'walked the walk' of priesthood."

The cardinal added that

Fr. Heery's caring manner was evident to all, not only those who knew him at Sacred Heart.

"He cooperated so fully in anything that was asked of him beyond the parish," he said.

Fr. McRae, during his homily, also said Fr. Heery was well-known for his kindness.

"But a very special kindness," said Fr. McRae. "The kindness we have met in Fr. Heery is a God-like quality. This is what is meant for Fr. Heery to be a priest: kindness like that of God."

"In this gentle priest, we have been able to glimpse the loving kindness of our God. Surely, this does not exaggerate the gentle kindness that Fr. Heery displayed in his 45 years as a priest."

That kindness, Fr. McRae added, was particularly strong when directed toward "three distinct family groups"—Fr. Heery's own family, the parishioners he served at various churches over the years, and his fellow priests.

"Is there a person in this church today who does not know that kindness that has been received from this good and loving priest?" asked Fr. McRae.

Fr. Heery was ordained in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston on FAMILY MEMBERS OF Fr. Cornelius Heery and parishioners of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy mourn following funeral Mass last Thursday.

April 11, 1951. He served the parishes of St. Ann's in Marshfield, Our Lady of Mercy in Belmont, Holy Family in Rockland and St. Thomas More in Braintree before becoming pastor of Sacred Heart.

He was a graduate of St. John's Seminary in Brighton and attended Boston College for two years and St. Charles College in Maryland for two years.

His survivors include a brother, Thomas Heery of Brockton; a sister, Mary Morton of Mansfield; and many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grand-nephews.

A Former Altar Boy's Tribute To Fr. Heery

By JIM TIMMINS

It is somehow appropriate that the last ministerial act of Father Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Parish in North Quincy, involved his visiting a sick parishioner at home, to deliver the Eucharist.

His final act was representative of his life as a priest - ministering to his parishioners, one on one, in a manner that giving each of us to feel that he was our own.

And it is more than metaphor that when Father Heery died, he died of a heart attack. This kind and giving man was called by God only after his heart could give no more.

Father Heery died two weeks ago, after 20 years of devotion and service to the parish of Sacred Heart, and the community of North Quincy, both of which he loved so deeply. His passing represents an extraordinary loss to so many - each touched by this humble man who gave us "a glimpse of the loving kindness of God."

His manner was unique. He had a way of ministering to the thousands of people who were his flock - his parish while at the same time touching each individual in a uniquely personal way. He ministered to the parish by ministering to each of its parishioners, individually, with a kindness and devotion which seemed limitless.

His friend and colleague, Rev. Cornelius McRae, perhaps said it best when he asked, during his eulogy, "Is there a person in this church today who does not know the kindness of this good, loving priest?" Each of the 1500 strong knew of what Father McRae spoke that is the legacy of Cornelius Heery.

Twenty years ago, when Father Heery came to Sacred Heart, the parish was in decline. Attendance at masses was down, parish revenues were unstable; the challenge presented was enormous. Twenty years later, Sacred Heart saw perhaps its finest hour, when the church overflowed with people who came to say good-bye to this wonderful man who presided over the spiritual rebirth of their parish.

His method was simple. He came before the people of Sacred Heart in January of 1976, extended his arms, and reached out to all of us. He never once asked for anything from any of us. Instead, he gave of himself - so fully and so unconditionally - until we gave back to the parish in return.

Mass attendance steadily grew; the five o'clock Mass on Sunday became a favorite for the youth of the parish - and youths from other parishes - with his encouragement of folk music at the Mass. The parish became revitalized as this compassionate priest reached out to young and old alike, making all feel welcome and loved in his church.

We learned during his funeral Mass that his colleagues, too, benefited from his enormous compassion. Cardinal Bernard Law, the principal Celebrant, told those gathered how "Father Connie" would drop him occasional letters, advising him to watch out for his own health, and not to try to do too much for others. Cardinal Law referred to this as "the pot calling the kettle black." We all laughed, but many, perhaps wistfully so; had Father Heery listened to his own advice, we might not have had to so soon say good-bye to this man, this spiritual anchor of North

SACRED HEART CHURCH choir sings during funeral Mass for Fr. Cornelius Heery, pastor of the church since 1976.

Quincy for the past 20 years.

Father McRae, in his eulogy, called Sacred Heart a "bustling and thriving parish." So true, today.

That is the legacy of Father Heery. That, and the feeling that each of us had in our hearts when Fr. McRae asked us whether we knew of "the kindness of this good, loving priest."

(Editor's note: Jim Timmins, a former altar boy and lector at Sacred Heart, is one of the many fortunate people whose life was deeply touched by Father Heery.)

Hockey Association as a volunteer ice skating instructor and coach for 25 years. And as corporation clerk for 20.

He has taught several thousand youngsters from 5 to 9 years in groups of 150 at a time how to skate. Classes are held early Saturday nights from September to April.

But the kids get to learn more than ice skating. They get to learn a little about life and how they should prepare themselves for it.

Each Saturday night before skating instructions, McConville gives the youngsters a pep talk on the meaning of a word such as friendship, leadership, sportsmanship and scholarship. He explains how important these words will be in their future lives.

McConville gives the youngsters the word, explains what it means and then tells them to shout it back at him. And they don't forget that word—or its meaning.

The kids were certainly listening when he was stressing the word scholarship. Some 10 of his skating pupils grew up and went on to West Point and other service academies on full scholarships. And others to colleges.

McConville was nominated by Beverly Reinhardt,

Quincy Youth Hockey rink manager and Lorraine Rooney, QYHA secretary and treasurer, who cited his volunteer work with the Quincy Youth Hockey Association and service with the city.

"He is most deserving," Reinhardt said. "Joe does a wonderful job."

"He has served the city of Quincy well in unpaid positions," noted Rooney.

In addition to teaching ice skating, McConville has coached youth hockey teams from Mites to Bantams and has seen some of his players go on to become college hockey standouts.

He has also coached Babe Ruth baseball and was co-founder of the Whiffle Ball Mini-League.

McConville has given many years of service to the city including 10 on the Planning Board, nine of them as chairman. He retired from that board two years ago.

He served six years on the Salary Survey Committee, 10 on the Quincy High School Business Education Advisory Board and was chairman of the Professional Conditions Committee of the Quincy public school system four years.

He has served the city in unpaid positions under Mayors James McIntyre, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, Frank McCauley and James Sheets.

McConville has been active in the Merrymount Association and at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church and in the St. Vincent dePaul Society. He is past president of the Our Lady Holy Name Society and past president of the Parish Council.

He is a 1947 graduate of North Quincy High School and Northeastern University in 1961. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1951 to 1954 during the Korean War.

He is married to the former Barbara Donahue and they will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary in June. They have five children:

Joseph McConville III, of Attleboro, vice president of Holsom Burns frame manufacturers; Army Major James McConville in Hawaii; John McConville of Quincy, a Navy engineer, Paul McConville of Arlington Heights, Ill., a vice president of Putnam Funds and Mary Kate Falkenstrom of Bellingham, a registered nurse who was a recent recipient of a Nurse of the Year Award.

They also have six grandchildren.

Delahunt Endorsed By Brockton Mayor

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt of Quincy has been endorsed by Brockton Mayor Jack Yunitis in his bid for the Democratic nomination for the 10th Congressional seat.

Yunitis said that Delahunt "understands the needs of working people", and "he understands that what's being proposed by the Republicans in Congress today will be disastrous for cities like Brockton."

Accepting the endorsement, Delahunt said, "The Mayor's support and confidence are very important to me. I am running for Congress because I want to stop the Republican attack on Medicare, Medicaid, student loans, and all the basic programs that have helped working people succeed in improving their lives. These programs are being sacrificed in Washington so that the Republicans can give tax cuts to the rich. We cannot and must not stand idle as the Republican attack on the middle class intensified.

Mayor Yunitis recognizes the unfairness of the Republican agenda, and I am pleased to have his support in my effort to bring some rationality to the discussion.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Are Investment Properties Making A Comeback?

By ARTHUR FOLEY

I have previously done an analysis of single-family and two-family homes in Quincy. Today, I'd like to concentrate on investment multi-families, which is defined as 4-8 unit buildings.

Quincy has a very healthy stock of investment properties but this group, like all others, has suffered from the big real estate decline.

The following is a chart of the statistical history of 4-8 unit properties in the City of Quincy.

Naturally, the sample of properties sold is much smaller than other groups and therefore the "average selling price" statistics is less reliable but it still indicates a trend.

The "average selling price" from 1989 to 1995 shows a decline of 46 percent. Except for 1990, there is a steady decline each year through 1994. Last year, 1995, is the first year showing an increase which is 4 percent over the previous year. This is consistent with the other groups of properties. In the list of sales, two properties were sold twice during the seven-year period:

4 - 8 UNIT PROPERTIES - QUINCY

Year	# SOLD	Average Selling Price
1989	25	$309,819
1990	15	$195,400
1991	13	$ 234,350
1992	16	$206,613
1993	20	$173,200
1994	33	$160,163
1995	25	$167,205

*111-113 Atlantic St. (six units): sold 5/13/89 for $430,000; sold 5/13/94 for $260,000 (a 40 percent decline).

*34 Warwick St. (five units): sold 1/6/89 for $355,000; sold 9/13/94 for $225,000 (a 37 percent decline).

These two sales, called paired sales, are very helpful since it removes a lot of other variables from the analysis. So while the group as a whole shows a 46 percent decline, the paired sales show a similar decline, be it somewhat smaller.

The important statistic is the first increase in five years in the average selling price from 1994 to 1995. This is consistent with the turnaround in other property groups. Is this a long-term trend? Are we at the bottom of the cycle and on the way up? If the government balances the federal budget and the economy improves and interest rates decline further, then we are at the bottom of the cycle and on the way up.

In the year 2000 we may look back and say, "Boy, we should have bought some multi-families back in the mid-90s!"

City Receives $75,000 For First-Time Homebuyers

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin announce that the City of Quincy has been allocated $75,000 from the Soft Second Loan Fund.

The Massachusetts Housing Partners (MHP) is responsible for distribution of the grant. The fund is designed to provide assistance to lower- and middle-income families who are interested in buying a home for the first time.

"Many hard-working families who have been unable in the past to invest in a new home will now be able to do so," said Morrissey.

"Grants are only given to cities and towns that can prove that lower- and middle-income families can afford to purchase homes there," said Bellotti.

The size of each community's grant is based on an in-depth study conducted by the MHP. The MHP receives requests from communities who are interested in being part of this program.

"The MHP decides on whether or not to award grants to each community based on various statistics, such as a community's per capita income, availability of housing, average price for buying a house and whether the program has been successful in the past," said Mariano. "These statistics also determine the size of the grant."

Individual buyers can inquire about this program through city officials, local banks and real estate agents. People who have put in a request to reserve funds from this program are then required to find a home to purchase within 30 days. In 1996, buyers should have their loan closed with their bank no later than June 30. Prospective buyers who miss that date will have their funding reservation terminated.

The average size of the MHP subsidy is $5,000. Communities which do not utilize all the funds awards to them will have the remainder redistributed to other communities. The MHP works with more than 40 participating banks which will receive the grant money directly from the MHP and apply it to the home buyer's loan.

"The City of Quincy has been a recipient of this highly successful program for several years," said Tobin.

More than 120 communities are involved with the program, and more than 1,000 homeowners have received benefits from the program state-wide since 1990. It is expected that several hundred more will do so this year, as approximately $2 million has been reserved. For more information, call Lori Moring at the Quincy Planning and Community Development Department, 376-1379.

Quincy's Shooting Goes South In 70-59 Loss To Barnstable

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
Quincy High School boys' basketball team was still aiming for its second win of the season Tuesday when the Presidents traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham.

The Presidents, which suffered a shooting collapse against Barnstable on Saturday, was also scheduled to visit Taunton Wednesday before bouncing back home against Falmouth Friday at 7 p.m.

In its make-up game against Barnstable, the Presidents hung with the other Red Raiders before backfiring on offense. Tied at 54-54 with three minutes, Quincy missed nine straight field goals while Barnstable rattled off some big buckets, including two three-pointers down the stretch.

"We went into a spell where we didn't make a single basket. We shot 0-for-9. That was the difference in the game," said Coach John Franceschini Jr.

The Presidents were led by senior guard Jeff Russell's 15 points and 7 assists, and senior guard Todd Sullivan's 14 points and 9 rebounds. Sullivan found the stroke from three-point land, popping in 4 of 5 from "downtown."

Junior forward Geoff King added 8 points and Bob Walsh, another junior forward, grabbed eight rebounds. Franceschini also noted the strong defensive play of senior guard Dave Gunther, who covered one of Barnstable's main threats well before fouling out.

The loss dropped Quincy to 1-7 overall, 1-5 in the Old Colony League. Barnstable improved to 4-5, 3-4 in league play.

Franceschini said at the start of the season that scoring would be the team's main road to success. That's just what has happened. The coach noted the Presidents' are shooting a mere 34.5 percent as team at this juncture of the schedule.

"Our poor shooting has been our demise. It's not been happening for us shooting the ball. We've had five losses of five points or less. That's a factor. When you're not putting it in, that becomes the different in a hurry," Franceschini said.

North Quincy Freshman Girls Improve To 6-4

The North Quincy freshman girls basketball team posted a 2-1 record in recent action to improve their season mark to 6-4.

The Raiders followed Lauren Liuzzo's hot shooting and Marcia Hem's defense to an 18-8 first-half lead over Quincy. Shannon Hillis contributed 6 second-half points while Marianne Weiler and Nicole Weiler each had 2 points as the Raiders rolled to a 35-23 victory. Nine players, led by Liuzzo's 16, scored for the Raiders.

Donna Damata led

Quincy with eight points. Leanne Martin, Liz Ashworth and Heather Schatzl (4 points) worked hard on both ends to keep the Presidents in the game.

Against Plymouth South, Rachel Powers scored 6 points and had three assists to lead North Quincy to a 26-22 road victory. Lauren Shields and Rachel O'Hara controlled the defensive boards for the Raiders.

Downed power lines caused a power outage, delaying the start of last Friday's game in Bridgewater-Raynham.

When the lights came back on, someone apparently forgot to plug in the North Quincy offense as the Raiders struggled to stay within two at halftime. North's offense never found its rhythm as B-R coasted to a 26-14 victory. Colleen MacDougall's rebounding and Melissa Pulera's defensive hustle were the only bright spots for North Quincy. A second power failure during the JV game caused a power outage, delaying the start of last Friday's game in North Girls' Track Falls To Top-Ranked Falmouth, 59-32

North Quincy High School girls' track dropped its first meet of the season, 59-32, to Falmouth, the number-one ranked team in the state (M.S.T.C.A. coaches polls).

Although North only had one winner, every event was hotly contested. Highlights were North's sweep of the shot, and 4 x 176 relay which set a school record and just missed catching Falmouth at the line (two-tenths of a second).

North's next meet is the Red Auerbach Freshmen-Sophomore meet Saturday at the Reggie Lewis Center and returns to Old Colony League action on Jan. 31 versus Weymouth. North Quincy is now 3-1.

Here's how North fared against Falmouth:

50 yards: Casey Ngo (2), Kellie Johnston (3).
50 hurdles: Phyllis Poon (2), Suk Ng (3).
300 yards: Aja Jackson

600 yards: Jasmine Gonzalez (2).
1000 yards: Dorothy Cronin (3).
1 mile: Lauren Molloy (2).
2-mile: Kelly Duggan (2), Carrie Jarvie (3).
Shotput: Jennifer Pineo (1), Wingsze Yuen (2) and Kristy Deputla (3).
Highjump: Aja Jackson (2).

4 x 176 relay: Ngo, Gonzalez, Johnson and Jackson (2) and school record 1:31.3.

Due to snow and structural problems at the Lewis Center last Saturday, the M.L. King Elite Meet and MSTCA Open were combined with six hours of girls and five hours of boys action. North qualified seven girls at the facility for states. Qualifiers included Casey Ngo (55 meters), Aja Jackson (300 yards), Jasmine Gonzalez (600 yards), Kelly Duggan (2 mile) and Jen Pineo, Kristy Deputla, and Wingsze Yuen (all shotput).

Other North Quincy girls who have already qualified include hurdler Phyllis Poon, dasher Kellie Johnston and the 4 x 200 relay team. The state meet for North Quincy is Sunday, Feb. 25 at Reggie Lewis Center, Northeastern University.

Ayers Handicap Conversion Center Customizes Van For Paralyzed Hockey Player

A local company has given a major assist to the Boston University hockey player who was tragically paralyzed playing in his first collegiate game last year.

Ayers Handicap Conversion Center helped customize a handicap van for Travis Roy, which will safely transport the young man.

Ayers was recently contacted by Bob Taylor of Dallas, Texas who was inquiring about a handicap van conversion. Roy, Taylor orchestrated the funding for the 1996 Dodge Ram Van with the assistance of the Dallas Stars, their fans and many local businesses.

Taylor accompanied by his wife, Susan, personally drove the vehicle cross-country to Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, for measurements and information-gathering to be used during the van conversion. While at Ayers' facility, Taylor was familiarized with the various adaptive equipment presently available on today's market.

The black and gold customized van, which sports Travis' No. 24 on the spare tire rack located on the back of the van, was then driven from Ayers Handicap Conversion Center to The Boston Harbor Hotel last Thursday for the formal presentation to Travis's father, Lee Roy.

Over the last several weeks, Taylor has been working with Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. representatives Bruce Ayers and Jack Sheldon who will be assisting the Roy family to accommodate the van with various adaptive equipment to safely transport Travis as a passenger.

Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. has been in the business of modifying vehicles for over 15 years.

The staff of Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. will work closely with the Roy family of Yarmouth, Maine as Travis finishes his hospital rehabilitation to adapt their customized van to specifically meet Travis' individual needs.

In the interim, Ayers Handicap Conversion Center is contacting various wheelchair lift and other adaptive equipment manufacturers, working with them exploring the likelihood of donations in the form of equipment, services, etc. - which they are doing themselves towards this worthy cause.

"This is just another example of 'People Helping People' to make a difference; such a tragic accident and a worthy cause," said Bruce Ayers. "We are pleased to have this opportunity to work with the Roy family and look forward to assisting them over the upcoming months."

Years ago, Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. converted a van for Mr. Darrell Williams, the Charlestown High School football player who was shot while playing football and left paralyzed. Williams is presently employed at The State House and works for State Treasurer Joseph Malone.

Thirteen Quincy residents have been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Massasoit Community College.

South Shore YMCA Awarded Grant

The South Shore YMCA has been awarded a $375,000 Challenge Grant from The Kresge Foundation, a Michigan-based independent, private organization which makes grants to worthy institutions to help fund projects involving construction or renovation of facilities.

The South Shore YMCA requested Kresge Foundation funds for its capital campaign, a $2.5 million fundraising campaign to raise money for much-needed building renovations and improvements to better serve Quincy Division program participants at the 79 Coddington St. facility.

"Grant recipients must raise initial funds toward their respective projects before requesting assistance from the foundation," said South Shore YMCA General Executive Director Ralph Yohe. "To date, the South Shore Y has raised $1,180,000 in capital campaign pledges. Because grants are made on a challenge basis, we are required to raise the remaining balance of $495,000 before we can actually use the Kresge funds. This is designed to ensure completion of the project."

Improvements include a second pool; renovated locker rooms; the addition of two special needs/family locker facilities; a new outdoor recreation complex featuring a playground, ball fields, track and basketball court; and a new parking lot.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Life is filled with uncertainties. One never knows what is around the corner. This often fills us with a sense of fear, or undue anxiety. On the other hand, the uncertainty of life can be inspiring. Walking across a meadow makes us aware of the surprises nature has for us. The beauty of the sights, the happy songs of the birds, the sounds we encounter are but a few of the unexpected and happy surprises we encounter.

Whenever the pattern of life becomes too dull we have a tendency to add our own elements of mystery and drama. Athletic contests, the 'who dunnit' novel, amusement centers, the desire to explore are some of the ways we create exciting experiences. We crave the challenge, the excitement of the unexpected. On the other hand, we would like to have certain guarantees with life. Some have suggested that they would enjoy having guarantee of success in their chosen profession. Yet what if happiness could be assured in every marriage... what if we were guaranteed a life of moral, spiritual and intellectual perfection? Or, that every prayer would be answered with a yes? Couldn't life be boring if this were so? ... The certainty of life is that God is with us. He will provide all we need to overcome the events of life that would otherwise shatter us. This we hold on to in all adventures, disappointments, joys and the sorrows of life.

Muslims Begin Fast Of Ramadan

On Sunday and Monday, the Muslim community in Quincy and around the world began the month-long fast of Ramadan, the ninth month of the Islamic Lunar calendar.

The way of fasting is to abstain from eating, drinking "anything that may pass the lips," and marital relations from dawn to sunset.

The fast of Ramadan is performed in order to learn discipline, self-restraint and generosity while obeying God's commandments. Fasting along with the declaration of faith, daily prayer, charity and pilgrimage to Mecca) is one of the "five pillars" of Islamic faith.

Those exempted from fasting include young children, the elderly, travelers, the sick and pregnant, or nursing women. Children over age 8, however, are to be encouraged to fast gradually so they they get used to fasting.

Throughout the month, Muslims participate in special prayers and exchange visits for sunset "Iftar" meals. Individual families gather for "su-hoor," the pre-dawn meal. Each part of the Muslim world has its own special foods and delicacies that are eaten during Ramadan.

Muslims are encouraged to read or recite the entire Qur'an, Islam's revealed text, during Ramadan. When able, some Muslims follow the example of the Prophet Muhammad and retired to mosques for spiritual contemplation during the last 10 days of the month. Muslims also mark one of the last odd-numbered nights of Ramadan as Lailat ul-Qadr, or "Night of Majesty or Power," the night Muhammad first received revelation from God.

When the fast of Ramadan is completed, the entire community gathers for communal prayers on the first day of the three-day Eid-ul-Fitr holiday. During Ramadan or just before Eid prayer, Muslim heads of households donate a fixed amount of money as charity "zakat-ul-fitr" to help those in need enjoy the holiday.

For more information, call Imam Talal Eid at 479-8341.

QCAP Accepting Fuel Assistance Applications

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) is accepting applications for fuel assistance.

Residents of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton who need help paying their home heating bills may be eligible for the federally-funded program.

Eligibility is based upon household size and total gross annual income. In determining annual income, QCAP uses an applicant's last four weeks of information. This method works to the advantage of households that have experienced reduced income within the past few months.

Simplified, the eligibility chart is as follows: one household member, income level of $13,073 or below; two members, $17,553 or below; three, $18,885 or below. For each additional household member, add $3,840.

The amount of benefit currently ranges from $55 to $310, depending on both income level and household size. The benefit levels may rise if President Clinton and Congress release additional funds to the program.

Fuel Assistance Program recipients are also eligible for:

•33 percent discount on Mass. Electric bills.

•20 percent discount on Boston Gas bills.

•$7 off NYNEX telephone bills.

Some fuel assistance recipients also are eligible for free energy conservation programs.

Homeowners and tenants may be eligible. All types of heat covered with the program—oil, gas, electric, and others. It includes cases in which heat is included in the rent or if rent is subsidized.

Anyone with questions about applying for fuel assistance should call 479-8181, ext. 101. Appointments are necessary for new applicants.

building as a possible site.

A move is on in the state to create juvenile courts separate from district courts where juvenile cases are now heard. The juvenile court would have its own judges, clerk magistrate, probation department and clerical staff.

According to city records, the Ledger building and land are assessed for $849,100-$687,400 for the building and $161,700 for the land.

The three-story structure, a longtime downtown landmark, has 31,116 square feet-7,806 in the basement.

The Ledger also owns a vacant single-story building behind the Temple St. property on Maple St. That structure has 11,617 square feet--about half in the basement--and is assessed at $279,800. There has been talk of it being razed for parking to help the sale of the Temple St. property.

Employees from two unions picketed outside Quincy Hospital Tuesday because of their dissatisfaction over a proposed partnership agreement between the hospital and Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Representatives from the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) Local 285, which represents about 300 professional and technical employees at Quincy Hospital, and District 925, which represents around 150 clerical workers, attending the rally.

The employees organized the picket after they learned of a meeting Monday of the eight-member committee that is heading the negotiations between the two hospitals.

"We're very concerned about the negotiations that are going on behind closed doors," said Mike Fadel, Local 285 union representative. "This is a public hospital, owned by the City of Quincy."

Fadel added that there is concern that a number of layoffs could result from the merger.

Officials at the two hospitals, however, stressed this week that a final deal is months away. The two boards of directors, as well as the Daughters of Charity--the order of Catholic nuns that owns Carney Hospital--as well as the City Council must approve any partnership agreement.

Quincy Hospital Director/CEO Ralph DiPisa said he plans to meet with employees this week.

Still, Mayor James Sheets already has gone on record as saying an affiliation between the two hospitals is a necessity because of the state of the health care industry.

"An affiliation is the only alternative to selling Quincy Hospital outright," he said. "The hospital cannot survive without it."

Hospital officials confirmed this week their discussions have moved beyond the exploratory stage and they are nearing a final decision on how the partnership will operate.

Currently under discussion, officials said, is a parent company that would oversee certain operations of the two hospitals. The city, however, would still own Quincy Hospital and the Daughters of Charity would still own Carney Hospital.

Officials said as it stands now, the two hospitals would maintain separate assets.

The arrangement is similar to that of Massachusetts General Hospital and Brigham and Women's Hospital, which joined together to form Partners Healthcare.

Proposal Gets Enthusiastic Reception

Faneuil Hall Type Marketplace Seen For Center

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A Faneuil Hall-type pedestrian marketplace is proposed for along Ross Way behind the stores on the west side of Hancock Street to help stimulate business in the downtown district.

The project, which has a working title of the Quincy Art Park and Open Air Market, was outlined to members of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Tuesday and got an enthusiastic reception.

The 1,600-by-50-foot strip from Granite Street to where the proposed Quincy Center Concourse is to be located would be built in two or more phases, with the first possibly taking place as soon as this summer.

Mary Smith of Mary A. Smith & Associates Landscape Architects came up with the design at the request of David Colton, commissioner of the Quincy Department of Public Works. Colton said he contacted Smith after consulting with Mayor James Sheets, who wants to improve the area around the Ross Parking Garage.

Smith, whose Quincy credits include the designs for Marina Bay in Squantum and the "Walk of Names" in front of City Hall, said she visualizes a "festive area" along Ross Way where musicians, jugglers and other entertainers can perform and where various special events can take place.

"It will be like an extended section of Faneuil Hall," said Smith, who has designed numerous other projects including the Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts in Mansfield.

Although the best outdoor weather occurs in the summer, Smith said she sees the marketplace as a four-season location.

"I'd like to see it happen all the time," she said.

Colton agreed, saying the ice sculptures at Quincy's annual First Night celebration and/or other winter-time attractions could be located at the site.

Among the proposed highlights of the project:

- A "pocket park" where families and others can congregate underneath the pedestrian overpass behind the Quincy Cinemas.

- Another new park on the Granite Street side of the marketplace.

- New pavement for the entire area.

- A revitalized "Town Brook Alley" in the alleyway next to the old Hancock Bank building which may or may not include an overhead cover.

For Snow, Ice Removal

City To Receive $175,000 In State Aid

The city is slated to receive $175,000 in state emergency aid for snow and ice removal, according to members of Quincy's State House delegation.

The amount is more than half of the city's annual snow and ice removal budget of $300,000. Delegation members said much more is needed for a winter that already has dumped more than 66 inches of snow on Quincy.

Rep. Stephen Tobin, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said Monday following an executive session of the committee that $15 million in aid will be distributed statewide, including $175,000 for Quincy.

Following approval from the full House, which was scheduled to take up the matter yesterday (Wednesday), and the Senate, which likely will discuss it next week, the funds will be appropriated from a special supplemental budget used for unanticipated costs and divided among the snow-weary communities across Massachusetts, Tobin said. Final approval from Gov. William Weld would be the last step.

"It's just our way of helping out," said Tobin. "We just knew the cities and towns were strapped. Some of them don't even budget for snow and ice removal."

Rep. Ronald Mariano agreed, saying that more than 80 legislators sponsored the initiative.

"It shows the responsiveness of the government to the needs of the cities and towns," he said. "It's one of the times when the system really works."

Rep. Michael Bellotti voiced similar sentiments.

"We have to respond quickly when it snows as much as it has this winter," he said. "The snow is a more immediate and visible problem than most, and all the cities and towns have to deal with it."

Sen. Michael Morrissey said both the Legislature and Weld filed emergency aid legislation for snow and ice removal and that the current initiative is a redraft that combined the two. He predicted that both the House and Senate would likely unanimously support

Assessments Forum For West Quincy

Ward 4 City Councillor Michael J. D'Amico will host a Community Forum on Wednesday, Feb. 7, at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

D'Amico said he organized the forum to better inform his constituents of recent property assessments. Marion Fantucchio, chairperson of the city's Board of Assessor's, will join D'Amico in answering the questions of South and West Quincy property owners.

"In serving the people of Ward 4, I believe it is of utmost importance to make our city government as accessible as possible," said D'Amico.

Nearly $10,000 Paid Back So Far 172 Ambulance Claims Received

Residents overbilled by the private ambulance company that offers service to city residents through Quincy Hospital already have been reimbursed $9,651.

Paul Hines of the city solicitor's office, the attorney coordinating the reimbursement program, said Tuesday he has received about 172 claims from people who say they were overbilled. So far, $9,651 has been repaid to 31 residents, with reimbursement amounts ranging from $33.31 to $1,264, he said.

Twelve claims were also received from people deemed non-eligible for reimbursement, Hines said. Those include non-Quincy residents, those treated for non-emergency services, and others.

In addition, 10 people still have outstanding balances with the ambulance company. Hines said he suggested that those accounts be credited by the firm.

The overbilling problem was discovered in May of last year by Quincy Atty. Daniel Raymondi, who initially learned that two of his clients had been overcharged by Norfolk-Bristol ASA/Ambulance Systems of America. The company's contract with the city bars billing indigent or uninsured city residents or trying to collect any balance not paid by private insurance or Medicare.

The Quincy Sun was the first media outlet to report about the situation.

Following an auditing process, the company admitted that it had mistakenly overbilled more than 100 clients and agreed to pay the city of sum of $500,000 which would be used to repay those wrongly charged. The money has been placed in a special escrow account controlled by the city.

Hines said Tuesday after all residents are reimbursed and administrative costs pertaining to the process are paid, any leftover money will be put in the city's general fund to be used at the discretion of Mayor James Sheets and the City Council.

Sheets said this week he is glad the reimbursement process is working.

"I'm pleased that the situation has been corrected," he said, "and I'm pleased with the progress of the reimbursement process."

Hines said he is encouraging anyone with a claim to come forward.

"We're trying to make the process as simple as possible," he said. "A person should come forward even if it's a claim for only $50. People have the right; it's their money."

For more information, call Hines at 376-1505.

2 College Finalists To Be Interviewed

The two finalists for the permanent presidency of Quincy College are being interviewed this week by the college's Board of Governors.

Board Chairman Daniel Raymondi said the new president will be named sometime next month, although a date has not yet been determined.

The two finalists are Jeremiah Ryan, vice president for marketing, planning and development at Harford Community College in Bel Air, Md. and Philip Amato, vice president and academic dean on sabbatical from Emerson College in Boston.

Ryan met with college faculty, students and staff Monday and Tuesday before being interviewed by the board Tuesday evening. Amato was to do the same yesterday (Wednesday) and today (Thursday) before being interviewed tonight.

Both interviews were scheduled to take place in the Saville Hall Board Room and last for about two hours.

Raymondi, noting that more than 90 candidates originally had applied for the position, said both finalists are highly impressive candidates.

"They offer Quincy College a significant amount of management experience, academic experience, and other skills," he said. "We have two fine, exceptionally talented people. It won't be an easy decision for the board to make, but the future looks bright for Quincy College. The college will under dynamic leadership going into the year 2000."

The Board of Governors decided to search for a permanent president after then-Interim President Linda Wilson announced in August that she would not seek renewal of her one-year contract which expired Jan. 1 of this year.

A search committee headed by Theresa Lord, vice chairman of the Board of Governors, gradually narrowed the original pool of candidates down to three finalists. One of them subsequently dropped out of the race, leaving Ryan and Amato as the only candidates.

Dr. Steven Kenney, an official at the college, is serving as acting president until a permanent replacement is found.

Meeting Tonight On Marina Bay Condo Proposal

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting tonight (Thursday) from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the cafeteria at 500 Victory Rd., Marina Bay.

The purpose of the meeting is to inform the residents and other interested parties of a plan being submitted by the Thorndike Development Corporation/Marina Court Associates Limited Partnership to develop and construct 330 low-rise condominium homes for sale on 19.7 acres known as Parcel 37 at Marina Bay.

The proposed Marina Bay Court Planned Unit Development (PUD) application abuts Victory Road in the Marina Bay development complex.

The proposed development consists of two- and three-story traditional New England-style clapboard and shingle-style architecture to be developed in 26 buildings. A central amenity area is proposed including a pool, clubhouse and meeting rooms.

•New facades for the Ross Garage and other nearby buildings.

•New lighting, banners, benches, trees and other improvements.

Other ideas under consideration are bringing an outdoor restaurant to the site of the vacant Child World building, allowing the Quincy Farmers Market to operate out of the Ross Garage, and constructing a summertime "bandstand" for performers.

Smith noted that some people might think of Ross Way as being too small for the project. She added, however, that measurements taken at Faneuil Hall indicate that the size of the Quincy site is almost identical and that the marketplace use is perfect for the location.

"We when design a project, we think in terms of what will happen there, not what it will look like," she said.

It is unclear at this point how traffic would be affected. Under the current design, motorists would be able to enter the Ross Garage from Granite Street but would have to exit another way.

Colton said any plan will only be used "if we can get the traffic to work."

"The traffic engineers are going to be looking at the whole pattern," added Smith.

No timetable for the project has been set. Colton said, however, the marketplace will go "hand in hand" with the proposed Quincy Center Concourse--on which construction is expected to begin next year and last from 12 to 18 months--and its first phase could begin as early as this summer.

Another consideration is how to pay for the project. Colton said it is unlikely Quincy would receive any state or federal funds for the proposed marketplace, and therefore the City Council would have to approve any city monies.

Neither Smith nor Colton would estimate the cost of the project, although Smith said the repaving likely would be the most expensive facet of the plan.

Most downtown business representatives at Tuesday's QCBPA meeting seemed impressed with the proposal. Rudy Tonetti, district manager of Hobbytown--which is not a QCBPA member but has a store in Quincy Center--said festive special events, and not shopping malls, are attractive to today's consumers proposed Faneuil Hall-like marketplace.

After the meeting, QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning said she was encouraged by the plan as well as the reaction of the membership.

"I think it was a very hopeful reception," said Manning. "I think people anticipate a change, and therefore they are excited about it."

TAKE IT EASY ON PAINKILLERS

"Feel lousy? Pop a pill." That has been the answer for many Americans ever since aspirin was joined by such effective pain relievers as acetaminophen and ibuprofen. However, doctors are discovering problems with the heavy use of certain painkillers. For example, taking just double the recommended dosage of acetaminophen on an empty stomach may cause liver damage in some people. Taking the drug with alcohol has been found to be particularly hazardous. Heavy, chronic use of acetaminophen (more than a pill a day for over a year) may also raise the risk of kidney failure. Consumers should follow over the counter drug label directions and consult their doctor before taking any medicine for an extended period.

P.S. Check the labels of combination (allergy/headache, cold/fever, etc.) drugs to avoid overloading on painkillers.

Excessive use of aspirin can also cause tinnitus, which is ringing in the ears, so be sure you are under a physician's watch if you are taking these drugs consistently. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I specialize in heart disease. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're here at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550. I am a member of the American College of Cardiology and the American Heart Ass'n. "It is extremely important to try to help out cities and towns during their fiscal crises," said Morrissey, a member of the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Tobin added that he and the other three Quincy delegation members have sponsored further legislation toward that end that is currently pending and hopefully will be enacted before the end of the fiscal year.

Gallagher Says She Can Win

Susan Gallagher says believe her. She can do it. She can beat both John Kerry and Bill Weld for the U.S. Senate seat this year.

The Wollaston thirty-something real estate agent once quite active in the Republican party is running for the seat as a conservative. And, she says:

"I can win it, I know I can. Do you think I would be out there every night and neglecting my business campaigning if I didn't think I could do it?"

She says the best thing that has happened to her in the campaign in addition to converting skeptics was Weld's decision to run.

Gallagher says that although Weld is a Republican and Kerry a Democrat, the two stand the same on many issues and are too much alike

She says among other things, they both are in favor of gay rights, abortions, affirmative action and sending troops to Bosnia. She's against that.

And, besides that, she says Kerry and Weld have lost touch with the middle class.

"What we need in Washington," she says, "is a working person. These guys (Kerry and Weld) don't know how it is to have to work for a living or to run a business."

"The middle class," she says, "is being decimated. You have to work from January to mid-May to earn enough money just to pay your taxes."

As a somewhat political novice who has never held a public elective office, isn't she a bit awed or overly optimistic taking on a couple of Goliaths named Kerry and Weld?

"It doesn't bother me at all," she says.

Gallagher, a mother of four children—two of them step-children—now lives in Milton.

Before moving from Quincy, she was chairman of the Quincy City Republican Committee from 1990 to 1994. And before that was chairman of the Ward 5 Republican Committee.

Gallagher ran for state representative as a Republican in 1990, losing out to Democrat Michael Morrissey who went on to become state senator.

She needs 10,000 voter signatures to get on this year's ballot as a conservative. The nomination papers will be available in February and she has until July to come with the names.

She said her goal is to get 10,000 by April and make it 20,000 by July.

And do it by having 100 supporters collecting 200 names each which would make the 20,000.

Gallagher, who participated in the recent March for Life in Washington, D.C., is a member of the Massachusetts Citizens for Life. Members of that and the Christian Coalition, she says, will be helping her gather the needed signatures.

She says she has been on the campaign trail around the state and has run into skeptics who after listening to her explain why she is running as a conservative, have come over to her.

And, why a conservative?

"The national Republican platform is conservative," she says, "but the Massachusetts Republican party is liberal. You can't reconcile the two."

And, what does her husband, Bill, an insurance broker, think of her running for the U.S. Senate?

"He's not involved in politics," she laughs. "He'd rather watch the Patriots or go to the Y."

But she can count on his vote.

EVERYONE KNOWS that Marcus Camby is an outstanding basketball player but what's he like off the court and out of the spotlight?

Atty. George Burke, one of the all-time basketball greats at UMass-Amherst and now the Minutemen's No. 1 fan who seldom misses a game says of Camby:

"He's a great kid—a wonderful boy. As polite and nice as anyone you could find."

Burke hopes Camby will be healthy and go on to stardom in the pros.

Maybe with the Celtics with whom Burke was once a rookie?

City To Receive $175,000 In State Aid

So far this winter, the city has spent between $750,000 and $800,000 on snow and ice removal costs, according to Mayor James Sheets. Expenditures beyond the yearly $300,000 sum generally are appropriated from the city's free cash account, he added.

Sheets said he was pleased to hear about the $175,000 from the state.

"It's good news," he said. "I think the delegation has done a terrific job. That's a good chunk of assistance, and it will be extremely helpful."

The mayor noted that two years ago, the city received only $75,000 from the state for a winter that eventually cost the city $1.3 million.

He added that the city has been added to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) list for emergency aid, but there is no guarantee the city will receive any federal monies before the end of the fiscal year June 30.

"FEMA aid is a long, bureaucratic process," said Sheets. "Sometimes you don't get your money for a year."

Quincy meteorologist Rob Gilman said the city has been blanketed by 66.2 inches of snow this winter as of Tuesday morning. The record-breaking city total of two years ago was 93 inches, he added.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1939 POSTCARD view of Hancock Street in Wollaston looking north at the intersection with Beach and Beale streets. In the center in the distance you can see the old Texaco gas station sign on the corner of Blake Street. On the right, Wells' sign advertised their famous fried chicken. It must have been good, they are still in business. To enhance this card the publisher took the liberty to airbrush out the overhead wires and telephone poles. He must have had a vision of Wollaston in the 90's.

READERS FORUM

Thank You For Fr. Heery Coverage

Quincy Sun Staff,
I would like to take a moment and congratulate the Quincy Sun on your coverage of the recent passing of Rev. Cornelius J. Heery, Pastor at Sacred Heart Church for 20 years. As a Sacred Heart parishioner, I am grateful to God for the gift of Fr. Heery. We have been so blessed to have had him walk among us in a gentle but powerful way bringing the love of our Lord Jesus Christ to all.

More than 5,000 people flocked to Sacred Heart

Church to pay respect to Fr. Heery as he lied in state in the church he loved. His funeral attended by some 1700 including some 200 priests was a beautiful tribute to a faithful and humble priest of God. Fr. Heery would have been embarrassed by the attention, but he truly deserved it. We are all richer for having known him.

Congratulations, Quincy Sun, and thank you for a job well done.

31,000 Given Shots Against Polio

By PAUL HAROLD

The city's health department inoculated a record 31,000 residents during its 28-day campaign against polio. According to Leo Lamb, statistician in charge of the program, Quincy's percentage of residents participating was the highest in New England.

February 1 - 7
39 Years Ago

The program ended up with 8,530 inoculations in one day, from mobile units at the DPW garage, and Snug Harbor, Atherton Hough and Washington schools.

Health Commissioner Richard Ash said he was "more than satisfied with the success," noting that the state of Rhode Island was going to copy the Quincy plan for its inoculation program.

HEDGES PUSHES FOR NEW HIGHWAY

Testifying before the legislature's committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles, Sen. Charles Hedges urged the construction of a new highway link from the Fore River Bridge to the Southeast Expressway. Included in the plan was the raising of the level of the bridge.

Hedges recommended that the roadway be named for former Mayor Joseph Whiton who had worked for the project during his service in the legislature. Regarding the bridge, Hedges said that with new type vessels and Texas Tower construction at the shipyard, it was inevitable that the bridge level would have to be raised.

There was no opposition to Hedges' plan at the hearing. LEWIS SEEKS $800,000 FOR DPW

City Manager Edward Lewis was scheduled to ask the City Council for the authority to seek state permission to borrow $800,000 for needed DPW projects. The city needed state approval from the Emergency Finance Board before it could float the bond issue for street, sewer and drain improvements and equipment purchase.

The total bonded debt of the city was $13.8 million.

Marie A. Curry Fund Established At Quincy Hospital With $100,000 Family Donation

The $100,000 gift was made by her husband, Bob Curry of Curry Hardware, and their two children, Sean and Julie.

The Marie A. Curry Fund is an endowment fund that will be used to provide access to mammography and breast cancer-related services for women in need. By creating this endowment, the Curry family hopes to raise awareness of the need for the early detection of breast cancer.

The Marie A. Curry Fund was established by the family to express its appreciation to Quincy Hospital and the staff for the care given to Marie during her illness.

The Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation, incorporated Dec. 21, 1995, replaces the Quincy Hospital

Charitable Foundation as the organization that raises money to help support health care services and programs at Quincy Hospital.

Those interested in making a tax-deductible contribution to the Marie A. Curry Fund is invited to do so. Checks may be made payable to: The Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation, Inc. Please note that the funds are for: The Marie A. Curry Fund.

Bellotti Fundraiser Collects $3,500 For PAL

State Rep. Michael Bellotti recently hosted a fundraiser that collected more than $3,500 for the Quincy Police Athletic League (PAL).

More than 300 people attended the pre-Christmas event despite heavy snow. Guest speaker was House Majority Leader Richard Voke who spoke of Bel-lotti's work in the State House on behalf of Quincy youth.

In addition, five former and present Quincy Police officials received awards for founding the Quincy Police Boys Club, the predecessor of today's PAL. Those honored included Sgt. Richard Laracy, retired Sgt. Edward Kusser Sr. and retired Officers William Draicchio, Guido (Buddy) Pettinelli and William Spencer.

Four Residents Nominated To U.S. Service Academies

Four Quincy residents are among a number of South Shore students nominated for admission to at least one of the U.S. Service Academies for the 1996-97 school year.

Nominated to the U.S. Military Academy were Thomas Gildea, David Gunther and Russell Savella. Terrence Roche was among those nominated to the U.S. Naval Academy, while Gildea also was named to the same as an alternate.

Congressman Gerry Studds made the names public during a recent announcement.

"These young people and their families can be very proud," said Studds. "The caliber of the local nominees has traditionally been excellent, with the acceptance rate for 10th District nominees often three times higher than the national average. I am quite confident that will be true again this year."

Nominees were interviewed and selected by the Congressman's Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee. Henry Bradley, Quincy Veterans Services director and a resident of the city, was among eight South Shore residents who served on the committee.

Selection of the students for nomination completes the first stage of the academy application process. Names of the students nominated by the committee will now be forwarded by Studds, without preferential listing, to the respective academies where they will compete for final admission and appointment.

Street Sense Part Two Safety While Driving

- Keep your car in good running condition. Make sure there's enough gas to get you where you're going and back.
- Always roll up the windows and lock car doors, even if you're coming right back. Check inside and out before getting into your car.
- Avoid parking in isolated areas. Be especially alert in lots and underground parking garages.
- If you think someone is following you, don't go home. Drive to the nearest police or fire station, gas station, or other open business.
- Don't pick up hitchhikers. Don't hitchhike.

On Buses and Subways

- Use well lighted, busy stops.
- Stay alert! Don't doze or daydream.
- If someone harasses you, don't be embarrassed. Loudly say, "Leave Me Alone!" If that doesn't work, hit the emergency device.

If Someone Tries to Rob You

- Don't resist. Give up your property, don't give up your life.
- Report the crime to the police. Try to describe the attacker accurately. Your actions can help prevent other from being victims.

Take A Stand

- Make your neighborhood and work place safer by reporting broken street lights, cleaning up parks and vacant lots, and by lobbying local government for better lighting in public places.
- Join a Neighborhood Watch group to look out for each other and help the police.
- Help out a friend or co-worker who's been a victim of crime. Cook a meal, baby-sit, find the number for the victim services or a crisis hotline. Listen, sympathize, and don't blame.
- Look at the root causes. Work for better drug treatment services, crime and drug abuse prevention education, and job and recreational opportunities for young people in your community.

St. Joseph's School Celebrates Catholic School Week

A number of events centered around appreciation for others is taking place this week at St. Joseph's School.

Grandparents, parents, teachers, volunteers, and community servers are among those being honored.

Today (Thursday), the school will hold registration in the gym. The school services children from pre-kindergarten to grade 8. The school also offers after-school care until 5:30 p.m. on every school day.

The faculty includes: Donna Larson, teaching pre-kindergarten; Mary Malloy, kindergarten; Lisa Doyle, kindergarten aide; Rosa Robinson, grade 1; Susan Ramponi, grade 2; Erica Davey, grade 3; Betty Connor, grade 4;

Joan Costanzo, grade 5; Sandra Serkess, grade 6; Arlyce Doucette, grade 7; and Thomas Walsh, grade 8.

Other faculty members include: Sister Thomas who teaches library science and religion; Kathleen McLaughlin, art; Brandon Poenica, music; Patricia Boucher, Spanish; Sharon Lyons, computer science; and Adele Galoacher, physical education.

St. Joseph's School offers a quality education to both Catholics and non-catholics alike.

Lisa Mirasolo, school principal said, "We offer all our students a non nonsense, quality education. We not only prepare our students for high school, but also for life, as good christians and citizens. The small school setting allows me to know each of the students, as well as their family. The faculty, staff, parents, and myself work together as a team helping our students realize a solid, educational foundation."

The ethnic diversity throughout the school allows the students to enjoy and appreciate a natural comraderie. African-Americans, Chinese, Slavics, Haitians, Pakistani, Polish, Italian and Irish are some of the ethnic backgrounds that can be found in the school. Students work and play side by side as christian brothers and sisters. So, it is appropriate that during this Catholic Schools Week, St. Joseph's School has adopted the slogan, "Unity in Diversity."

High Winds Rip North Quincy Building

HIGH WINDS RIPPED a six-story high section off of the Edgewater Condominiums building on Commander Shea Boulevard in Quincy on Saturday evening, leaving some residents with just a thin interior wall to shield them from the elements.

A PILE OF RUBBLE is all that remains of a six-story section of the Edgewater Condominiums in Quincy that was ripped off the building Saturday night by winds gusting upwards of 50 miles an hour. Fortunately, the section of wall fell into the pool area and no one was hurt. Despite the damage, Quincy Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey assured residents the building was still structurally sound.

Uncle Sam To Hold Voter Registration At SSAR Offices

"Uncle Sam wants you to vote, that is," says Mary Dawson, president of the South Shore Association of Realtors.

Uncle Sam Rounseville of Quincy—that patriotic figure who shows up at everything from parades to Red Sox games—has set his red, white and blue top hat to registering 100,000 voters before the presidential primary.

To that end, Uncle Sam—who also happens to be a Quincy realtor—will register Massachusetts voters at the South Shore Association of Realtors' Quincy offices, 10 Crescent St., from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday, Feb. 9. Deadline to register for the primary is Wednesday, Feb. 14.

"When SSAR learned of

UNCLE SAM

Uncle Sam's quest to register new voters, we volunteered the use of our offices for his registration campaign," Dawson said. "Realtors come in contact with new people every day, and where Uncle Sam is a member of the association, it made sense for him to use our offices to sign up voters."

Uncle Sam said any Massachusetts resident can stop by SSAR headquarters Feb. 9 and register to vote.

"After I register voters in Quincy," he said, "I'll be hitting the road to sign up voters in other states."

Uncle Sam's voter registration blitz will include stops in Des Moines, Iowa, and Atlanta, Ga. He will also make public appearances in several New England States before returning to Massachusetts and his "other" job as a Realtor.

And for which real estate firm does Uncle Sam work?

Century 21-Abigail Adams, of course.

Billiard Parlor Gets Beer, Wine License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Although Joseph Shea, chairman of the Quincy License Board opposed the issuing of a beer and wine license to George Pepdjonovic, owner of the Eight Ball Billiard Parlor, 1585 Hancock St., the board voted 4 to 1 in favor.

Shea said his opposition to the pool parlor (formerly Shooter's) was the "proximity to all young people in the area especially with the movie theatre upstairs."

Pepdjonovic said he was changing the age limit from 18 to 21 years of age and mentioned vandalism taking place with a younger element. But added, most of the "kids are from out of town". He promised the board that a police detail would be hired for weekends from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m., and a person at the door each night checking ID's.

Before a motion was made, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott said he had received a couple of letters of opposition from constituents because of the concerns of the children hanging out in the area because they are "running out of places to go." He said he would leave it up to the "discretion of the license board".

Board member Matt Mulvey made a motion to approve subject to the sign being posted for those over 21 only, with the exception of employees (maintenance, etc.) who are able to work under the age of 21.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman seconded the motion and noted there was "beer and wine there before with no problems" and said by increasing the age limit, it would remove some of the element which had caused previous problems.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue who said she was "on the fence" but agreed with Gorman and voted to issue the license.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said Pepdjonovic was a "good businessman with good intentions" and that "our city is doing something for the younger kids with recreation encouraged in the various school gymnasiums." He added that the kids from "out of town" need to be taken care of by their respective towns.

A letter was read by Shea from Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association. Manning said they were not opposed to the issuing of the license, and felt Pepdjonovic had a "well organized plan for measures to control his expanded venture."

Landscape Preservation Project At Adams Historic Site

The Olmsted Center for Landscape Preservation is conducting a landscape preservation project involving an orchard crew and tree crew at the Adams National Historic Site, announces Supt. Marianne Peak.

The following projects were managed by Charles Pepper, horticulturist at the Olmsted Center and responsible for all Olmsted field projects throughout the Northeast Field Area from Maine to Virginia; and Eugene Gabriel, facility manager at the Adams National Historic Site and responsible specifically for projects relating to Historic Orchard Management.

The Olmsted Center for Landscape Preservation, a partnership between the National Park Service and the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University, is a center for landscape preservation, training, and technology development. The Center's historical landscape architects and horticulturists, based at the Frederick Law Olmsted National Historic Site in Brookline, work with park managers to resolve critical preservation issues. This team of professionals assembles multi-park crews to perform emergency and cyclic maintenance work. Every project trains resident park staff, strengthening each park's capability to preserve cultural landscapes.

The team recently pruned historic trees at the Adams NHS including the Orchard, the Yellowwood set out by Mrs. John Quincy Adams in the 18th Century garden. Some tree removal was required at the Beale Estate and Adams Birthplaces due to wrought. These trees, a Chestnut and Silver Maple at the Beale Estate and two Norway Maples at the Birthplaces, were removed because they presented safety hazards to the visiting public, employees, and adjacent historic structures.

In addition, the Olmsted Center pruned ornamental trees and two large Oak trees at the United First Parish Church. This project will serve to preserve those trees and insure safety of the visiting public since many dead limbs and falling branches were removed caused from recent storm damage.

The National Park Service, through a Memorandum of Understanding with the United First Parish Church and the City of Quincy, interprets the crypts of the Adams Presidents and their wives and is responsible to insure safety of the visiting public. Through this agreement insuring accessibility to the Adams Crypts visitation has increased at the church by 32 percent from 1994 to 1995. Support staff for the Quincy projects included members of the orchard and tree team crews:

"Steve Hanaburgh, Roosevelt Vanderbilt NHS, New York; Dan McCarthy, Boston NHP; Dawn Osborne, Olmsted NHS, Brookline; Jim Gardner, Boston NHP; Walter Comier, Saugus Ironworks NHS; Dave Fernald, Salem Maritime NHS; Michael Engol, Intern, Student Conservation Association; Robert Mackenzie, gardener, Adams NHS, Quincy; Wayne Rivard, gardener, Adams NHS, Quincy.

The course is a nationally-recognized program which prepares students for employment as lifeguards. First Aid and CPR courses will be offered in conjunction at an additional cost. Those interested should register in

QUINCY'S KERRI CONNOLLY scores one of her 18 points against Taunton High School last Wednesday night, becoming the Presidents' all-time career scoring leader. She passed Jack Ulhars' 19-year-old record of 1,011 points that night and now has 1,033 career points in her four-year career at QHS.

1,033 Points And Still Counting

Connolly All-Time Quincy High Scorer

By CHRISTIAN POTTS
The dates of January 23-24 will always hold a special place in Quincy High School girls' basketball co-captain Kerri Connolly's heart.

That's because Connolly, a 5'4" guard, became the first girls' basketball player in President history to reach the 1,000-point plateau on Jan. 23, then broke the all-time (boys and girls) career scoring mark the next night, Jan. 24.

Connolly had scored 26 points against Bridgewater-Raynham to break the 1,000-point barrier last Tuesday night. The following night she was presented with a bouquet of flowers and a special jacket commemorating the event before Quincy's game against Taunton.

She then promptly went out and broke the QHS all-time scoring mark with an 18-point performance, smashing Jack Ulhars' 19-year-old record. Ulhars called Kerri after the game to congratulate her.

Kerri holds six different Quincy records, including most points in a season (360 in 1994-95), most free throws in a game (12 twice) and most three-pointers in a game (four against Barnstable on 2/19/94). Now the senior star can add the all-time career scoring mark—1,033 points and counting—to her impressive basketball resume.

A four-year starter for head coach Bob Noble Jr.'s team, Kerri is a two-year co-captain. She also has been named the Presidents' team MVP twice and is a two-time Old Colony League all-star.

"She has been a leader for this team since she first stepped on the floor as a freshman," said QHS girls' basketball head coach Bob Noble Jr. "She has a tremendous work ethic. She may not be the biggest or the fastest player out there, but she has done everything she can to be the best player she can be.

"I really think that her teammates look to her on the court to lead them. With her work ethic, no matter what she does, she will be a success, whether it be in basketball or in school," finished Noble.

A three-sport athlete at QHS (four-year starter in softball and a two-year volleyball), Kerri is a National Honor society member at Quincy High, ranked 12th in her class, and carries a 3.8 grade point average. She is planning to attend college and is considering entering pre-med.

North Quincy Boys' Look To Get Even

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team has had their share of ups and downs this season. They have been hovering around the .500 mark all season, poised on the edge of breaking it only to fall back below.

Witness their last three games. They went into their Old Colony League contest with Bridgewater-Raynham at 4-5, just one game shy of .500. A win and they are on a level plain; a loss, and the hill they are trying to climb becomes one game steeper.

Unfortunately, the B-R game was more costly than they probably anticipated. NQ's captain and floor leader, Jimmy Rendell, broke his arm and was lost for the season in the Raiders' loss to Bridgewater. Then, three nights later, NQ dropped a tough 68-60 decision on the road to OCL rival Falmouth. Not the best week ever.

"We're a young team, and when you lose someone like Jimmy, it's a big blow," said Raider head coach Ted Stevenson. "Not only because he was a consistent scorer, but also because he was a leader on the court and a captain. You miss that leadership."

The Raiders haven't thrown in the towel, however. Not by any stretch of the imagination. Friday night, they played host to Silver Lake in another important OCL matchup, trying to turn around their recent woes.

Turn them they did. In a balanced offensive attack,

Quincy Boys' Defeat Falmouth For 2nd Win

The Quincy High School boys' Basketball team posted their second win of the season last Friday night with a 74-65 win over Old Colony League rival Falmouth behind senior co-captain Jeff Russell's 25 points.

"That was a big win for us," said QHS head coach John Franceschini Jr. "We're a young team, and a win like this can give us some hope and confidence."

The Presidents also got a huge game from 6'3" junior Bob Walsh, who scored 19 points and grabbed 14 rebounds. "Bob is definitely our best inside player. He's tall, he scores points, grabs rebounds and plays good defense. With Bob averaging 14 per game and Jeff [Russell] 16 a game, we have a good combination," observed Franceschini.

But Quincy has been dogged all season long by poor shooting, which is negating their strong defense and good work ethic. As a team, the Presidents are shooting around 34 percent from the field, which has made for some frustrating losses. "Six of our losses this year (QHS is 2-8 overall, 2-6 OCL) have been by five points or less, and if we can pick up our shooting, maybe we win those games.

"Another problem for us has been that we aren't getting to the foul line enough. Against Scituate last week, we didn't have any free throws; I've never had that happen in my 20 years of coaching. But we are getting there a little more lately," said the coach.

Overall, Franceschini is pleased with his team's

Joan's Olympic Gym Cheerleaders Headed To Nationals In Orlando On March 14-18

Joan's Olympic Gym, on the Braintree-Quincy line, has put together an all-star cheerleading squad made up of girls ages 8-15 from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Dorchester and Holbrook.

The squad, nicknamed the Eagles, are strictly a competition squad and have been practicing since July of last year. Recently, they participated in three different competitions. At the Silver City Cheerleading Competition in Taunton, the girls placed first in their division and were awarded an enormous trophy.

They followed that win with a second-place finish at a competition sponsored by Emmanuel College at Boston College High School. Then, at the Universal Cheerleading Association's Regional competition, the squad took home the New England title and received a bid to compete at the National All-Star Cheerleading Championships in Orlando (Fla.) at MGM Studios on March 14-18.

Three of the coaches and three of the cheerleaders are from Quincy. They are: coaches Andrea Osborne, Anne Marie Swan and Bonnie Ford; and cheerleaders Tanya Isaac, Sherri McCusker and Sherriann Tulimieri.

Joan's is busy fundraising for the trip to the Nationals and are grateful for all the help they can get. If you are interested in supporting or would like more information, contact Anne Marie Swan at 472-8524 or Joan's Olympic Gym at 843-9624.

NQ prevailed over the Lakers 54-48 for their fourth league win this season (4-6 OCL). Sophomore Brian Ross led the way with 17 points, playing tough inside, and freshman Brian Doyle came off the bench and hit three 3-pointers on his way to a 15-point night.

Junior Chris Erler was the playmaker for the 5-7 Raiders, scoring four points, dishing out eight assists and coming up with five steals. Junior Tommy Coughlin and sophomore Mike Johnson scored seven apiece to round out the scoring.

"One of the strengths of this team has been our inside play, and we showed that against Silver Lake. And to get great games from Doyle and Erler, that was just huge for us. That's what we need to stay in games," said Stevenson.

So with eight games remaining on the schedule, the Raiders have their work cut out for them. They need to win 10 games to qualify for the state tournament, and that would mean going 5-3 over the next three weeks. "We don't have an easy schedule. We still have to play Weymouth, who is in first place in the OCL, as well as Barnstable, who is third, and Plymouth South, who beat us pretty good earlier this season.

"Plus we have games against Boston English and Milton High School, the No. 2 team in the state. It's like a trial by fire for some of our younger kids, but if we keep our heads in it and stay focused, I think we'll be very competitive and can keep our tournament hopes alive," finished Stevenson.

The Raiders have two road games coming up, an OCL matchup at Plymouth South this Friday night (7 p.m. tip off, JV at 5:30) and a non-league contest with Stoughton next Tuesday (4:30 JV start).

work ethic and their efforts in the game. "These kids practice and work very hard. We're a young team [only two players returned from last year's team], and some things take a little more time to correct. There's a lot of basketball to go this season, and I'm looking forward to it," finished Franceschini.

Quincy has back-to-back home games this Friday and next Tuesday against OCL leaders Weymouth High School and a tough Plymouth South squad, both with 7 p.m. tip-offs (5:30 JV).

North Freshmen Girls Raise Record To 8-5

A second 2-1 week pushed the North Quincy freshman girls' basketball team to an 8-5 record overall. The Raiders also recorded two Old Colony League wins and now have a 7-3 league record.

Fontbonne Academy demonstrated why they carried a 10-1 record into Tuesday's game at North Quincy. Led by Maritha Steadman's 14 points, Fontbonne went on a 17-0 run in the first half to take a 28-7 halftime lead. North Quincy was held scoreless for the final ten minutes of the period. North showed some fire in the second period, twice cutting the lead to 14 in the half, but Fontbonne's free throw shooting and aggressive defense proved too much for the Raiders, who fell 49-25. Lauren Luzzo led North with six points, while Ali Haddad and Sarah Kiley added five and four, respectively.

Ali Haddad and Lauren Luzzo combined for 26 points and pushed North Quincy to a 12-point first half lead last Thursday at Silver Lake. The Lakers closed to within six in the second half, but tight defense and solid board work from Kate Lavery (two points and five second-half rebounds) and Marcia Hern (four points, two blocks and four rebounds) held a tiring Raider team together in North Quincy's 37-29 win.

Aggressive trapping defense keyed several fast break baskets as NQ roared to an 18-0 lead in Saturday's game at Braintree. Haddad (14 points) and Luzzo (11) again led the Raider scoring, while Kim Huerth, Dieder Jacobs and Kristen Bowes (four assists) added four points apiece as the Raiders rolled 53-34.

North Quincy travels to Boston Latin next Wednesday (4 p.m. tip-off) and then plays host to OCL rival Taunton next Wednesday at 3:30.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

It seems a great many people these days complain that their work is boring. The tendency is to blame the job for lack of challenge. What usually makes work drudgery, however, is a person's attitude - not the work itself.

No task need be boring, for the simple reason that every job contains within it a hidden challenge. What is this challenge? That challenge is this: How can it be done better?

Could anything be more boring than sweeping floors? ... Many years ago Murray Spangler, a department store janitor in Canton, Ohio, didn't think so, even though the dust made him cough and wheeze. Many men would have given up and quit. Instead, Spangler set out to find a better way to clean floors ... "Why not eliminate the broom," he wondered, "... maybe something that would suck up dust ...?"

Spangler's question led to a crude but working vacuum cleaner, which he induced an old friend in the leather business to finance ... You guessed it! ... The friend's name was H.W. Hoover ...

Hibernia Bank Receives Outstanding CRA Rating

The Hibernia Savings Bank has received a rating of outstanding—the highest a bank can achieve—as a result of its most recent CRA examination by the Massachusetts Division of Banks.

The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) requires banks to meet the credit and banking needs of the communities which they serve.

"We are obviously delighted to have received an 'outstanding' CRA rating," said Dennis P. Myers, senior vice-president and CRA officer.

"The Hibernia Savings Bank operates on the philosophy of a true community bank. This rating reflects the efforts of our entire staff and demonstrates our strong commitment to the principles of the Community Reinvestment Act."

The Hibernia Savings Bank's local community encompasses 17 cities and towns including Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, Marshfield, Stoughton, Randolph, Canton, Holbrook and Avon.

The Hibernia Savings Bank, founded in 1912, is a full service, state chartered, stock savings bank. The main office of the bank is located at 731 Hancock St., Quincy. The Bank's administrative offices are located at 730 Hancock St. Retail branch banking facilities are located in Quincy, Boston, Braintree, Hingham, Weymouth and Stoughton, and loan centers are located in Quincy and Braintree.

All deposits are insured in full by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC)/Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF).

Walden Bancorp Reports 10 Percent Increase In Fourth Quarter Operating Earnings

Walden Bancorp, Inc., a multibank holding company for The Co-operative Bank of Concord and Bank of Braintree, report operating earnings of $2,856,000, or $0.53 per share, for the fourth quarter of 1995, excluding non-recurring items.

For the fourth quarter of 1994, Walden had operating earnings of $2,528,000, or $0.48 per share, excluding non-recurring items. In 1995 the non-recurring items were expenses of $1,540,000, net of taxes, or $0.29 per share associated with the acquisition of Bank of Braintree and the net gain after taxes from the sale of The Co-operative Bank's Medford office, including a write-down of $707,646 of goodwill and other expenses, of $541,347, or $0.10 per share. In 1994 The Co-operative Bank had restructuring charges of $305,000, net of taxes, or $0.06 per share, associated with the discontinuance of its mortgage banking operation.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1995, operating earnings were $10,298,000, or $1.92 per share, excluding the aforementioned non-recurring items, as compared to operating earnings of $9,793,000, or $1.85 per share, for the full year 1994, excluding the charges associated with its mortgage banking operation.

Reported earnings for the fourth quarter of 1995 were $1,857,000, or $0.34 per share, and $9,299,000, or $1.74 per share, for the full year. Reported earnings for 1994 were $2,223,000, or $0.42 per share, for the fourth quarter and $9,488,000, or $1.79 per share, for the full year.

Walden Bancorp, Inc., acquired Bank of Braintree in December 1995 in a tax-free exchange of shares structured as a pooling of interests.

Braintree's common stockholders received one share of Walden's common stock for each share of Braintree's common stock owned. The Co-operative Bank's shares were automatically converted to shares of Walden Bancorp. All financial results for prior periods have been restated to reflect the pooling of interests transaction.

"We are very pleased with our accomplishments during 1995," stated David E. Bradbury, Chairman and Executive Officer. "With the acquisition of Bank of Braintree, we have grown to over $1 billion in total assets, with two community bank subsidiaries. We achieved substantial progress toward our objective of becoming more commercially-focused with out lending products and services. Our efforts are being validated by the encouraging level of new customers moving their commercial banking relationships to our banks."

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Assn. Affiliation

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to restoration and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service it performs in order to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. The program is part of a larger endeavor: to restore the landscape and environment with the beauty of living trees.

Following each service, family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle and John J. Lydon Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

City To Receive $1.35M In MWRA Rate Relief

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin announce that Quincy will receive $1,352,796 from the Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Fund for Fiscal Year 1996.

More than $32 million has been distributed to Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) communities.

The Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Fund was created by both the Legislature and the governor to mitigate sewer rates.

"For the past three years, this fund has helped thousands of households with their rising sewer rates," said Morrissey.

"There are several MWRA projects occurring in the state at the moment," said Bellotti. "The cost of many of these projects, such as the Boston Harbor Cleanup, has been passed along to MWRA residents and this fund should help reduce the rate increase pressure on homeowners."

The Division of Local Services, in consultation with the Department of Environmental Protection, is responsible for the administration of the program. The funds from the program are used to subsidize the MWRA cuts resulting from the rate savings to the MWRA communities.

"Without this funding to subsidize the MWRA, sewer rates would have been a considerable increase for Quincy," said Mariano.

"Larger MWRA communities, such as Quincy, bear a greater burden of MWRA costs due to the large amount of sewage and water usage," added Tobin.

The MWRA identified and developed a formula to handle the reimbursement to be awarded to each community. The formula is based on each community's water and sewer usage statistics.

The distribution is also based on the MWRA's projection of the cost of each community for 1996. The agency prepared and estimated the percentage of each community's debt sum prior to distributing the fund.

"The legislative delegation has committed themselves to again make rate relief and local aid assistance a top priority," said Morrissey.

A SHOCK TO THE SYSTEM

Before car owners insist on replacing worn shocks with gas-filled shocks, they should be sure whether they are applicable. Gas-filled shocks contain hydraulic fluid pressurized by nitrogen gas. They should only be used on automobiles that have suspension designed for their use. To understand why, it helps to know that "spring rate" is the increase in upward force that a car's springs exert for every unit of additional compression of the springs. Put another way, the more the springs are compressed by the car's weight, the harder they try to force the car back up.

While normal hydraulic shock absorbers do not appreciably alter the spring rate of a car's suspension, gas-filled shocks can. As a result, gas-filled shocks can significantly change the handling characteristics of a car as determined by its original factory calibration and should only be used when deemed appropriate.

HINT: If the front end of the car dives sharply downward when the brakes are lightly applied, worn shocks are likely to be at the root of the problem. The safety of our customers is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. Quelling A 'Riot'

MEMBERS OF COMPANY C, armed with batons, confront student rioters during a training exercise at Braintree High School on Sunday. The exercise, reminiscent of the 1960s, was designed to simulate riot-like conditions to evaluate how well military and municipal emergency agencies cooperated in defusing the situation. The student rioters belonged to the ROTCorps unit at QHS.

Residents To Pay $1 Fare New Senior Shopping Shuttle Starts March 7

A planned senior citizen shopping shuttle service that will pick up elderly residents at the city's 15 senior housing facilities will begin transporting its first passengers March 7.

The announcement was made Tuesday by City Councillor Michael Cheney and the Board of Directors of Quincy Transportation Inc.

The service, which will be known as Van About Town, will cost $1 for a round-trip ride. Photo passes that will be available for $30 will allow unlimited ridership for three months.

The senior van service will operate Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Seniors will be picked up at one of the city's 15 senior housing facilities and transported to designated medical and shopping centers.

Cheney said further details of the service's travel route, as well as a schedule of meetings at various senior facilities for those seeking more information, will be unveiled next week. Photo passes and daily ride tickets will be available at the meetings.

Seniors who live in close proximity to the senior facilities are encouraged to attend the meetings, as those within walking distance will also be able to use the shuttle, Cheney noted.

He added that he is pleased that the service, which he originally had hoped could be running before last Christmas, will finally be getting off the ground.

"I'm excited about this," said Cheney. "I know there are many seniors who are apartment-locked. We're hoping for a lot of participation."

Cheney said only 21 percent of the city's seniors have access to reliable 24-hour transportation.

The second phase of the van service, which is expected to begin in May, will include picking up seniors at community centers and transporting them to designated shopping and medical centers. The third phase will include picking up seniors at private homes. Details of phases two and three will be announced next month.

Further expansion of the service could include transportation on weekends as well as to special events, but that has not yet been decided.

The service will be made possible by a $60,000 grant from the Granite Crossing shopping center currently under construction on Quincy Avenue. Commitments from Shaw's and Stop & Shop, as well as Wal-Mart and Roche Bros. once they are constructed as part of the Granite Crossing project, also have been received, Cheney said.

Cheney estimated that it will cost $80,000 annually to run the service, which will operate year-round. He added that the Board of Directors of Quincy Transportation Inc., the non-profit group in charge of running the shuttle service--plans to apply for state and federal grants to secure funding the service.

Additional monies for operating costs will come from corporate sponsorships and the fares charged to the seniors, he said.

Designated stops will include Wollaston Center,

Sheets Top Vote-Getter And Election Spender

Mayor James Sheets was both the top vote-getter and the top spender in the 1995 city election according to campaign finance reports filed recently at the city clerk's office.

Sheets, who had run unopposed in two previous elections but was challenged last year by Roger Lyons, spent $87,319 to Lyons' $5,870, the reports show.

Sheets polled 16,297 votes in the November election to 2,158 by Lyons who has never held a public elective office.

The expenditures break down to $5.35 per vote for Sheets and to $2.33 per vote for Lyons.

Of the $87,319 spent by Sheets, $40,205 of it went to John Graham Communications of Quincy for "professional services."

Asked by The Sun Tuesday about the figure, Sheets said he "paid a substantial amount" to Graham Communications for advertising in The Patriot Ledger, The Quincy Sun and WJDA, as well as other services during the campaign.

"We paid John Graham for all the advertising and that other stuff," he said.

He did not have a breakdown on the figures.

Michael Cheney and Lawrence Chretien were the top City Council candidate spenders according to the reports filed.

Cheney showed expenditures of $36,740 in his successful re-election bid in which he finished a strong third place winner. Chretien shows $34,613--$2,127 less--in his unsuccessful campaign to move up from the Ward 3 seat to councillor at-large.

'I'm Very Excited' She's The Proud Grandmother Of Quints

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Mrs. Anne Klaver of Merrymount is the proud grandmother of quintuplets, born to her son and daughter-in-law in New York on Monday night.

"I'm very happy and excited and a bit overwhelmed," said Mrs. Klaver. "We knew it would be five babies, but we didn't know the sex until a few days beforehand."

The babies--two boys and three girls--were born in Long Island Jewish Hospital on Long Island, NY.

Samuel Klaver, a musician who lives in Brooklyn, New York, telephoned his mother Monday night after his wife, Pnina, gave birth to the quintuplets, who average approximately two pounds apiece.

"I'm planning on going to New York tomorrow [Wednesday] to see my son and my new grandsons and daughters," Mrs. Klaver told The Sun. "Samuel already has two boys--ages 10 and 12--and now he has four boys and three girls."

Mrs. Klaver is active in the Jewish community and is president of the Women's Council at Beth Israel Synagogue in Quincy Point.

Her late husband, Jack Klaver, was president of the Beth Israel Synagogue.

"I started the day [Monday] with three grandchildren and finished with eight," laughed Mrs. Klaver.

One Hour Earlier Trial Opening For Doughnut Shop

The Quincy License Board granted permission to Dunkin' Donuts, 550 Adams St. to open at 6 a.m. on Sundays instead of 7 a.m. on a four month trial basis.

Board member Matt Mulvey in making the motion said if it works out it will become a "regular part of their license."

Chairman Joseph Shea said when the donut shop opened in January, 1994, the owners were told that the hours of 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. could be changed if they came before the board in four months. He said "obviously this is more than four months."

Appearing before the board, owner Francine Govostes said "customers are already at the door before 7 a.m. on Sundays", and added "employees feel uncomfortable about not letting them in."

No opposition was heard from board members who all agreed that the area has not had any problems since it opened and that parking is ample and does not cause any traffic congestions.

Maryland's Jeremiah Ryan Chosen Quincy College Names Permanent President

For the first time since September 1993, Quincy College has a permanent, rather than an interim or acting, president.

The college's 13-member Board of Governors Monday night unanimously named Jeremiah Ryan, 46, vice president for marketing, planning and development at Harford Community College in Bel Air, Md.

Although Ryan's salary has yet to be negotiated, Board of Governors Chairman Daniel Raymond said it will be between $80,000 and $95,000 a year.

Ryan, who will begin his duties March 18, was chosen over one other finalist for the position, Philip Amato, 61, who is vice president and academic dean on sabbatical from Emerson College in Boston. Originally, 92 candidates had applied, and the field was gradually reduced to two.

Raymond said he is very pleased with the selection.

"The board established a set of leadership characteristics many, many months ago, and Dr. Ryan scored high on all of those," he said. "He's the person we feel will best lead the college into the future."

Raymond said board members, as well as students and staff, were all impressed by Ryan's interpersonal and leadership skills, extensive community college background, fund-raising success and track record for developing innovative programs.

At press time, Ryan could not be reached for comment at his Maryland home. However, he reportedly is looking forward to the position and plans to live in Quincy.

Quincy College has been without a permanent president since O. Clayton Johnson was fired for alleged mismanagement and insubordination. Since then, the college has been run by two interim presidents and current Acting President Steven Kenney, a college administration who will continue to head the school until Ryan arrives.

Small Turnout For 'Adult' Law Hearing

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Only three residents spoke at a City Council public hearing Monday night on the council's proposed ordinance change that would make it more difficult for adult clubs to set up shop in Quincy.

Two residents spoke in favor of the ordinance change, including Kevin Coughlin of 19 Small St. who said "the quality of our existence as a community" would be detrimentally impacted by the "salacious smut" offered at strip clubs.

A third resident, Wendell Caley of 17 Canton Rd., spoke neither in favor nor in opposition of the amendment. He added, however, that he is opposed to any amendment that would allow any opportunity at all for an adult club to open in the city.

"It is wrong to allow this kind of (moral) pollution," said Caley. "It's evil."

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, however, said any outright ban on such operations could be legally challenged as being in conflict with the U.S. Constitution.

The council has proposed amending an ordinance which currently makes it difficult for adult movie theaters to open in Quincy but makes no provision for strip clubs.

Under the proposed amendment, strip clubs would only be allowed to open in Quincy in areas zoned Industrial "A" or Industrial "B." In addition, the City Council, rather than the Zoning Board of Appeals, would be the special permit granting authority that would have the final say on whether such an establishment would be given permission to open.

An application from an adult club could also be challenged on the basis of traffic and other reasons.

The decision to amend the ordinance to include adult clubs followed the recent attempt by The Foxy Lady strip club of Providence, R.I. to open in Weymouth. The council will take a final vote on the amendment following a public hearing to be held by the Planning Board in March.

Harold Seeks Update On Shipyard Plans

Concerned about the state of plans for the redevelopment of the Fore River shipyard, the City Council unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Councillor Paul Harold Monday night regarding the future of the site.

The resolution states that the council will be given an update at its Feb. 20 meeting regarding any alternate plans for the shipyard currently under consideration by the city, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which owns the shipyard and the state Office of Economic Affairs. It also says that representatives from all three should attend the meeting.

Harold said he introduced the resolution because he has concerns about those planning to revitalize the yard by bringing back shipbuilding. Harold noted that Sotirious Emmanouil of Swampscott-based Massachusetts Heavy Industries, the Greek shipbuilder who says he wants to revitalize the shipyard, as of Monday had not filed for necessary federal loan guarantees despite the fact that the deadline for doing so is March 1.

In addition, he said that William Gilliam of South Carolina-based Marine Energy Systems Corporation, the partner of Massachusetts Heavy Industries that has a minority interest in the shipyard deal, has been under fire for financial problems. A story in the Jan. 23 edition of The Charleston Post and Courier in South Carolina explains the details, according to Harold.

"His finances are in question," said Harold, who would not elaborate.

Harold said it makes sense to receive an update about possible alternate uses for the shipyard date before the March 1 federal loans application deadline in case the deal falls through.

"We shouldn't wait until the deadline runs out before we find out if there are other options available," he said.

Pay Raises Approved For Four City Unions

Pay raises for four more city unions were approved by the City Council Monday night.

Raises were approved for police superior officers, school crossing guards, Local 1139, which represents laborers from the Department of Public Works, Park Department and others; and District 925 Unit A which includes a number of secretarial and clerical workers. Most will receive an 11 percent raise over a three-year period, the same increase offered other city employees.

However, the city also created a new pay category for police sergeants, lieutenants and captains that boosts their top salary by more than 22 percent.

Michael McFarland, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, said the new pay category was a concession to the 46-member union, which in turn agreed to a less lucrative sick-leave policy.

The council passed the raises, which were negotiated last year and are retroactive to July 1, without discussion.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he believes the only union still negotiating with the city is that which represents Quincy's police patrolmen, although at press time that could not be confirmed.

McFarland also was unclear if any other unions were still negotiating.

"There may still be a couple (negotiating) on the school side, but I'm not sure," said McFarland.

Still, Sheets said he was pleased the negotiation process is drawing to a close.

"It's good to get the three-year contracts out of the way," he said. "That means we don't have to begin negotiations for another two years. It creates a bit of stability in your relationship with the unions, and it helps the city's budgetary process. It's a good feeling."

FIREFIGHTERS BATTLE the five-alarm blaze that destroyed the landmark Louis' Cafe at 1269 Sea St. in Houghs Neck last Thursday. The fire, which started in the basement, caused an estimated $350,000 damage. No one was seriously hurt in the blaze, the cause of which had not been determined at press time.

City Census Forms To Be Mailed

City Clerk Joseph Shea announces that the city's census forms will be mailed out to every home in Quincy by next week.

Census forms for homes in area code 02171 will be mailed today (Thursday), according to Shea. Those for area code 02170 will be mailed next Monday and those for 02169 next Tuesday, he said.

"By Wednesday of next week, the whole city should have them," Shea said. In all, about 87,000 residents in approximately 44,000 households will receive the forms, he added.

Forms should be filled out and returned to the clerk's office. The census is important in enabling the city to secure federal dollars, compiling lists for city streets and other reasons, Shea said.

"We encourage everybody to fill them out and get them back to us as soon as possible," said Shea.

For more information, call the city clerk's office at 376-1141.

AIR APPARENT

By simply paying close and regular attention to tire inflation, car owners can prolong their life and improve the handling quality of their cars. If tires are overinflated, they will tend to wear out prematurely and unevenly in the middle of the tread. As a result, the car will ride roughly. Overinflated tires are also more prone to picking up sharp objects that can cause a slow leak or blow-out. On the other side of the ledger, underinflated tires tend to wear more rapidly on the outside of the tread, as well as hamper fuel economy. They also heat up more rapidly and cause sloppy handling by failing to grip the road properly. Tire inflation should be checked monthly with a gauge. It is not possible to estimate how much air is in the tires merely by looking.

Hint: If the tires squeal as the car rounds a corner, they are most likely underinflated.

Don't hesitate to ask any questions about handling quality problems or about anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. Delahunt And Democrats

If Dist. Atty. William Delahunt wins the 10th Congressional seat this fall it would be a plus for Democrats in Washington.

Delahunt would be retaining the seat that Gerry Studds is vacating, keeping it away from the Republicans and safely in the Democrat camp.

Life in Washington for Democrats is tough enough already with Newt Gingrich and fellow Republicans without losing another seat to them.

But, if Delahunt wins, it could mean a political minus for local Democrats.

Delahunt's term as Norfolk County district attorney runs through 1998.

If he wins the Congressional seat, the district attorney's office will likely fall into Republican hands via a gubernatorial appointment.

Either Gov. William Weld or his successor, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci--if Weld defeats John Kerry for U.S. Senate--will appoint someone to fill out Delahunt's D.A. term. And that someone would be a Republican.

And, if that Republican has some political weight, he would have two years to put together a strong team to mount an effective campaign to hold the job in the next election.

Vacancies have allowed Republicans to make two major gains in Plymouth County recently. Weld named Republican Peter Foreman sheriff when Democrat Peter Flynn gave up the badge to take another job. And he appointed Republican Michael Sullivan district attorney when Democrat incumbent William O'Malley died suddenly.

Both Foreman and Sullivan are rated good bets to hold those jobs in the next election.

Norfolk County has had a previous situation where one party gained a major post through a vacancy and gubernatorial appointment. Only that time, it was a Democrat gain but it proved temporary.

Gov. Foster Furcolo appointed Peter McCormack, a Brookline Democrat, in 1959 to fill the unexpired term of Samuel Wragg, a Republican, who died suddenly in office.

But in the next election (1960), Quincy's Charles Hedges ousted McCormack to take the sheriff's office back for the Republicans.

Back then, the county was still Republican with Democrats just beginning to stir and then later in the 1960s to come on and take control.

But there are now signs of an independent voter movement in the county which could help a strong Republican district attorney appointee hold the office in the next election.

There reportedly is a bill floating around somewhere on Beacon Hill that would call for a special election--rather an appointment--in the event of vacancies in the sheriff's office and district attorney's office.

But if it passed, Weld no doubt would veto it.

Besides being district attorney, Delahunt is also the second Democratic State Committeeman in the Norfolk-Plymouth District. The other is Rep. Michael Bellotti. Bellotti is elected, Delahunt selected by caucus.

If Delahunt wins the 10th Congressional seat, he will be the first Congressman from Quincy since John Quincy Adams.

WONDERING OUT LOUD: I was watching "Glenn Miller's Greatest Hits" (Part II) on Ch. 2 the other night and found myself asking how rock 'n roll ever got started or lasted.

That famed Miller sound built around four saxophones and a clarinet lead is as beautiful today as it was a half-century ago. Such popular classics as "Moonlight Serenade," "In the Mood," "Perfidia," "Star Dust," "Danny boy," etc. etc.

It has always puzzled me why today's young people prefer the bang, bang noise, the lousy lyrics (if you can call them lyrics) and some of those weird performers whose talent is limited to whacking a guitar and trying to throw up their lungs on the stage floor.

But maybe things will change--yet. One good sign: In the audience dancing to and enjoying that Miller sound the other night were a lot of young people.

Maybe all is not lost.

MILESTONE: School Committee member JoAnn Bragg and her husband, Richard, are grandparents for the first time.

Their daughter Michelle and son-in-law Tim Driscoll presented them with a granddaughter, Paige Maree, Jan. 4 at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Paige made her debut at 8 pounds, 2 1/2 ounces.

Congratulations!

BOB COLMAN, who owned the former Colman's Sporting Goods store in downtown Quincy, is recovering from two bouts with pneumonia.

Colman, a former Navy pilot, now lives in Walpole because it is closer to the Norwood Airport where he flies out of.

He says he still keeps in touch with what's happening in Quincy through The Sun.

Take care of yourself, Robert. We're not as young as we used to be.

City Store At New Location Saturday

City Council President Peter Kolson announced this week that the Quincy City Store will reopen for business Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at its new location at 88 Washington St. in Quincy Center.

The store will continue to operate every Saturday during those hours.

The store, formerly located near the Fore River shipyard, has been closed for about a month, Kolson said. Among the reasons were bad weather, the move to the new location, and the fact that John Gilfeather, the retired Quincy police officer who runs the store, has been on vacation.

The new location provides the store with more room and a better location, according to Kolson, who came up with the idea of the store a couple of years ago.

Since opening in January 1994, Kolson said, the Quincy City Store has raised more than $50,000 for the city through the sale of old parking meters, office equipment, and numerous other items.

Citywide Parent's Council Meeting Feb. 12

hood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Meetings are open to the public.

QUARRY.
NORFOLK DOWNS MASS.

THIS IS A 1920 real photo postcard showing the old slate quarry off Apthorp Street in Norfolk Downs. Actually two separate quarry holes, the site was surrounded by Billings Road, Apthorp, Warwick and Marshall Streets. First opened in 1687 this ancient Quincy quarry was the source of thousands of slate gravestones found in cemeteries throughout the region. Filled in the late 1940's to eliminate the danger to neighborhood children, it had been a favorite spot for ice skating in winter and for carp fishing in the summer.

Solve Moon Island Conflict Before Forming Mayor's Group

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Kudos to Boston Mayor Thomas Menino for pushing a regional mayors groups (Boston Sunday Globe, Jan. 28). It is an idea certainly worthy of discussion.

According to Menino, "We could help each other on a lot of issues. We have much to learn and show each other from budget cuts to basic city services."

Former Boston Mayor Ray Flynn tried the same thing several years ago but nothing came of the idea at that time. Menino is giving the idea a second try and thinks this time a New England mayors group could work. Providence Mayor Buddy Cianci says he's glad Menino wants to bring the region's mayors together. New Bedford Mayor Rosemary B. Tierney says, "If we don't work together as a bloc, we'll fall apart, brick by brick."

However, this former Bostonian now living in neighboring Quincy remains skeptical over Menino's efforts to create a regional mayors group. If the Boston mayor is truly concerned about working together with other New England mayors trying to find a common agenda, shouldn't Menino start with neighboring Quincy over the protracted conflict involving Moon Island?

Last year, the two cities were hardly talking with each other. At one point, Menino was to have, apparently met with Quincy Mayor James Sheets, but Menino sent Police Commissioner Paul Evans to represent him. I took this move as a personal insult to the office of the Quincy mayor since Evans is not the mayor of Boston.

Before Menino goes big time working out his regional group, shouldn't he make sure Boston and Quincy are working together for a mutual solution for the issues involving Moon Island? It's nice to invite New England mayors to breakfast but before he can build bridges to Providence, R.I., or Hartford, Conn., or Manchester, N.H., shouldn't he find a way to cross the Long Island bridge with Sheets and solve the endless Moon Island squabble?

If Menino and Sheets aren't in sync, how can anyone talk about a New England Regional Mayor's Group? If Boston and Quincy can't work together, it won't happen anywhere else, will it?

American Red Cross Thanks Community For Its Assistance

[The following was submitted for publication.] Dear Friends of the Red Cross:

The 1995 Holiday Season is behind us and as we put our records and paperwork away for another year, we are reminded of the genuine caring and marvelous enthusiasm displayed by members of the community.

The American Red Cross, through their Holiday Stocking Program, was able to provide over 2,200 stockings and gifts for needy children in the area. How do we "thank you" properly? One of the grateful mothers wrote us and put it this way:

"A simple thank you for all you have done just doesn't seem to suffice. I just don't know what to say. You've done such a wonderful thing, providing a happy Christmas for my children."

Imagine the beautiful smile that appeared on each child's face Christmas morning when they saw a stocking filled with toys. Please remember, you, the community, made it all happen! Thank you for serving your not-so-fortunate neighbors through the American Red Cross.

Shea Calls For MDC Take-Over Of Harbor Islands

By PAUL HAROLD

Rep. Charles Shea proposed legislation that would have the MDC take ownership of the Boston Harbor islands to prevent their future use as dump sites.

His action came after the disclosure that Gallops Islands was sold to John Coleman, head of Disposal Corporation of Boston, for use as a dump.

Quincy had filed bills in equity against Coleman to prevent its use for dumping purposes, noting such uses led to the pollution of harbor waters and produced odor and smoke pollution for miles along the coast.

Coleman bought the island from Charles Sassone of Westwood for $30,000.

7 SITES PROPOSED FOR HIGH-RISE BUILDINGS

City planner James Lee proposed seven sites, consisting of 600 acres across the city for high-rise construction. The changes were labeled as "interim modifications" to be in place only until the revised zoning ordinance was enacted within the next year or two.

Proposed residence D zones consisted land between the Braintree line and Faxon Park; north of the Braintree line and east of Willard St. and west of the Southeast Expressway; north of Granite St. between Presidents Lane and New Haven railroad tracks; between Beale St. and Lincoln Ave.; west of Newport Ave.; Quarry Hill bisected by Quarry St.; Quincy Shore Boulevard and the Neponset River, east of the New Have tracks; and north of West Squantum St. between Evans St. and the Milton line.

PROCTER AND GAMBLE PLANS $2 M EXPANSION

Procter and Gamble plant manager James Deupress announced a $2 million expansion of the facility at Quincy Point, which would include a 140,000 square foot warehouse to replace one in Braintree.

Included in the expansion was expansion of equipment and inventory capacity. The expansion would create 30 new jobs at the 23-year-old plant.

Dom's Oriental Pasta Sauce

In order to ease some of the boredom from the storms of late, I invited the family to come to a pasta party with one catch, they all had to cook a favorite pasta.

There was 18 of us in all, and we put one large pot of water to boil, and each of us cooked our pasta and then drained to put our favorite sauce over it.

Here is an oriental sauce made by our son Dom which was very different from the usual, and very delicious.

DOM'S ORIENTAL SAUCE

3 tablespoons olive oil
2 large cloves of garlic (minced)

1/2 pound shiitake mushrooms (sliced)
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/4 cup white wine
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 cup peas
2 stalks of scallions (cut)
1 tablespoon Balsamic vinegar
1/2 pound noodles

Put water on to boil for the noodles.

In hot oil, saute the mushrooms first, add the garlic and scallions and blend.

Add the rest of the ingredients and cook until sauce is heated.

Pour over the cooked noodles and serve hot. Needless to say there were no leftovers that night!

OUR Policy On ENGAGEMENT PHOTOGRAPHS AND WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

Ayers Conversion Van Makes Atlanta Trip For Travis Roy

A van from a North Quincy van conversion center, Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc., will be used to transport Travis Roy in Atlanta and back home next spring.

Roy, the Boston University hockey player who was left paralyzed due to a tragic hockey accident, was airlifted from the Boston University Medical Center Hospital on Monday, Feb. 5, to the Shepherd Center in Atlanta, Georgia, a specialty hospital that deals only with spinal cord injuries and paralysis.

Roy, who has been a patient at the BU Medical Center since Oct. 22, will begin the next phase of his rehabilitation at the Shepherd Center, including therapeutic services and a wide variety of recreational programs that Travis has chosen.

Mr. Lee Roy, Travis' father, will be driving the handicap-equipped 1996 Dodge custom van—converted by Ayers Handicap Conversion—to Atlanta to accompany his son.

Ayers Conversion prioritized their work schedule, working closely with the Roy family over the last few months as well as Travis' physicians, to convert the van so that it would be ready for Mr. Roy to take to the Shepherd Center this week. The van was converted in 1 1/2 weeks.

Ayers, coordinating with manufacturers, was able to donate equipment and a portion of their services to assist the Roy family and this worthy cause.

Lee Roy expressed sincere appreciation toward the efforts, kindness and cooperation that Ayers Conversion offered during this trying time.

Travis Roy will be returning from Atlanta back to New England in the spring, at which time the Roy family will continue to work with Ayers Conversion for future conversions.

The program is tailored to members of public retirement boards who seek to enhance their knowledge of pension investments and fiduciary responsibilities.

The Norfolk County Retirement Board made up of Shea, Retirement Board Chairman and Norfolk County Treasurer Robert D. Hall and Stoughton Town Treasurer Thomas A. Rorrie oversees the $220 million pension fund under the Rules and Regulations of Chapter 32 of the Massachusetts General

The NCRB also works closely with PERA, the Division of Public Employees Retirement Administration, the state agency with overall responsibility for monitoring the operation of the retirement system.

Shea said, "My goal for this new term is to insure that the Norfolk County Pre-Retirement Education Seminar Program is brought to every unit in our system and that I continue to bring a format of open communication to our members."

Kids Voting Poll:

Minority President Seen Before Woman

More students and adults believe there will be a minority American president in their lifetime than believe there will be a woman president, a nationwide poll in which Quincy participated shows.

Some 2,106 students and adults participated in the poll sponsored by the Kids Voting USA program.

High school students and voting age adults differed over the top issue in this year's election campaign, the survey shows.

Violence/crime ranked as the number one issue among the student responses as the most compelling election year issue. Adults chose fiscal issues—"balancing the budget" and "jobs/economy" as the main issue.

Both adults and students chose Abraham Lincoln as the past president they would like to see as a candidate in this year's election. He got more poll votes than runners-up John F. Kennedy and Franklin Roosevelt combined.

Quincy participants, however, went more with Kennedy as this year's past president candidate.

The non-profit, non-partisan Kids Voting USA poll in late January was both a measurement of voters' leanings on issues this year as well as an educational project for the participating students. It is believed to be the first nationwide poll to ever be conducted among high school students and adults in the same school districts.

Quincy participated in the Kids Voting program in last year's city elections, the first community to do so in Massachusetts. In the program, Quincy students from kindergarten to high school cast their own ballots in the final city election and agreed with adult voters on the results.

The Quincy program, with Harold Crowley as project coordinator and School Supt. Eugene Creighton chairman of the board, is a role model for the rest of Massachusetts and will be expanded this year.

In Quincy, students at Quincy High School under the direction of teacher John Harrington participated in the Kids Voting USA Poll along with local adults. The local results in most cases mirrored those throughout the country with some exceptions.

Students and adults in Quincy regarded "balancing the budget" of much less importance than did students and adults from other states. Students and adults in Quincy depended more upon newspapers, political ads and "word of mouth" for obtaining information about candidates and issues.

They were more inclined to choose President John F. Kennedy among past presidents as their choice to run in this year's election.

The survey results: Top Issues. "Violence/crime" ranked as the number one issue among the student responses as the most compelling election year issue. Adults chose fiscal issues—"balancing the budget" and "jobs/economy" as their leading reasons to vote this year.

Female President? Minority President? When asked if there will be a female president in their lifetime, only 45.5 percent of students and 38.9 percent of adults said "Yes." However, a majority of both students (52.6 percent) and adults (50.5 percent) agreed that there will be a minority president in their lifetime.

Primary Information Sources. Television newscasts ranked as the most frequently-mentioned source of information on this year's candidates and issues among students (82 percent). Newspapers were most often cited by adults (76.5 percent).

Past Presidents As 1996 Candidate. While the 1996 candidates battle it out in the snows of New Hampshire this week, history's past presidential heroes were vying for top spot on the Kids Voting USA poll. Both adults and high school students would choose Abraham Lincoln as the preferred president to resurrect from the past to run as a candidate in this year's election. In fact, Lincoln scored more poll votes than John F. Kennedy and Franklin Roosevelt combined as the runners-up. (Interesting note: John F. Kennedy surfaced as a write-in.)

Most Important Qualification For President. About one-third of the students chose a "candidate's stand on the issues" as the most important qualification for selecting a U.S. president. Adults chose "stand on issues" (28.8 percent) over "proven leadership skills" (24.4 percent), "character/reputation" (21.7 percent), and "a candidate's economic/budget position" (15.2 percent).

The Kids Voting USA poll data will be used as part of the Kids Voting USA Curriculum in participating schools and communities this year as students study the impact of the news media and polling data on the 1996 presidential campaign. Four additional Kids Voting USA polls will be conducted throughout the year.

Kids Voting USA is a private, non-partisan, non-profit grassroots organization dedicated to educating youth on the importance of an informed electorate and on voting to sustain democracy, and to increase adult voter turnout now and in the future.

The poll was conducted among 1,286 Kids Voting high school students (Grades 9-12) and 874 adults during the week of Jan. 15-24. (The poll's sampling error is plus or minus 3 percent.)

QUINCY SUN Assistant Editor Michael Whalen addresses fifth and sixth graders at St. Mary's School during recent Student Appreciation Day, the final day of Catholic School Week. He and photographer Tom Gorman spoke to the students about the duties of working in the field of journalism.

St. Mary's Celebrates Catholic School Week

St. Mary's Church in West Quincy recently celebrated Catholic Schools Week (Jan. 28-Feb. 2) with a variety of events.

The theme of the week was "Schools You Can Believe In."

The week kicked off Sunday, Jan. 28 with a 9:30 a.m. liturgy followed by an Open House at the school. Parents and students met with teachers and visited classrooms.

On Monday, Jan. 29 Blue and White Day was held as students wore the St. Mary's colors to promote school spirit. The following day, Teacher Appreciation Day was highlighted by a PTO-funded lunch for the teachers at The Common Market restaurant.

Teachers and students wore their pajamas to school for Pajama Day.

(Wednesday, Jan. 31). The Best Pajama Contest prize of $25 was won by fifth grader Joy Vignoni. Sixth graders also donated 25 new books to the school library.

A similar event was held on Hat Day (Feb. 1), the only day in the school year students can wear a hat to school. The $25 prize for The Great Hat Contest was won by second grader Nina Bandera.

The week came to a close with a variety of events on Student Appreciation Day (Feb. 2). Among the highlights was a visit by The Quincy Sun's Assistant Editor Michael Whalen and photographer Tom Gorman, who spoke with Stacey Kababik's fifth graders and Cindy Duggan's sixth grade class about their careers in journalism.

Council Turns Down Open Forum Proposal

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A majority of the City Council Monday night voted down a proposal by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi to hold a 15-minute open forum for the public at the beginning of every council meeting.

The council voted 5-4 against the proposal. Opponents included Council President Peter Kolson, Councillors Timothy Cahill and Michael Cheney. Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, while those in support were Raymondi, Councillor Paul Harold, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin.

Raymondi, a former School Committeeman, recently had suggested that an open forum similar to the one held before each committee meeting be held before every meeting of the City Council to allow Quincy residents an opportunity to speak their minds about any matter of concern to the council.

"This is an opportunity for the City Council as a group, as a body, to hear from the approximately 85,000 people we represent," he said.

Durkin, who crossed over from the School Committee to the City Council with Raymondi following the November election, agreed.

"I think this makes a good deal of sense," said Durkin.

Councillor Michael Cheney and others, however, said residents already have plenty of opportunities to speak their minds at public hearings held by the council, community meetings held by ward councillors, and other times.

"We conduct the business of the city in an orderly fashion," said Cheney, who added that some residents might abuse the privilege of an open forum by verbally attacking certain councillors, particularly before an election.

While Raymondi conceded that such harassment was a possibility, he said he has "the absolute, utmost faith in the people of the City of Quincy" and feels that most people would state their opinions in an appropriate manner.

Before the vote on Raymondi's proposal took place, Councillor Paul Harold suggested an amendment that would allow the council to hold such open forums on a trial basis until September, when the matter would come to the council for a final vote.

Cahill and McDermott—although opposed to the open forum proposal—joined its four supporters in backing the amendment in the event that the proposal subsequently was passed. Cheney, Kolson and Ayers voted against the amendment.

Kolson Proposal Would Regulate Home Businesses

The City Council put a proposal by Council President Peter Kolson for zoning changes that would regulate home-based businesses in Quincy into its Ordinance Committee Monday night.

Such operations are currently against the law in the city, and Kolson said his proposed regulations would allow the businesses to continue to operate legally while creating revenue for the city and educating officials on what kinds of businesses are in Quincy.

The proposed zoning changes include:

- Allowing artists, computer software developers, telephone solicitors, architects, accountants, real estate agents and other professionals to operate an office in their homes.

- Maintaining prohibitions on potential home businesses including restaurants, hairdressers, car sales, repair shops, medical offices and others.

- Requiring homeowners to pay $100 for a two-year business license.

- Prohibiting businesses from erecting signs or producing excess traffic, noise, pollution or anything else that disturbs the neighborhood's quality of life.

- Limiting office space to 20 percent of the home's ground floor.

Kolson said the Ordinance Committee will discuss the matter at the council's next meeting Feb. 20. He said a public hearing would then be held by the Planning Board, which subsequently would decide whether to give the proposal a favorable recommendation.

If the Planning Board did so, the council would hold another public hearing before taking a final vote on the matter, Kolson said.

He also told fellow councillors Monday night that a number of residents have asked for the changes because they want to legally operate such home businesses, which are becoming a growing reality in today's society.

"We either address this now, or we address this in a very few short years," said Kolson. "I think it's an important issue."

Inc. of North Quincy, a non-profit organization which provides vocational rehabilitation services, housing, transportation and employment opportunities for people with disabilities. The transportation division of the agency—which was established in 1968 and supports more than 1,000 consumers a year—will provide the service.

Following a request for proposals sent out by Quincy Transportation Inc., Cheney said, two bids were received and WORK Inc. was the low bidder.

"We are creating a partnership between two non-profit organizations," he said. "The partnership will allow us to transport seniors at the lowest cost possible."

Every Breath You Take

(NAPS)—It's ironic that the more healthy outdoor exercise you get the more vulnerable you may be to the hazards of air pollution.

In cold weather, air inversions may cause levels of carbon monoxide—colorless, odorless and undetectable by humans—to rise 500 percent. The deeper you breathe, the more this gas interferes with the body's ability to absorb oxygen. Exposure to high levels of carbon monoxide can cause damage to the heart and brain.

Cleaner-burning fuels will remove 850,000 tons of pollutants from the air this year.

In warm weather, ozone smog—formed by car emissions reacting in sunlight—becomes a primary health threat. Smog scars lung tissue, causes biochemical changes in red blood cells, and weakens immune systems.

Luckily, we can all breathe easier thanks to a new generation of cleaner-burning fuels known as Reformulated Gasoline, or RFG. Introduced in 17 states from Maine to California along with the District of Columbia on Jan. 1, 1995, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the California Air Resources Board report that RFG will remove 850,000 tons of pollutants from the air this year.

In Southern California, where the nation's worst smog conditions are responsible for $10 billion in health care costs annually, RFG has already helped achieve the lowest smog readings in forty years. For more information, call 1-800-468-6734.

Quincy Health Department's Tobacco Control Program

Protecting Your Feet

Preventing Serious Foot Problems

(NAPS)—Getting professional treatment for a foot problem early on can prevent it from turning into a more painful, serious and costly medical condition. Here are some things to watch out for:

Foot and ankle injuries: See a podiatrist as soon as possible. Till then, elevate the foot higher than the waist to reduce swelling or pain and use cold compresses or an ice bag wrapped in a towel in a 20 minute on/40 minute off cycle. For bleeding lacerations, cleanse well, apply pressure with gauze or a towel and cover with a clean dressing. Remove splinters, slivers and sand from the skin with a sterile instrument; broken glass or a needle must be removed professionally.

Infected toenail: Immerse the foot in a warm salt water soak or basin of soapy water, then apply a bandage. Watch out for any sudden changes in nail color or shape, or drainage from the infection. See your podiatrist as soon as possible.

Warts: Most are caused by a virus and can be easily and painlessly removed. However, some cancerous skin lesions resemble warts, so it's wise to consult a podiatrist about any suspicious growth or eruption of the foot. To prevent warts, avoid walking barefoot, change your shoes daily and keep feet clean and dry.

A visit to a podiatrist should be part of everyone's annual health check up. Unfortunately, many people don't get the preventive foot health care they need because Medicare and other insurance programs do not cover preventive foot care. They only cover the more serious and costly foot conditions that often develop because preventive care was neglected!

Many people who'd like to see the Medicare laws change are writing their legislators at the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515. You can get their names by calling the county seat.

Let The Children Be Heard: It's Their Health

By ROBERT HELFRICH

More than 150,000 children, including 1,000 Quincy children, recently wrote letters and postcards to President Clinton and the Federal Drug Administration, urging them to limit children's access to tobacco products, and to pass legislation that would control the content of tobacco.

What do we say? "Aren't they cute?" "They really are too young to understand." "What do they know?" "Children should be seen and not heard."

This time, the children should be heard.

Health has always been a major concern to all of us. When oil spills occur, the government steps in to assist, and we applaud. When federal agencies regulate the building and monitoring of nuclear plants, we cheer. When federal agencies pass guidelines as to what should, or should not, go into food products, we applaud.

When local agencies keep watch on the potential discharge of raw sewage into our waterways, we applaud. We applauded when the government passed regulations regarding the use of asbestos. We applauded all of this because we know that such action improves the quality of our health and extends our lives.

Numerous scientific research projects have given us incontrovertible evidence of the addictive power of nicotine. The National Academy of Sciences reports that nicotine addiction starts as a childhood disease. This report also demonstrates that virtually all adult smokers (89 percent) started between the ages of 11 and 18.

All tobacco research reports indicate that smoking among children continues at truly epidemic levels. The 1995 survey of Quincy youth and use of tobacco conducted by Impact Quincy reveal that nearly one out of four responding high school students are smoking. While the percentage of adult smokers is on the decline, the percentage of youth smokers is increasing.

However, large numbers of youth are attempting to take control of their health by encouraging the government to help provide protection for their peers. We should listen to them--for the sake of good health.

When Treating Influenza, Timing Is Crucial

While many people dismiss influenza or "flu" as a minor illness, between 25 and 50 million Americans contract the disease each year, and approximately 20,000 die from influenza-related complications.

Despite these statistics, people are unaware are that treatment options such as prescription antiviral medications exist. Antiviral medications, such as Flumadine (rimantadine HCl), are effective for treating influenza A, the type historically responsible for most severe influenza epidemics.

Prescription antiviral medications work by interfering with the reproduction of the influenza A virus in the body, thereby reducing the severity and shortening the duration of the illness. Antivirals, such as Flumadine, help stop type A influenza on day two of treatment.

"People need to see their doctor as soon as flu symptoms appear -- preferably within 48 hours -- for proper treatment," aid Steven R. Mostow, M.D., chairman of the department of medicine at Rose Medical Center in Denver and professor of medicine at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center. "When taken within the first 48 hours of flu onset, antiviral medications are highly effective."

Often mistaken for the common cold, influenza is a highly contagious infection caused by a virus. Flu sufferers have compared influenza's debilitating effects to "being hit by a truck." Influenza begins with a sudden onset of symptoms including fever, muscle and body aches, cough, headache, and chills. Without treatment, influenza can last for an average of seven days with more than two days of work lost by adult sufferers, a recent Roper Search survey found.

In controlled clinical trials with Flumadine, the drug's most common side effects included insomnia, dizziness and nausea, each of which generally occurred in less than 3 percent of patients. Flumadine is available by prescription only and should not be taken by people who have had a previous adverse reaction to amantadine or rimantadine.

Quincy DeWolfe Office Takes Part In Convention

The Quincy office of DeWolfe New England recently celebrated its ongoing success at DeWolfe New England's fourth annual convention at the Sheraton Boston Hotel & Towers.

Entitled "A Different Company for a Different Time," the convention attracted more than 1,100 participants and entailed three general sessions, 28 educational seminars, more than 50 vendor exhibits, and 30 giveaways including a laptop computer, airline tickets, weekend getaways, and spa treatments.

Dick DeWolfe, CEO of The DeWolfe Companies, offered a welcome to attendees. The company leader then went on to highlight the differences that he said have made DeWolfe New England the region's leading residential real estate firm as reported in two national trade magazine surveys in 1995, and to reveal some of the company's projected 1996 initiatives. He also announced that DeWolfe New England and the New England Home for Little Wanderers have formed an ongoing partnership that will benefit area children.

Patricia Frapp, regarded by convention planners as one of the nation's most engaging speakers, set the tone for the day at a general session in the morning and offered a fitting conclusion to the nine-hour event during the grand finale. A mid-day address by industry success story Joe Stumpf rounded out the day's general sessions and provided sales associates with advice necessary to the continuation of their providing quality homeownership services.

Breakfast seminars, scheduled throughout the day, covered subjects such as the Internet, technology, one-stop shopping, diversity, affinity marketing, and many other progressive topics facing today's business leaders.

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Giving Door Hardware a Fabulous Finish

(NAPS)—Looking for a new home at the old address? Many budget-minded homeowners choose to remodel instead of buying a new home these days. A good place to start is right at the front door. Replacing your door hardware, it seems, not only improves the appearance of your home, but can add greater protection.

Whether your choice for door hardware is brass or bronze—the most beautiful and practical materials—or even steel or iron, the decision-making process isn't complete until you've arrived at a finish. Here are a few tips on selecting door hardware finishes from the experts at Kwikset Corporation, makers of an innovative line of locksets called Titan:

- Zinc on Steel—economical. For utility items.
- Bright Brass—the classic, lacquer protected.
- Satin Brass—muted brass tone, lacquer protected.
- Bright Bronze—like a shiny penny.
- Bright Chrome on Brass—very classy.
- Satin Chrome on Brass—most popular. Good value.

Powdered and ceramic coatings offer a still wider spectrum of finishes and provide tremendously diverse color choices. Plastics, once regarded as cheap coatings, are now available in a constantly expanding range of attractive, space-age materials.

There are many new finishes available today, such as the chic look of metal grey, light black and dull black. Split finishes such as brass combined with chrome have also become very popular.

Another trend is the increasing use of bright colors. These sleek, simple, colorful products, influenced by European designers, offer an innovative stylized look.

Along with today's new door hardware finishes come locks with many new upgrades and features. The new Titan locksets are equipped with six pin cylinders that offer more keying combinations as well as anti-pick barriers that resist forced break-ins.

North Quincy Basketball Star All-Time Scorer With 1,386 Points Stanton's Mark One For The Books

Considering that her team won its last game by 37 points, it might be easy to overlook the fact that North Quincy High School's Sara Stanton is now the leading scorer in Red Raider basketball history.

That's because she actually broke the record in the eighth game of the season, but no one knew it. The high school had originally thought that the record was 1,404 points; turned out however, that it was only 1,254 points.

"We had thought that she was still far from the record," explained a beaming Ken Panaro, the varsity coach at NQHS. "As it turned out, though, she had broken it a few games ago. Nobody was really sure until we finally went back through the school records and found out."

Stanton now has 1,386 career points for the Raiders after her 22-point performance Friday night against Plymouth South in NQ's 59-22 romp. She can now lay claim to being the city of Quincy's all-time leading scorer.

"The great thing about

Sara is that she's probably one of the most unselfish players around. She is the go-to player on this team, but she doesn't try to score every time she touches the ball. She involves her teammates [Stanton holds the NQ single-game (16) and career (320) assist records] and never tries to force the game.

"Plus, she's a great kid to coach. She can play all five positions—and has in a game, works hard and is a sweetheart. She's a leader on this team," praised Panaro.

Sara, a four-year varsity player, was congratulated by teammates, parents and coaches alike in a ceremony before the game. She even had her name pasted up—albeit temporarily—on the North Quincy Hall of Fame as the lone female member.

Breaking the record was not a high priority for Stanton. She and her teammates—who have been playing together since the summer AAU season—had set team goals at the start of the 1995-96 campaign: They wanted to make the state tournament.

"The only goal I wanted for myself was 1,000 points," said Stanton. "After I got that last year, I set my sights on helping this team make it to the tournament. I've never been, and this is my last chance."

"It feels good to get the record, but I want the tournament more. We've been playing together for a while and we all want a shot. We don't just want to make it—we want to do well," she continued.

Stanton, who didn't start playing basketball until the seventh grade, was a member of the 1995 Division I runner-up NQ girls' volleyball squad for four years. She is also a member of the National Honor Society, the Spirit Committee and the Yearbook Committee as well as several other school organizations. She is planning to attend college and is undecided as to what she will study.

With Friday night's win, North Quincy now has nine wins—one short of the required 10. With five games left, the Raiders' state tourney goal is most definitely within reach.

North Freshman Girls Split Two, Now 9-6

The North Quincy High School freshmen girls' basketball team swept and were swept last week in two Old Colony League rematches this week. The two games split left the Raiders' record at 9-6 (8-4 in the OCL).

Last Tuesday night, North Quincy traveled to Weymouth to take on the first-place Wildcats. Kate Lavery, Ali Haddad (6-of-8 from the free-throw line) and Lauren Liuzzo combined for 23 of North's 27 points.

Angela Scott was strong on the defensive boards for the Raiders. North pulled to within four points with three minutes remaining but couldn't come any closer down the stretch as Weymouth held on for the 34-27 win.

On Thursday night, the Raiders played host to Plymouth South. Rude hosts, as it turned out. A balance offensive effort and a trapping defense allowed the home team to jump out to a 13-0 lead.

Plymouth South wasn't able to find their offensive groove—thanks to the Raiders' defense—and NQ cruised 32-16. Eight players scored for North, led by Ali Haddad's 10 points. Colleen McDougall and Melissa Pulera contributed four points apiece, while Rachel Powers dished out four assists and had two steals to go along with her four points.

The Raiders have three games left—two on the road—in their season. They travel to Boston Latin on Feb. 7 (4 p.m. tip-off), then are home against Taunton on Feb. 9 (3:30 start) before the season-ending showdown at Quincy on Feb. 16 (3:30 start).

Seek Win At Silver-Lake Saturday

Motivated Presidents Maintain Perspective

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Quincy High School ice hockey head coach Bob Sylvia has been coaching for 31 years. He has seen the highest the QHS program can fly and the lowest the Presidents can sink.

Through it all, Sylvia has learned about that all-time sports buzzword, "perspective." Sylvia has seen glasses half-empty and half-full.

"I always try to emphasize the half-full," said Sylvia. "No matter what is happening, a positive attitude and a willingness to try are important."

So, despite the President's 3-15 record, Sylvia has seen some very positive things this season. "We're a young club, and we're building a lot of character. This team might not have the best record, but we are a very good 'hockey' team, in terms of doing fundamental things in games," observed the coach.

The problem for the Presidents, however, has been their difficulties in scoring goals. Consider last Saturday night's game at Falmouth. At first glance, the 10-0 Falmouth win would appear to be a blowout. "But," cautioned Sylvia, "the scoreboard doesn't always tell the whole story."

"We played some good defense and played solidly, but two things happened: They were a hot team, and we couldn't put the puck in the net."

The veteran coach can readily put his finger on the President's main problem. "Most of the kids on this team are more recreational hockey players than anything. They practice for 13 weeks a year during the high school season, then don't really pay much attention to the game until the next year."

"That's not to say the kids don't work hard during the high school season, though—they work very hard. But they really don't fully understand that the thing that makes a good team like Falmouth successful is working on their game year-round. That means conditioning, weights, practicing skills—all things that make for a successful team," said Sylvia.

But the Presidents' skipper is pleased with what his charges have done. "There hasn't been a game so far where I felt that we weren't motivated to play or didn't try our hardest. This isn't life or death; it is supposed to be fun. Most of these kids have a lot on their mind besides hockey."

"We're not treading water or staying in place. I see improvement in practice, and that shows that we are getting better. Most people judge success by wins and losses; I judge it

In an offensive duel of high-scoring teams, Colonial Federal (4-6-3, 11 points) and the Mike Morrissey Club (6-4-3, 15 points) tied 7-7. Colonial was led by Brian Scott, who scored three goals and had an assist. Teammate Matt Moriarty had a goal and a pair of assists, while Matt Glynn lit the lamp twice. M. Sugarman Company (8-2-3, 19 points) topped Skinner's Winners (7-6, 14 points) 6-4 to hold on to first place, just two points ahead of Neponset Valley.

Purdy's, Barry's Tie; Doherty Tops Harold Club 5-2

Purdy's Ice Cream and Barry's Deli were fit to be tied, 2-2, in last weekend's Quincy Youth Hockey action. For Purdy's, John Kurpeski and Chris Tufo each had a goal, with Mike Arrufat and Mike Maxey getting assists.

Barry's was led by Jim Callahan's goal and an assist, with teammate Mike Calley also getting a goal. Mike Powers and John Clark contributed one assist each in the tie.

Lydon Russell and Samoset Pharmacy also tied 1-1. Dan Giannotti scored and unassisted goal for Lydon.

Samoset's Matt Quigley also netted a score off a Bret Martinson assist.

A pair of goals by Mike McNulty and a one-goal, one-assist performance by Britney Lomond sparked Doherty & White's 5-2 win over Paul Harold Club. Brianna Nolan and Jim Dunn also lit the lamp for Doherty, with Dan Poggi, Bob Gagliardi, Brendan Gavaghan and David Regan notching assists.

The Harold Club got goals from Noah Gimpelwicz and Jacob McQuinn, with Jonathan Conso notching a lone assist in the losing effort.

Wrestling

North Quincy Sending Eight Wrestlers To South Sectionals

The North Quincy High School wrestling team is gearing up for the Division II South state tourney sectionals starting on Friday, Feb. 9, at Hingham High School.

Although winless in their 1996 campaign, the Red Raiders boast several outstanding athletes whom head coach Mike Mauriello thinks could fare very well in the tournament.

"We've been very unlucky in the injury department this year," said Mauriello, "but, despite our lack of numbers, we have some great wrestlers who I expect will do exceptionally well at the sectionals. These guys, especially the rookies, have gotten stronger and stronger as the season has gone on."

Due in part to key injuries to senior captain Jason Gibson (119 lbs.) and sophomore Matt Kane (103 lbs.), the Red Raiders have had to forfeit six out of 14 weight classes for every dual meet this season, giving up an insurmountable 36 points in every contest.

Despite the poor meet record, however, the North Quincy grapplers have fared well individually, giving the team high hopes for the upcoming two-day event.

Senior captains Ed Ford (11-0 at 122 lbs., 13-1 with 10 pins overall) and Joe West (10-2 at 140 lbs.)

have led a young NQ team (four out of the eight wrestlers are rookies) in a very strong individual season.

Rookie junior Neil Costa (160 lbs.) has also had a standout season for the Red Raiders, including defeating the previously unbeaten Ray Martineau of Bridgewater-Raynham.

Other Red Raiders having strong seasons are senior captain Sean Hughes (189 lbs.); juniors Mike Greene (135 lbs.), Jose Villanueva (145 lbs.) and Andrew Cameron (152 lbs.); and freshman Chris Barra (125 lbs.).

Overall, North Quincy will have a total of eight wrestlers participating in this weekend's Div. II south sectionals.

Youth Hockey

Pee Wee B's Win Coca-Cola Championship In Bourne Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee B's won the 1996 Coca-Cola Championship last Sunday with a 3-2 win over Avon (Conn.) at Gallo Ice Arena on Cape Cod.

The Pee Wees had swept the qualifying round on Jan. 19-21 to make it to the championship game against a high-scoring Avon squad that had racked up 25 goals in its three previous games.

Andy Nestor opened the scoring for Quincy just 15 seconds into the game when he converted a Matt Kennedy assist for a 1-0

Quincy lead. Avon tied the game at 1-1 however, just 30 seconds later in the opening period.

After a scoreless second period, Avon took the lead at 2-1 with a goal in the opening minutes of the third period. Joe Fitzpatrick tied the game at two with a goal off a Dan Sheehan assist, setting the stage for a dramatic finish.

With 1:37 left in the final period, Quincy's Matt Reggianni broke from his own end and went the length of the ice to score the winning goal. The Pee happy note written in your own handwriting... a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you," but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentine's exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good too!

A Thought For The Week

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A

Cafe Charged With Two Violations

Police Chief Francis Mullen told the Quincy License Board Tuesday that the Quincy Police and the State ABCC after a joint inspection of the Hat

Rack at 7 Copeland St. has charged the establishment with two counts of violation of Chapter 138 Sec. 69.

Mullen said as a result of the inspection, the Hat Rack will be charged with the delivery of an alcoholic beverage to an obviously intoxicated person, and allowing an intoxicated person to remain on the premises.

Mullen said the next step will be a hearing conducted by the ABCC. He said his department will then monitor the hearing and determine what further steps will be taken.

TMJ: A STRESSFUL CONDITION

Ever been told to just "grin and bear it?" That kind of advice may smooth things over on the surface, but it is also the sort of attitude that can lead to a case of temporomandibular joint (TMJ) disorder. TMJ is typically brought on by stress, either jaw clenching emotional stress, or physical stress brought on by prolonged or repetitive behavior. (TMJ is common among violinists who play with their instrument clamped between chin and shoulder, for example.) Symptoms include migraine headaches, earaches, sinus problems, facial pain that radiates to the neck, grating noises, and jaw "locking." TMJ treatment may call for medication, physical therapy, stress management, dietary changes, or (rarely) surgery.

P.S. Some 90 percent of TMJ sufferers are women. If you grind your teeth at night and it causes your jaw to ache, you might need some medical intervention. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Whatever your medical needs, we treat you with professionalism and respect, offering you the latest in medical expertise. I am also board certified in cardiology and internal medicine. BILLBOARD-LIKE SIGN proclaiming Uncle Sam Rounseville's love for Jean Kenney erected on the old Howard Johnson office building at Newport Ave. and Beale St.

He Proposes And She Accepts A Special Valentine For Uncle Sam

The thermometer looked like it could use ear-muffs—it was that cold—but there was plenty of fire in Uncle Sam's heart and love was in bloom as Old Man Winter gave way to Dan Cupid.

On bended knee and in front of a four-by-eight-foot billboard-like sign proclaiming, "Jean Kenney I WANT YOU To Marry Me," Uncle Sam popped the Valentine Day Eve big question at the corner of Beale St. and Newport Ave. Tuesday at high noon.

"I know I am a high maintenance person and I have a hard time balancing my budget, but will you marry me?" Uncle Sam proposed.

Jean, who was taken by surprise, smiled, thought a bit and replied, "I will."

He presented her with a three-diamond engagement ring and a dozen tiny American flags and roses as passersby cheered and motorists tooted horns and waved.

"I was just shocked," Jean, who is a mortgage lender at Hibernia Savings Bank and third vice president of the Quincy Lions Club said. "He kept this under wraps so well."

She arrived at the scene in a limousine, thinking she was on her way to Boston to a company she was led to believe had called and was interested in a mortgage loan.

The limousine, donated to Uncle Sam's use by A & B Coach of Quincy, picked her and Jane Hanlon, loan officer, up at the Hibernia Bank in Wollaston.

For a little while, Jean was thinking to herself that if the Boston company sent a limousine to get her, they must be a big company thinking about a big loan. But the limousine stopped at Newport Ave. and Beale St. in front of the old Howard Johnson office building.

She could see Rounseville but the sign was blocked by members of the press and passersby standing in front of it.

"I thought he was doing a promotion," she said.

Hopes Increase Will Be Smaller

Sheets: City Will Help To Lessen MWRA Impact

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city is prepared to help lessen the impact of an increase in Massachusetts Water Resources Authority rates, according to Mayor James Sheets.

Sheets said Tuesday a $1 million stabilization fund that was created by the city last year could go a long way toward that end.

The mayor also said he feels the final rate increase that is levied later this year will not be as drastic as those announced this week.

On Monday, the MWRA unveiled a planned 7.7 percent increase in wholesale rates it charges cities and towns. Sheets, however, said increases tend to be reduced after the MWRA Advisory Board works on the numbers, and the final hike will not be known until late spring or early summer.

In any event, the proposed increase will not hit Quincy as hard as some neighboring communities. While MWRA officials say Quincy will see an increase of 5.2 percent, Braintree will see a 16.9 percent increase and Weymouth a 21.5 percent increase.

Sheets added that he hopes the Quincy increase is more in the vicinity of 3 percent after the MWRA Advisory Board finishes its calculations.

"It will depend on how the numbers come down," said Sheets.

How much money will be taken from the stabilization fund will be determined by the actual rate increase, the mayor said.

Downtown Business Survey:

Most 'Doing Well' Or 'Holding Our Own'

By MICHAEL WHALEN and CHRISTIAN POTTS

Despite the severe winter, business in downtown Quincy is ranging from "holding our own" to "doing well" to "doing great," a Quincy Sun survey this week shows.

More than a dozen Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) members were polled. The general consensus was that the downtown shopping district remains relatively strong and will continue to grow in the future.

Merchants were chosen randomly and contacted by telephone. Among their responses:

Don Russell, Woolworth's: "My business has never been better."

Deanna Gazarian, Phase II Jewelry and Gifts: "Phase II is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances (surrounding the downtown). We're holding our own. You constantly have to work on it harder than you used to. But we were very happy with 1995, and I'm very confident about the future."

Peter Kerr, B & D Abbott's Pub & Friery, which opened two months ago: "We're doing pretty good. Business has been building steadily. It's kind of hard to judge, since we haven't been open that long, but I'm pleased, especially considering the weather we've had."

"For a new kid on the block, I'm pretty happy with the Center."

Jim Balnis, Wanna Bagel: "Business is very good. On a scale of 1 to 10, last year was definitely a 7 1/2 or 8. The winter weather has taken its toll (to some extent), but there's no complaints here, that's for sure."

Joanne Dondero, Abigail's Crossing: "We're doing great. We had a real good year in 1995, better than the year before. Business is picking up all the time."

"The only gripe we get is about parking, and we have to work around that. I tell people to park down at the (Hancock) lot by the courthouse. But I love my location. The city is beautiful, the view is beautiful, and we love being here."

Diane Ryan, Fine Light Photography: "The business does well; it's stable. We've had a good year, and we're anticipating a big year ahead. We're diversifying to meet consumer needs, and we're thinking of expanding."

Ryan agreed, however, that "parking is a problem" in the downtown and suggested that some empty storefronts or the old Patriot Ledger building could be developed into parking areas.

Jennifer Wood, Go West: "It's kind of slow right now, but you just have to keep plugging away. Christmas was down a little bit too, and I think the weather had something to do with that. But we have a lot of repeat customers, which helps."

Wood also said "more teamwork between the (Cont'd on Page 24)

Van Service To Shopping Centers, Crown Colony Starts March 7

Registration For Senior Citizen Shuttle Underway

Starting today (Thursday), local senior citizens can register for the senior citizen shopping shuttle van service to begin Thursday, March 7.

The meeting schedule was announced Tuesday by Councillor Michael Cheney, who serves as chairman of the Board of Directors for the newly created shuttle service.

The shuttle service, known as "Van About Town," will begin operating with five vans making continuous loops picking up senior citizens at their senior buildings and dropping them off at various shopping locations and Crown Colony throughout the day.

MICHAEL CHENEY

The shuttle service cost will be $1 for a round-trip ticket or $30 for a three-month pass, which allows access five days a week to the shuttle service.

The senior shuttle registration meetings will be held at each of the city's 15 senior citizen housing locations. The first meeting is today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. at O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St., and at Snug Harbor housing on Shed St., also at 2 p.m. A third meeting is scheduled today (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at Tobin Towers, 80 Clay St.

The remaining list of meetings accompanies this story.

At each meeting, seniors will be eligible to register for the pass program or purchase tickets. Any senior wishing to purchase tickets must make their check payable to Quincy Transportation, Inc.

Any senior citizen who lives in close proximity of one of the 15 senior buildings listed are also eligible for the shuttle service provided they are able to be picked up at one of the listed locations.

Cheney said he expects the second and third phases to be implemented over the next three months. "Our goals and objective is to provide every senior citizen with a shopping shuttle service ride," said Cheney.

Quincy Transportation, Inc. is expected to schedule meetings next month in community centers throughout the city in anticipation of extending the van service into the neighborhoods.

Marina Bay Condo Hearing March 13

The Quincy Planning Board has rescheduled a meeting on a planned Marina Bay project from tonight (Thursday) to Wednesday, March 13.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers said the postponement comes at the request of the developer of the proposed project, Marina Court Associates Limited Partnership, which wants to build condominium homes on 19.7 acres known as Parcel 37 at Marina Bay.

Area residents expressed concerns about the project at a recent community meeting held by Ayers. Based on those concerns, the developer is redesigning the proposal and will meet with residents and Ayers over the next several weeks to discuss the modified plans, Ayers said.

He added that he agrees with residential concerns and will hold another neighborhood meeting before the Planning Board meets March 13.

"I will continue to work with the residents of my area until a suitable proposal is presented," said Ayers. "Marina Bay is a beautiful area and it is important that whatever projects are proposed for additional construction will fit in with the current decor of the area and will protect residents' investments will be beneficial to Marina Bay and to the entire City of Quincy."

HELP FOR "HEALTHY" HEARTS THAT HURT

By now, most people are alert to signs of a heart attack and understand that swift action is the key to survival. However, what if the trip to the emergency room finds that, in spite of the choking, suffocating pains that are classic symptoms of angina, there is no evidence of heart disease?

Some 200,000 Americans with apparently healthy hearts report severe angina-like chest pains every year. Researchers have found that a reprieve from such recurrent pain may be possible through small doses of imipramine, an antidepressant drug often used to treat migraine headaches. These findings may offer hope to patients who have endured repeated attacks and subsequent testing without lasting relief.

P.S. A thorough evaluation must be done before concluding that chest pains are unrelated to heart disease.

If you are having chest pains, don't second guess yourself! We are here to help you with the right diagnosis. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. A 'New' Look For Old City Hall

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

City Council President Peter Kolson wants to give the City Council Chamber in old City Hall a new look—a new old look.

Kolson is reaching back to 1889 and the city's first City Council for ideas to renovate and restore the chamber.

That 1889 council had 16 members but don't worry, Kolson has no thoughts of trying to increase the present nine member council by seven. (Wonder how long those council meetings took?)

But he is interested in the individual U.S. Senate-like desks they sat at and will explore the possibility of duplicating them.

His plans also include:

- Installing a chandelier and/or Colonial style light fixtures, and a new electrical system.
- Removing the acoustical wall boards and painting the walls an antique white.
- Installing new Colonial blue carpeting inside the council railing and matching runners on restored floors outside the railing.

He is also looking into the possibility of new seating for the public, maybe chairs with a Colonial look. He would also like a new podium for the public to speak at during Council hearings.

Kolson would also have the City Seal on the wall behind the council president's podium cleaned and repainted and maybe in a gold leaf frame.

Kolson says he has been thinking about the project since he was elected to the council from Ward 1 in 1989 and visited other city and town halls.

"I really felt bad when I came back and looked at our council chamber in comparison," he says. "The tapes holding the carpeting together, those acoustical boards and other things that stood out like a sore thumb."

"When I became council president I decided I wanted to do something about it."

He's now on his way to doing something about it.

An application is being readied for filing with Secretary of State William Galvin for state funds to finance 99 percent of the estimated $150,000 to $200,000 cost of the renovation project. Filing deadline is March 1.

Quincy architect John Sheskey is helping him with the application and the design work on a volunteer basis.

"I hope we can start it this summer while the council is in recess," Kolson says.

"I want to give it a nice historical lustre, a place that tourists will want to see when they come to Quincy and residents will be proud of."

When the project is finished, Kolson wants to return the photographs of former mayors to the City Council chamber, placing them together in one or two large frames. The photos are now in a hall on the third floor of new City Hall.

Among the mayors is Water Hannon, who had the council chamber redone during his administration in the early 1970s, including cleaning and repainting the city seal which had turned almost black through the years.

Another of the mayors is James McIntyre after whom old City Hall was renamed and dedicated the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

"There's a lot of Quincy history in that city hall and council chamber," says Kolson. "John Quincy Adams, Jr. served as an alderman there when Quincy was a town."

And, he adds:

"You know, this is the people's house. And we (elected officials) should take care of it and its history."

MEMBERS OF THE new City Council were invited to a get-acquainted meeting with Eastern Nazarene College President Kent Hill the other day.

On his way in, Councillor Paul Harold noticed a new wrought iron colonial style gate.

Knowing that Mayor James Sheets who was also attending the meeting is a graduate of ENC, Harold mused: "Are you going to call this Sheetsgate?"

Ever since Watergate political scandals seem to have the word gate attached to them.

But everyone—including Sheets—got a chuckle out of Sheetsgate.

THE COLD WEATHER got you down? Rep. Michael Bellotti, you might say, has a fundraiser coming up that might help warm you up.

Bellotti is hosting a beach party Friday, Feb. 23 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Not at Wollaston Beach, but at Pat Flanagan's, Parkways. There will even be a Hawaiian shirt contest.

Tickets are $10 and are available by calling 479-0111.

AND THIS WILL also help chase the winter blues: St. John's parishioners recently voted at a parish "town meeting" to continue its St. Anthony's Festival.

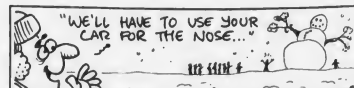

The festival, held in June, has become one of the most popular local summer events.

THINKING OUT LOUD: Why do TV and radio weathermen like to give a five or seven day forecast?

They give it to you the beginning of the week and then, it seems, change it every day after.

Why do they try five and seven day forecasts when they often have a hard enough time trying to get the very next day's one right?

OBSERVATION via the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter (and from wherever they got it): "On skiing. . . A winter sport that people learn in several sittings."

The current record for the tallest snowman was set in 1992, when a team of 12, under the direction of Philip and Colleen Price built a 76 foot, 2 inch high snowman in Valdez, Alaska.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD POSTCARD view of the Granite Railway Quarry, perhaps the most famous of the Quincy quarries. Originally named the Pine Hill quarry, the Granite Railway Company moved its operations here in the mid 1800's after their Bunker Hill quarry had outlived its usefulness. Located between Cashman's and Swingles, the stone from this quarry was used in many important buildings throughout the United States. The most notable may be the Minot's Ledge

Light House off the coast of Cohasset. One of the world's most famous lighthouses, it has stood for almost 150 years. Waves sometimes crash over the top of its 114 foot peak causing little more than a strong vibration in the seemingly solid Quincy granite structure. This quarry is filled with water. It has become a favorite place for rock climbers to sharpen their skills.

The Gift That Saves Lives

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The most recent blood shortage caused by severe New England weather led to an appeal for donations by the American Red Cross. It is a reminder to everyone how important blood donation is to the maintenance of our blood supply. We thank members of the community who responded by giving the gift of life.

Across the nation, only 6 percent of those eligible to participate in the volunteer blood donor program do so. However, many of us will require a blood transfusion at some time during our lives. Clearly, more people are needed to become blood donors, during the winter and all year long. Those who already participate in the blood donor program are asked to try to give as often as they are eligible (up to six times a year).

Blood is a life-saving, national resource that must be available each and every day. Blood donated today will save several lives in days to come. Most people believe a unit of blood goes to only one person. In fact, it is separated into components to help at least two, and often three or more patients in need of transfusion. Advances in medicine allow blood and blood products to be used in treating diseases of the heart, kidney, liver and bone marrow, as well as many other illnesses and accident-related traumas. The American Red Cross invites you to carry to spirit of the holiday season into the New Year, by giving the gift that saves lives. Simply call the Red Cross at 1-8---GIVE-LIFE. you can play a critical part in maintaining a precious, life-saving resource for our community.

Praises Bellotti For Sponsorship Of Local Aid Resolution

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of cities and towns across the state, the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) wants to thank Rep. Michael G. Bellotti for co-sponsoring the Early Resolution on Local Aid.

The early passage of this legislative resolution is important to communities as they prepare their budgets for the next fiscal year. With the demands on cash-strapped municipal budgets, it will be enormously difficult for town meetings and city councils to make meaningful budget decisions without local aid figures. The local aid resolution would set the base level of local aid for cities and towns, returning $41.6 million in new lottery aid and $207 million in new education funds, as promised by the Legislature last year.

Municipalities will not know how much local aid they will receive, usually distributed through the so-called "Cherry Sheets," until the Local Aid Resolution is enacted. Because communities need these local aid increases in order to balance their budgets and provide basic services to their residents, the adoption of this resolution is in the best interests of the taxpayers in Rep. Bellotti's district.

The MMA extends its appreciation to Rep. Bellotti for supporting and co-sponsoring the Early Local Aid Resolution and for making an early commitment on the local aid increases and urges the Legislature to adopt the measure as quickly as possible.

Gift Drive Brought Cheer To Disabled Veterans

[Ed. Note: ROTC cadets at Quincy High School held a Christmas Gift Drive in December for local disabled veterans. C/Capt. Linda Au, who supervised the project, recently submitted the following for publication.]

This is my last year in high school. I wanted to do something special, something memorable.

When Lt. Col Ciampa asked me to supervise the project for the Disabled Veteran Gift Drive for Christmas, I was at first a bit hesitant. But when I finally agreed to do it, it kept me busy most of the time.

The ROTC cadets were supportive by donating either money or gifts. And many of them gave up their time to wrap the presents.

Two weeks into the project, I was desperate for donations. I decided to make a few phone calls, and I called a few businesses where I was well known. To my surprise, Quincy 2000 donated approximately $150 worth of gifts!

On the day that we went to the Disabled Veterans Hospital in West Roxbury, I was both nervous and excited. Two of my assistants were unable to attend for personal reasons. I, therefore, had to command the several cadets who replaced them at the last minute: Chris Bower, Kevin Lee, Randy DaSilva, Carmine Iandolo, and Josh Ackles.

Overall, the project went well, but I am disappointed that I was not able to meet all of the patients! But through my observation of the video taken by Chris Bower and Jaime Ackles (a former AFJROTC cadet), I saw that the patients were receptive and happy to receive our Christmas gifts.

I'm sure the conversations between patients and cadets brought the patients cheer. It makes a person feel warm and happy during the holiday season.

Once more, special thanks to all the cadets who helped wrap the gifts and those who went to distribute them at the Disabled Veterans Hospital.

2 From Quincy Share In Archbishop Williams Scholarship

Five Archbishop Williams High school students -- two from Quincy -- are recipients of the first Paul Leman Scholarship totaling $4,250.

The four are Ebbette Fortune, a junior and Katie Connolly, a freshman, both of Quincy; Christine Carr, of Canton, a senior; Brian Scully, Abington, a sophomore; and Shawn Hayes of Braintree, a sophomore.

The scholarship was founded for and named for Paul Leman, formerly of Quincy, a 1988 AWHHS graduate who recently died due to a defective coronary artery.

"Paul was an athletic kid who played ice hockey and golf and loved his days at AWHHS. We decided to hold a golf tournament to raise funds for a scholarship to keep his spirit alive," said presenter and friend George Paluzzi.

"You had to know Paul. He was always there to lend a helping hand. He touched so many people that we had to turn many away from the tournament. (Eighty-eight golfers entered the tournament and 175 friends and relatives attended the benefit dinner at the Pembroke Country Club." We would like to make this an annual scholarship," stated Ed Linehan, co-presenter and friend.

Also present for the scholarship was Diana DellaPenna, Paul's fiancée.

"We were to be married this May 28th and had just purchased a house when he passed away. We met here at AWHHS in the hall upstairs. He was a senior and my friend introduced us just before his graduation."

Also present for the ceremony was Paul's mother, Carol Leman; his father, Paul Leman and his sister, Kim Nadeau.

Title I parents will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Ward 4 Community Room at the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The topic will be the endangered Title I budget. Parents of Title I students at the Early Childhood Center and Snug Harbor, Point-Webster, Lincoln-Hancock, Broad Meadows, Sterling, St. Joseph's and St. Mary's schools have been invited to attend.

"Congress and the president have come to a temporary agreement until March 15, which would cut all federal education programs 25 percent," said Title I Director Alicia Coletti. "Such drastic cuts would seriously affect the Title I services presently provided for Quincy students."

"We are encouraging parents and all citizens to write letters to specific members of Congress, protesting these proposed cuts."

Sheets Wants College Name Added To MBTA Station

The Quincy Center-Quincy College MBTA Station?

The name change could be a possibility. On Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets wrote to state Transportation Secretary Patrick Moynihan requesting that the Quincy Center "T" station's name be updated to acknowledge the presence of the city-owned college in the downtown.

Sheets said he made the request after meeting with Ellen Serino, president of the college's student government. Members of the student government think the name change would help increase awareness of the college's location and give it a more prominent role in the community, he noted.

It would not be the first time a school's name has been placed at an MBTA stop, noted Sheets, who cited the JFK-UMass Station, which is also on the T's Red Line, as one example.

Asked what the chances are of having the station's named changed, Sheets replied with a grin, "I have no idea."

The mayor said he and Serino also discussed a tie-in between the city and the college's tourism program. The city, with its historic sites, could help provide tourism students with "field work" while they study for their degrees, he said.

Sheets said that in turn, he asked Serino if she could ask the student government to have Quincy College students increase their patronage of downtown businesses and meet with officials from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association to discuss the matter. She agreed to take the mayor's request to the student government, according to Sheets.

Quincy Head Start Program Receives Grant For $571,428

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QPAC)-Head Start, the lead agency for the Quincy Early Childhood Community Partnerships for Children (CPC) grant funded by the Massachusetts Department of Education, has announced the receipt of new funding through the program totaling $571,428.

The funding includes $259,740 for Fiscal Year 1996 and $311,688 for Fiscal Year 1997.

The funds will provide financial assistance to low-income working families with preschool children as well as offer training and technical and financial assistance to preschool child-care providers in Quincy. New funds will enable collaborating early childhood providers to serve 50 new Quincy children and to extend the school year or hours of service for 37 children already enrolled.

QCAP Head Start. Community Care for Kids, the Quincy Public Schools, South Shore Day Care Services, Djerf Christian Preschool and other private child-care providers to be recruited will offer multiple child-care program options for low-income working families, emphasizing the acute need for full-day, full-year services. To enhance program quality, grant funds will also be used to fund early childhood courses, classroom equipment and supplies, and consultation services for participating programs.

Community Care for Kids (CCK), on behalf of the Quincy Childhood

Advisory Council (QE-CAC), is currently seeking the membership of additional licensed private child-care providers (both center-based and family day care homes) in Quincy who are interested in joining the approved network of providers for an innovative consumer-driven scholarship program for low-income working families with preschool-aged children.

"Mini-grants" for the purchase of equipment or to support other identified program needs will also be available to private providers.

Licensed preschool child-care providers interested in participating or low-income working parents in need of child care tuition assistance should contact Carla Steen at CCK at 471-6473, ext. 122.

Mullen Writes In Police Chief Magazine: City's Domestic Violence Program Is Having Long-Term Effectiveness

[Editor's Note: Police Chief magazine, the official publication of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, has published the following article, written by Quincy Police Chief Francis Mullen, in its February edition.]

Quincy, a city of approximately 90,000 neighboring Boston, has not had a domestic homicide in the past decade, even though statistics throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts show that a woman is murdered by her husband or boyfriend every 10 days.

For more than 20 years, it has been the policy of the Quincy Police Department, a force of 195 officers, to respond effectively to the scene of family disputes, take specific action to enforce protective court orders and take a reasonable measures to prevent further abuse. Our commitment begins with the police chief and extends to every line officer and civilian employee in the department.

In addition to standard recruit training and state-mandated training, Quincy police officers receive 20 additional hours of domestic violence training. Segments of this training are conducted by the district attorney so that officers know exactly what evidence is necessary to prosecute each case successfully in court, even if the victim does not testify. Officers are also taught to take pictures of any injuries, as well as overturned or destroyed furniture and property. Statements uttered by either party during disputes are recorded. As a result of our procedures, the district attorney has the most successful prosecution rate of batterers in the state, securing convictions or admissions in more than two-thirds of the cases.

Initially, we had a special unit to respond to domestic violence cases. Soon after, every officer was trained to know exactly how to properly handle domestic calls for service. Our officers assist victims in securing restraining orders 24 hours a day, seven days a week. We are renowned throughout the country as the model agency for Domestic Violence Ended (DOVE), and this notoriety is due to our strong commitment to protecting the victims, punishing the abusers and preventing further domestic violence. We have a DOVE battered women's shelter located in the city with a 24-hour hotline.

If police have probable cause to believe a properly-issued restraining order was violated, the abuser is arrested immediately. Even if the victim "invites" the abuser back into the family home, we arrest the abuser for violation of the court order. Often, the "invitation" was not voluntary, and we leave it up to the court to decide. Our job is to enforce the law.

The Quincy Police Department then takes one more step. If the woman/victim refuses to press charges and we cannot go forward without her, we continue to try and contact her to refer her to available services. We assure her we will be there when she is ready to take action to protect herself and, in many cases, her children. We don't want to see any victim of domestic abuse become a victim of domestic homicide.

In one particular case that was filmed and shown on "60 Minutes" in 1992, it took eight months before the victim of severe physical abuse would cooperate in prosecuting her abuser. But today, she has moved on with her life in safety. After spending time in jail and receiving two additional years of intensive probation supervision, the abuser—her ex-husband—has also moved on without any new complaints.

If an abuser violates his probation, we enlist the aid of the entire community in an effort to secure his quick arrest and incarceration. Photographs are displayed in local newspapers with a description of his criminal history. Thanks to public tips, our apprehension rate is over 85 percent, with most violators arrested before they commit any new crime or abuse.

By cracking down on domestic abusers, we prevent homicides and other criminal activity as well, including drug possession, drunk driving and displays of general violence outside the home. Through our commitment to end domestic violence, we have made a safer community for all our citizens.

For additional information on our emergency resources, contact the Quincy police chief at 617/745-5710, DOVE (battered women's shelter) at 617/471-1234, EMERGE (abusive males' counseling) at 617/422-1550, the Domestic Violence Unit (counseling) at 617/984-5605, or the Restraining Order Office (court) at 617/471-1650.

Uncle Sam, who said he is 56, and his bride-to-be, 46, have both been previously married and have two grown children each. They have known each other about five or six years. Both are Quincy residents.

After they first met, she recalled, he sent her a large jar of mixed nuts with a note that said: "I'm nuts about you."

"I should have known then, that it would lead to something like this," she laughed. She was given the rest of the day off by the Hibernia Bank.

Rounseville, who helped design the sign and erect it on the building, said he was nervous about everything going off right and whether Jean would say "Yes" or "No."

"I was up pacing the floor at 3 a.m.," he said. "I couldn't sleep."

Rounseville, who is a real estate agent at Century 21 Abigail Adams on Beale St., left the office saying, "I'm going out on a proposal."

They thought he was selling a piece of property.

Has a wedding date been set?

Rounseville, who officially changed his name to Uncle Sam in court six years ago, says the wedding will probably be on Flag Day or the Fourth of July.

"That way, I'm sure I won't forget a wedding anniversary," he said.

Civic Group Opposes Home Business Proposal

The Quincy Citizens and Wollaston Park Associations Inc. has voiced opposition to a proposal by City Council President Peter Kolson to permit home offices in residential zones in excess of those covered in the current zoning ordinance.

Arthur Chandler, president of the citywide civic group, stated in a letter to the council, "To preserve the quality of life in Quincy's residential zones and protect future residential property values, we believe that the current zoning ordinance should be strictly enforced and adhered to. The benefits from license fees would nowhere-near compensate residents of the loss of quality of life they came to Quincy to enjoy.

"We must protect the sacred trust that our zoning ordinance insures-to keep it the high quality, desirable residential suburban city it has been for over 250 years; to deni-grate its high quality to accommodate a relatively few home office supporters would be a sacrifice."

The home office proposal, as well as several other important matters pending before the City Council, was to be discussed with councilors at the association's open meeting last night (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy.

Colton To Attend Development Program In Washington, D.C.

Quincy Public Works Commissioner David Colton has been selected to participate in the 1996 Young Executive Development Program sponsored by the American Road Builders & Transportation Association (ARBT).

The program is designed to enhance the understanding of young executives in the transportation construction industry on governmental/business issues and processes that are critical to success in today's highly competitive environment. The curriculum includes discussions of the federal legislative and rule making process as well as overviews of federal environmental health, safety and economic regulations affecting the transportation construction industry.

Also included are selected topics in the area of business administration and international trade.

The three-day educational program will be held Feb. 20-22 in Washington D.C. Colton's application was submitted in October, 1995 and included a 500-word statement as well as a letter of support from Mayor James Sheets.

Colton said he is particularly pleased with the timing of the program since the Quincy Center Concourse project will involve federal funding and its success will require a clear understanding of transportation construction regulations.

The ARBTA was established in 1902 and includes members from both the public and private sectors who work in transportation construction. Colton is a member of the ARBTA Transportation Office Division Board of Directors.

Health Education Foundation Now At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital announces the establishment of the Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation.

Incorporated on Dec. 21, 1995, the new foundation replaces the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation as the organization that raises money to help support services and programs at Quincy Hospital.

The new Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation will assume the tasks of the previous foundation - to support new buildings, capital improvements and purchase equipment - and will also support new programs and services at Quincy Hospital.

Ralph DiPisa, CEO of Quincy Hospital said, "Today we know how important it is for people to be well educated about health issues in order to make informed lifestyle choices and to stay healthy. In addition, there is great emphasis on the importance of early detection in many diseases. The new Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation will help to support a wide range of health education programs and seminars, health screenings and wellness programs to help the people in our community be the healthiest they can be. And the Foundation will continue to build important new services at Quincy Hospital to take care of people if they do become ill."

The Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation was first established in 1988 to help raise money for the construction of the new McCauley Building. It has also helped to support renovations and purchase equipment for new hospital services like the cardiac catheterization lab, the new nursery, and the operating suites. The thousands of people who contributed to the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation have seen their generosity bear fruit in the beautiful buildings and new services at the Hospital.

The Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation will help support Quincy Hospital's commitment to providing quality health care for all of the people in our community. Gifts to the Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation are tax-deductible.

Those wishing to make a gift, or having any questions about the Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation, please call Joan Schwartz at (617) 376-4016.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Don't Leave Your Home Out In The Cold

Winter has worn out its welcome and you're catching your annual dose of cabin fever. Maybe you're considering taking off for a warmer climate for a while.

Before you close that suitcase, consider some of the hints below from the South Shore Association of Realtors if you are planning to leave your house for any length of time this winter season.

Be sure to check weather stripping around doors and storm windows. Make a trip up to the attic and inspect old insulation.

"Replacing old insulation will save you money on your heating bill and is a good idea even if you'll be sticking around this winter," says Mary E. Dawson, president of the South Shore Association.

She recommends that you leave your heat set at about 62 degrees to prevent water pipes from freezing and resulting in water damage if they should burst.

Make arrangements with a neighbor or responsible child in the area to shovel a path in front of your house and up to your door, if you plan to be away for any length of time when snowfall is a threat.

"In many instances, you can be held responsible for accidents that occur on your property due to slippery spots. Some mail carriers will even refuse to deliver mail to those houses without a path to the mailbox," Dawson cautions. "In addition, a shoveled walk also gives the appearance of someone living there--a thwart to burglars."

Before leaving your home for any length of time, you should also make arrangements to have mail and newspaper delivery stopped. For shorter trips, you might want to ask a neighbor to take your mail in for you. Not only will this guard against stolen or misplaced pieces of mail, but it also will make your home look lived in.

Another way to retain that "lived-in" look is to use automatic timers for lights.

If your travel plans don't include your pet, be sure to make arrangements with a neighbor or local kennel to ensure their care. Also, don't forget to make arrangements with someone to look after your house plants if you plan to be gone for an extended length of time.

Here's some other tips you might want to consider before leaving:

- Let your close neighbors know about how long you will be gone, as well as any details about persons who may be visiting your home during your absence.

- Make sure your house number is on both the front and back of your home and can be clearly read by neighbors who see anything suspicious that should be reported to the local police.

- If you have a second car, you might consider leaving it parked in your driveway, or making arrangements to have a neighbor park in your driveway to give the appearance that someone is home. If you are leaving a car behind, you also might want it up periodically to help ensure your battery stays charged.

- Be sure all locks on doors and windows are secure.

- Leave a travel schedule along with telephone numbers where you can be reached with a housekeeper or friend, in the event you need to be contacted in an emergency. Also, be sure to leave local telephone numbers of friends or relatives as emergency numbers with your housekeeper or neighbors.

"You'll enjoy your time away from home even more by knowing that you're leaving it well prepared and protected against the elements and crime," Dawson says.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of nearly 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Final Head-To-Head Meeting For Schools' All-Time Scorers Tonight It's Quincy Vs. North; Connolly Vs. Stanton

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Between the two of them, Quincy's Kerry Connolly and North Quincy's Sara Stanton have scored close to 3,000 points over the last four years.

Tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in Quincy's CTE Gym, they'll have their last chance to face one another in their careers as Quincy plays host to North Quincy in a battle for bragging rights for the winter.

(The game had been originally scheduled for Friday but was moved up a day because North Quincy is holding a semi-formal dance that night.)

North Quincy won the year's first meeting at home and wouldn't mind a sweep of the home-and-home series. But this is no ordinary series. You can't just walk in to your cross-town rival's house and steal a win; you have to be ready for anything.

"It's always a hectic game," said NQ girls' coach Ken Panaro. "The players from both sides always get geared up for these games because they know that pride is at stake."

"You can pretty much throw out all the records and statistics," said QHS coach Bob Noble Jr. "When it comes to this rivalry [North Quincy-Quincy], it doesn't matter what sport it is—emotion and pride are all that matters."

Both coaches know the outcome of this game will be determined by which team steps up as a team. "Sara and Kerry will get their points—they're both great players—but the team that gets consistent efforts out of its other players will win this game," said Panaro.

Coach Noble knows about consistent effort...and what can happen when you don't get it. "We were in the first game until the second half, when we didn't score for five or six minutes. That pretty much decided the game," said Noble.

Panaro cites playing smart and executing as the two most important keys to tonight's game. "We need to play to our strengths—boxing out and controlling the boards—and staying within ourselves. Playing our game."

Noble believes that his team needs to rebound as well. "No question, the most important things for us will be to control the boards, we have the ability to do that. If we avoid scoring droughts and stay consistent, we will be okay."

But when the tip-off comes tonight, Panaro and Noble know that the X-factor—emotion—will be the difference. "This is why the players play. For the seniors on both teams, this will be their last Quincy/Quincy game, and they will want that win. Whoever wants it more will win. I know we will go out and play hard," concluded Noble.

"The rivalry is very real and very important to these players. It should be a great game," finished Panaro.

NORTH QUINCY FORWARD Sara Stanton (#31) drives the lane against Taunton High School for two of her 21 points. The Raiders prevailed 63-48 to up their season record to 11-7 (10-6 Old Colony League) heading into tonight's (Thursday) game against cross-town rival Quincy High School. Stanton and Quincy's Kerry Connolly are the No. 1 and 2 all-time scorers in Quincy public schools' history.

Boys Playing For Pride

Like Ali-Frazier or Hagler-Hearns, the bi-annual Quincy-North Quincy boys' basketball games always manage to be exciting.

Whether fantastic finishes, outstanding individual performances or just flat-out great games, the Raiders and Presidents never fail to deliver.

Tonight (Thursday), the two will meet for the second—and last—time this season at North Quincy High School to add one more installment to this entertaining rivalry. Tip-off is at 7 p.m.

This season's first meeting was just four weeks ago at Quincy High School on Jan. 15. North Quincy dominated 70-47, getting a pair of sensational performances from junior John Coughlin and sophomore Brian Ross. Both registered "double-doubles" (i.e., double figures in points and rebounds), with Coughlin scoring 23 points and grabbing 15 rebounds, and Ross pouring in 21 points and pulling down 20 boards.

But that 23-point win hasn't made North Quincy head coach Ted Stevenson too overconfident. "We just had a week where we went 1-2, so our kids aren't feeling very cocky right now," said Stevenson.

The Raiders had been hoping that they could right themselves and streak into the state tournament. Before dropping their last two games, North had a record of 6-9 and was four wins shy of qualifying for the Division I South Sectional tourney.

"The kids are disappointed, naturally, and don't like the idea that we are out [of the tournament]. We were a young team this year and we let some games get away earlier in the season when we had chances to win. We had to learn to be ready for everybody and to keep up our intensity," said Stevenson.

The coach knows all too well, however, that Quincy will be ready for them, hoping to avenge the 23-point shellacking of earlier this season. Stevenson feels his players will be focused.

"This is one game I don't have to worry about the kids being flat. They'll be ready; in this case, the danger is in getting too hyped up because then you might lose focus," said the coach.

North Quincy could get a boost from the return of senior swingman Jim Rendle, who missed most of the season with a broken arm but might be back tonight. Unfortunately, in a classic case of addition by subtraction, North Quincy will be without Tommy Coughlin, who is out for the rest of the year.

"I think we're a better team now than we were earlier. With Jim out, we hadn't been starting any seniors, but we managed to do some good things. If we can use our strength inside, our ability to control the boards and if we can control their pressure defense, we can be successful."

"It should be a great game—it always is," concluded Stevenson.

Quincy, North Wrestlers Advance To State Finals

A total of seven wrestlers from Quincy and North Quincy high schools qualified for the Division I and II State Wrestling Championships this past weekend.

Quincy High School will send six wrestlers to the Division I State Championships at Brockton High School this Friday and Saturday, Feb. 16 and 17. The top six wrestlers from each weight class qualified for the states.

QHS wrestler Di Nguyen was the south sectional champion in the 103-pound class. Teammate Mark Froelich (140 lbs.) placed second overall in his class, losing on a last-second pin. Brian Woodberry (160 lbs.) and Kevin Connolly (152 lbs.) finished third and fourth, respectively, to earn a trip to the states. And Rich Testa (125 lbs.) and Jake Drohan (215 lbs.) both finished sixth in their respective classes to qualify for the tournament.

Overall, Quincy finished ninth out of 17 teams, which was where coach Lou Venturelli figured his team would place. "One of the goals for this team this season was to finish at .500 and then have our individuals do well at the states," said Venturelli. "We finished 8-7-1 on the season [2-3 in their league], and I was pleased with the individual and team efforts at the sectionals."

North Quincy will send two wrestlers to the Division II State Wrestling Championships on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 16 and 17, at Reading High School.

Senior co-captains Ed

Ford (119 lbs.) and Joe West (140 lbs.) both finished fourth in their respective weight classes out of a 16-man field at last weekend's Division II South Sectional Championships. Junior Jose Villanueva placed eighth in the 145-lbs. class and was selected as the second alternate for the state championships.

Both Ford and West scored upsets over higher-seeded wrestlers during the Volleyball

Sterling Boys' Repeat

The Sterling Boys' volleyball team defended their city championship title recently with two upset victories.

The 1995 city championship team was entirely comprised of eighth grade boys, so head coach Chris Prendiville saw the 1996 team as a rebuilding year, and during the regular season, rebuild is what the team did.

Each league game saw the Sterling boys lose to Central, Broadmeadows and Atlantic in close games. Going into the playoffs in fourth place, the Sterling boys had to face the No. 1-seeded Atlantic boys.

The first game saw Atlantic win 16-14. In the second game, Sterling charged back behind Keva Tupe's seven points to win 15-5. The third game was balanced on both sides with many tie scores. Sterling was led by co-captains Keith and Larry Antonellis who scored four and three points, respectively, in the 15-12 upset victory.

In the finals, Sterling faced the Central boys. Again, led by the Antonellis boys, the young Sterling squad settled down to business. Andy Tam, the fourth eighth grader delivered accurate sets. Sixth graders Jeff Quinlan, Chris Anderson, Joe Swanson and Mike McLaughlin played great defense. Seventh graders Kevin Eagan and Kent Tung passed well for the Eagles who won the championship in straight sets, 15-11, 15-13.

Two Undefeated Quincy Fighters In Golden Gloves For O'Malley's

O'Malley's Gym of Quincy Square has posted a 10-0 record in the annual New England Golden Gloves Tournament, being held in four locations throughout Massachusetts.

With several fighters already advancing in the tournament, it is possible that O'Malley's will be able to claim several New England Golden Glove titles at the end of the tournament.

O'Malley's has two Quincy residents fighting in the Lowell Golden Gloves. Steve Scigliano, a super heavyweight in the novice class, is 1-0 in the tournament so far. Framingham State College sophomore Jeff West of Quincy is 2-0 in the 139 lbs. novice class. West, who has great speed and quick hands, will face Dorchester's Bubba Conway in the finals.

O'Malley's has been in the class of the tournament, scoring six knockouts in ten victories. In fact, so as not to pit two of their fighters against one another, Jimmy Jordan of Marshfield, a heavyweight, was moved into the Southern N.E. Golden Gloves in Fall River because fellow heavyweight Junior Moniz of the South End (Boston) is undefeated in the Lowell Golden Gloves. Both are 2-0 with two KOs.

Tyrone Smith of Dorchester and O'Malley's is fighting as an open class heavyweight. Smith, the defending champion as well as AFB defending champion, is a huge favorite to win his division.

Charlie LoGrasso (1-0) of South Boston is representing O'Malley's in the light heavyweight open class, stopping Thomas Murray of Boston in one round on Jan. 30 to make the finals. Defending AFB champ Kevin Watts of South Boston will represent O'Malley's in the 139 lbs. open class. Michael Bernal, who at 16 years old is the youngest fighter in the tournament, is 2-0 with a knockout.

On Feb. 24, O'Malley's Gym will be presenting a spectacular night of amateur boxing at the National Guard Armory in Braintree. For information and tickets, call O'Malley's at 472-0033.

St. John's Baseball Registration Feb. 25

The St. John's Baseball League will be holding its annual registration on Sunday, Feb. 25, come rain, snow or shine.

The league, which was established by St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy in 1958, is open to all players who will turn 13 years old by June 7, 1996.

Registration will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in St. John's lower church on School Street in Quincy.

The cost is $42.00 per player, which covers the expense of full uniforms, trophies and a year-end cookout.

Squirt B's Tourney Bound

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Squirt B's won a thrilling 3-2 overtime game against Milton to earn a berth in the Massachusetts Youth Hockey State Tournament, being held March 8-10.

The Squirt B's, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, used their quickness and smart playing to win a hard-fought game. Squirt goalie Nick Manning had a spectacular game in net, keeping Quincy in the game.

scoring a goal in the first minute of the opening period. Forwards Liam Powers, Dan Sullivan and Ken Young had several good scoring opportunities but came up empty in the first period.

Justin Swierk finally put Quincy on the board with an unassisted tally halfway through the second period to tie the game at 1-1. Rob Mooney then put Quincy into front with a goal off a Pat Clifford pass to make it 2-1 Squirts.

Then, with 6:14 left in the game, Milton scored the tying goal and the game was knotted up at 2-2 at the end of regulation. Josh Giordani and Ryan Tobin tried to break the deadlock several times but couldn't convert.

Rob Mooney finally broke the tie, scoring the game-winning goal with 1:56 left in the overtime period off a Brendan Craig pass to make the final score 3-2. With the win, the Squirts have earned a spot in the state tourney.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

This is the month one thinks of Abraham Lincoln. That Lincoln was wise, strong, patient, compassionate, able, we know.

Over 7,000 books and pamphlets have been written about him. And there will be more. He was a man of mercy, weakness and strength. He never found a church that he could join, yet no man who has ever been in the White House has more nearly lived the two great commandments... Lincoln had unusual spiritual insight. He could see straight into the hearts of men. He had a childlike dependence upon God. Every situation, no matter how secular it might appear, was to him a spiritual situation. He was a man of great ability, but his overpowering genius lay in his penetrating insight into spiritual truth.

As Carl Sandburg, his greatest biographer, once said: "The greatest memorial to him was a united nation and a love and reverence of him in America and in the family of man over the earth."

We are very fortunate, as a nation, to have had such a great President during one of the most difficult and trying times in our nation's history.

stores" in the downtown, such as joint coupon deals, would be beneficial to business in the shopping district.

Chris Kusy, Rhyme 'N Reason: "I'd say overall we are pleased with the business we have at the moment. We had a good Christmas, which gave us momentum going into January and February which are traditionally 'down' months for the toy industry. We're looking forward to a successful year."

Kusy added that he thinks Quincy 2000 and the QCBPA should continue to work on bringing more small, customer service-oriented stores to the downtown, saying that "major anchor stores" such as those in Boston are not what Quincy Center needs.

Eleanor Kopp, Clifford's Flowers: "1995 was a great year for us. We became a greater part of the Quincy community and were able to utilize modern technology—like the Internet—to provide excellent service here in the city and all over the area. For the new year, we're looking to keep expanding our service and our community involvement, playing a larger role in the city of Quincy."

Ed Morris, The Fours: "We've only been here a year and five months, but already we can see a difference from last year. Our late afternoon and early evening lunch and dinner crowds are growing, and so is our daytime business. As word has gotten around and people know we are here, our business has increased. I think that this year we'll continue to grow at a steady upward pace as more and more people start to come around."

Paul Sturman, Frantic Framers: "It's been kind of quiet around here so far, but I think that is mostly due to the extreme weather—snow and wind—we've had this year. Once the spring comes around, I think business will start to pick up. I'm looking forward to a good spring."

Richard Barker, Barker's: "We're hanging in there so far, being very positive. Quincy isn't really the strong retail environment of the 1980s, so the focus is more on maintaining good service and keeping a solid customer base. By promoting good quality and good service, you insure that those people will want to come back. I think that this year we'll see an increase in business."

Richard Sweeney, Big Daddy's: "Business has been so-so this year; we have our good days and bad. It's been pretty status quo so far with no real movement upward or downward, and I don't really see anything turning. Quincy Center needs something to draw people back to the area, because we can't compete without an attraction."

Isobel Bertman, Rogers Jewelry: "Business could be better right now. It's a different climate than it was in the past—people are a lot more uncertain about their jobs and money, and that makes customers hesitant about spending money. So we work to provide the best service, product and prices possible."

Merchants asked about the recent departure of Caryn's Corner said that while they are saddened to see a quality store leave the downtown, they do not think their businesses will be impacted by the move.

DR. JEREMIAH RYAN, who was named the new permanent president of Quincy College by the school's Board of Governors Feb. 5, discusses his future plans for the college. After dealing with issues such as the college's new budget and upcoming reaccreditation process, Ryan said he wants to improve its technological capabilities and find more space for students currently hampered by crowded facilities.

'I Intend To Make Myself Available'

New College President Plans To Be Active In Community, Student Life

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Dr. Jeremiah Ryan, newly-appointed president of Quincy College, wants to take an active role in both the college's student life and the community.

Ryan, 46, who most recently served as vice president for marketing, planning and development at Harford Community College in Bel Air, Md., says he feels it's important for the president of any educational institution to form solid relationships with those who comprise the student body.

"I intend to make myself available to the students," Ryan, who was appointed to his new position by the Quincy College Board of Governors Feb. 5, said during a recent interview with The Quincy Sun. "My door will always be open."

In fact, Ryan taught political science at Harford and hopes to teach one evening course every term at Quincy College.

"I'm going to encourage all members of the senior staff to teach," he noted. "It's the best way get to know the students."

Ryan added that he was pleased with the enthusiasm the students displayed during the recent presidential search process at the college.

"I was very, very impressed by the seriousness with which the students treated the search," he said. "They took it very seriously

Task Force Being Formed In Wake Of School Rape

Raymondi Calls For Tightening Security In All City Buildings

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City officials are putting together a special security task force following the rape of a Quincy High School administrator last week.

The task force has been suggested by Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi, chairman of the council's Public Safety Committee. He said the task force's mission will be to pool together the resources of various city departments for two reasons: to ensure that the perpetrator of the Feb. 15 crime is apprehended, and to examine security measures and procedures in all public buildings in Quincy.

"We want to send a very strong and aggressive message that the city is unified and will not tolerate actions such as this," Raymondi, who will represent the City Council on the task force, said of the rape. "It was just a vicious attack, a heinous crime."

He added that the security probe will not be limited to school buildings.

POLICE SKETCH OF RAPIST

"It won't just be the school buildings," said Raymondi, who will represent the City Council on the task force and planned to discuss the issue at Tuesday night's council meeting. "We have to make sure there's a comprehensive look at all buildings throughout the city."

Mayor James Sheets said he agrees with Raymondi's proposal.

"I think the task force idea is an excellent one," said Sheets, who has agreed to serve on the task force. "I look forward to working on this particular project."

The mayor added that in the event he cannot attend a task force meeting, he will be represented by Bernice Mader, his administrative assistant.

Others who will serve on the task force expressed similar sentiments.

"This (rape) is the worst incident in the school system I can recall," said School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano. "It's a real violation of the sanctuary one creates within the work environment."

Door-To-Door Seniors Van Service May Start In Summer

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that plans for a citywide senior citizens' van service are moving along, and the program could begin operating by as early as this summer.

The door-to-door service, known as Transvan, is currently used in Cranston, R.I. where Sheets first learned of its existence last October. Further study of the program has revealed that the service would be beneficial to the city, the mayor said.

"This is a system that I fully intend to implement over the next two years," said Sheets, who first spoke of his intentions to bring such a service to the city during his fourth inaugural address in January when he announced a number of plans to improve the quality of life for Quincy seniors. "I think it's something that will work in the city."

According to Sheets, seniors in Cranston annually make four quarterly payments of $18 for the Transvan service. In exchange, the service--when given 48-hour notice--picks up those age 60 and older or who are disabled at their homes and take them to relatives' homes, medical appointments, shopping, the movies or wherever else they might want to go and picks them up later a requested time.

For instance, if a senior needs to visit his sister on Saturday, he requests on Thursday that a van arrive at a designated time two days later at his home to pick him up. At the same time, he requests a time to be brought home later in the day.

"You just show them (van drivers) your pass, and that's it," said Sheets.

The mayor added that on average, a senior in Cranston uses the service for 88 trips per quarter. One round-trip is considered two separate trips, he noted.

Sheets said Cranston uses 10 vans as part of its service. The Quincy Council on Aging currently has QUINCY COLLEGE PRESIDENT Dr. Jeremiah Ryan recently dropped in for a chat with students in Barbara Welch's English Composition class. The new president said he plans to be active in both student life and the community and even hopes to find time to teach some courses at the college.

Raymondi Calls For Tightening Security

"We'll cooperate and put all of our resources into that task force," said Police Chief Francis Mullen, who added that the rape case is still being investigated and is being given "a very high priority" by his department.

Both Raymondi and Sheets said they would like to see the task force hold its first meeting within the next week. While a formal list had not been finalized at press time, Raymondi said School Supt. Eugene Creedon had agreed to join the group and others who would be asked to do so included Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, Quincy Hospital Director/CEO Ralph DiPisa, additional representatives from the Quincy Public Schools, and officials from Quincy College and the Norfolk County district attorney's office.

DANIEL RAYMONDI
"We want her to know she's not just another case."

Sheets added that Ann McLaughlin, director of the Thomas Crane Public Library, also would be asked to join because the library has several buildings throughout the city.

While Creedon had suggested last week that the School Committee examine security at the city's school buildings,

FRANCIS MULLEN
"We will put all of our resources into it."

Raymondi said he thought a task force would be a better idea because it would not only cover buildings throughout the city but also allow those with expertise in security matters to participate.

"We need to draw upon the resources of the city to modernize security measures and update security guidelines," said Raymon-

RONALD MARIANO
"We have an obligation to keep them (employees) safe."

Mariano agreed. "We don't have the resources within the school system to do so," he said.

Everyone on the task force will serve an important role, Raymondi noted. For instance, DiPisa's input will be helpful because there is a security system already in place at the hospital, he said.

Raymondi, who serves as chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, added that it is crucial that the college-located next to Quincy High--be represented since the woman who was raped described her attacker as someone who looked like a college student.

He also said the possibility of a computer card system that would allow designated individuals access to buildings is one suggestion he wants to discuss with fellow task force members, although he noted that all task force members will be allowed to contribute ideas.

Mariano said certain parts of the school buildings could be "sectioned off" in order to help protect employees.

"There are ways you can section off these buildings," he said. "You can seal off the administration end of that (Quincy High) building (where the rape took place)."

Mariano, who serves as a state representative, said there are other "technical" security measures used at the State House that could be implemented in Quincy. Raymondi said it may eventually be decided that the city need to hire a consultant to look at such possibilities.

Both Raymondi and Mariano said they hope the task force's efforts will educate employees at the schools and other public buildings about the importance of security as well as bring some cheer to the victim of last week's crime.

"We have teachers and other employees who sometimes work until 4:30, 5:30 or later," said Marino. "We have an obligation to keep them safe."

"We want her (the victim) to know that she's not just another case, she's not just a number," added Raymondi.

The rape occurred last Thursday night when a man entered the office of a Quincy High School administrator who was working late. After threatening her with a handgun, he bound her hands behind her back with her scarf, raped her, and then left the office with her purse.

The attack occurred on the same evening as a basketball game and other nighttime events at the school.

Following the rape, the woman freed herself and called 911. She was treated and released from Quincy Hospital.

Police released a sketch of the suspect the following evening. The victim described him as white, about 30 years old, 5-foot 10-inches to 6-foot tall, with broad shoulders and a muscular build and a well-trimmed dark beard. He wore a black or blue knit hat, a gray long-sleeved sweatshirt, dark pants and possibly sneakers.

Those with any information that could help the investigation should call Quincy Police detectives at 479-1212.

Sheets Hopes Ted Williams Card Is A Hit At Library Auction

Mayor James Sheets is hoping a Ted Williams baseball card could be a hit at an upcoming auction for the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The auction will be held April 11 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. Among the items will be a 1941 baseball card of the legendary Boston Red Sox slugger that was given to Sheets two years ago as a gift from Joseph Elmore of Quincy, Ill.

Sheets said Elmore sent him the card in appreciation for the 1994 Quincy-to-Quincy, Ill. food drive organized by city officials to aid flood victims in Quincy's sister city in Illinois. Since then, the card—which the mayor estimated is worth between $1,000 and $2,000—has remained in the safe at the city treasurer's office.

The April 11 auction is being held to raise money for a planned addition to the Crane library's main building in Quincy Center. A recent auction held for that reason raised about $2,000, meaning the baseball card alone could make the April event a more successful one.

Sheets said he has written to Elmore to tell him about the plans for the card. Elmore had suggested two years ago the card be used for a charitable auction, he added.

Two Finalists Interviewed For Tourism Position

Two finalists for a new tourism director's position were interviewed Tuesday by a committee of city officials that is expected to make a final decision within the next week.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor

James Sheets and chairperson of the committee, said the tourism director will be a full-time employee of Quincy 2000. The committee hopes to choose the new director within the next week or so, she said.

Mader added that the field of candidates has been narrowed down in the past six weeks from an original pool of "nearly 60," to 24, then 12, then six candidates who were interviewed before the two

NFPA Survey Finds: Most People Lack Basic Fire Safety Knowledge

While most people feel confident about their personal safety from fire, there are still basic things they don't know--and should-to better protect themselves.

That's the main finding of a national telephone survey of 800 Americans released recently by the Quincy-based non-profit National Fire Protection Association.

The vast majority of NFPA's survey respondents felt somewhat to very confident about fire safety in their own homes, yet home is where the risk of fire is statistically greatest. According to NAPA, approximately 80 percent of all U.S. of all US fires and fire deaths occur in the home. Survey respondents also felt confident about safety from fire in their cars, even though private vehicles the other places where the risk of fire is greatest.

Respondents felt less confident a fire safety in hotels. However, because of industry-wide improvements in fire safety, including greater use of automatic fire sprinklers and alarm systems, hotels actually offer among the lowest risk from fire. NFPA's survey revealed that, despite the concern among respondents about hotel fire safety, only 56 percent of travelers report that they check their hotels' emergency evacuation plans, a simple step that could save lives.

Other key facts and findings from NFPA's 1996 National Fire Safety Survey include:

- 63 percent of the responding men felt "very confident" about their personal fire safety, compared to only 52 percent of women. Yet, each year, nearly twice as many men die in fires than women.

- Most U.S. homes fire happen in the kitchen, yet only 34 percent of the respondents knew that the safety way to deal with a stove pan fire is to smother it with a lid and then turn off the burner. Men knew this key piece of fire safety knowledge more often than women did.

- Smoke detectors cut your chances of dying if you have a fire nearly in half, and the majority of the respondents said they had at least one. Yet only 55 percent had tested their detectors within the past month to make sure they are working.

According to NAPA, 4,275 civilian deaths and 27,250 injuries occurred in 1994. Nationwide, that same year, there was a fire death every 123 minutes and a civilian fire injury every 19 minutes. As a result of fire, an estimated $8,151,000,000 in property damage occurred.

Comer Shadowing Kerry

He's not a candidate but Quincy's Jake Comer plans to hit the campaign trail a lot this election year.

Senator John Kerry won't be too happy about that. But Governor and want-to-be-senator William Weld will.

Comer, past national commander of the American Legion, is still angry--to say the least--over Kerry's refusal to vote for the proposed Constitutional amendment that would protect the flag from desecration and other abuse.

It lost by three scant votes in the Senate with both

COMER

Kerry and Senator Edward Kennedy casting key votes against it.

The vote was 63 for, 36

against, with 66 needed for approval.

Comer feels that if Kerry and Kennedy were for the amendment, it might have won in the final showdown.

Kennedy doesn't come up for re-election until four years from now, but Kerry is up this year and Comer has set his sights on him.

You might say he is humming "I'm Walking Behind You."

"Whenever he looks over his shoulder there's a good chance he will see me," Comer says.

Especially at major political events. Like the Kerry-Weld debate set for April 18 at Faneuil Hall.

"I'll be there with my troops," Comer says. "We will have our signs. He'll know we are there."

Comer will also be on the speaking circuit. Subject: the flag amendment and Kerry's vote.

"I will bring it up everywhere I go and follow him all over the state," Comer says.

Kerry, a Vietnam veteran, says the amendment would restrict free speech. Comer says polls in various states show the people want the amendment so that the flag will be protected from abuse and that those in Washington should listen to the people.

Comer thinks Kerry will feel a voter backlash this November. And he plans to be there with his whip.

Support for the amendment in polls in Massachusetts ranged from 78 to 82 percent Comer says. And he adds:

"Nineteen percent of those who said they voted for Kerry in the past said they would not vote for him again if he voted against the amendment."

Comer hopes to raise that percentage.

Meanwhile, Comer has met with Governor Weld and got a commitment that if elected to the Senate, Weld will vote for the flag amendment when it comes up again in 1997.

Senate candidates across the country are being asked to put their support "in writing" on a form pledging their support and vote.

Comer gave one to Weld and says the latter assured him: "I have no problem signing that. I will sign it and get it back to you."

Weld also told Comer he has a strong tie to the American Legion, one of the spearhead organizations for the flag amendment.

He noted that his wife, Susan, is the granddaughter of Teddy Roosevelt, Jr. who served in World War

I and while still in France laid the groundwork for establishment of the American Legion.

He gathered soldiers together to make plans for an organization to give veterans benefits that were then not in existence. Out of it came the American Legion in March, 1919.

Needless to say, you know who Comer will be voting for and supporting this year.

And he hopes to get every veteran and everyone who wants Old Glory protected to march along with him.

"The flag amendment is not dead," he says. "We'll be back."

THE DEATH OF Laroy "Curly" Rogers, a sports legend at North Quincy High School, saddens all who knew him.

Although his nickname was "Curly," he was really North Quincy's "Mr. Rogers" as most people called him out of respect.

ROGERS

Pete Zoia, who knew him as a student, player and long-time friend, said: "He was a great person and he will be long remembered. Those who really knew him always called him Mr. Rogers--never Curly. We had the utmost respect for him."

Rogers coached four sports--football, baseball, basketball and track--over a 35-year-span at NQHS. After he retired, he still maintained a keen interest in NQHS sports and the players, Zoia says.

What became a tradition was him going off and buying a crate or two of apples during the football season. They were for the players after practice.

"He was careful about what he ate or drank--never touched junk foods--and kept himself in shape walking usually around Cavanagh Field," says Zoia.

It worked because he always looked at least 20 years younger than his age. And he lived to 94.

FRANK McCAULEY, former mayor, present school committeeman, and walking Quincy political encyclopedia, caught a boo-boo in last week's column.

Council President Peter Kolson wants to restore the City Council chamber at City Hall to an old look going back to 1889 when Quincy became a city.

Kolson said the council then had 16 members and they sat at individual U.S. Senate-like desks which he would like to have duplicated.

McCauley says there were actually 23 council members then--three from each of the six wards and five at-large.

The 23-member council was in existence until 1916 when the Plan A form of government was adopted calling for the present nine-member council--one from each ward and three at-large.

(Those meetings must have gone into the next morning.)

THINKING OUT LOUD: You'd think those speeding cowboys would at least have a little courtesy to slow down at snow-melting puddles in the street so not to splatter pedestrians. But what the hell, they say, pedestrians are fair game. These guys are my nomination for "the-one-I-would-like-to-see-wrapped-around-a-steel-utility-pole."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD postcard view of the North Junior High School when it was nearing completion 70 years ago in 1926. Now the center portion of North Quincy High, this section was dedicated in February, 1927. In the first few years students from here went on to Quincy High until this became a six-year school with the first class graduating in 1934. Has any one found the globes that cradled the entrance stairway in this picture?

All Gained Realistic Experience At Disturbance Exercise

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The City of Quincy Emergency Management Agency and Quincy High School AFJROTC students recently had the opportunity to assist Company C, National Guard based in Braintree in a Civil Disturbance Exercise.

Additional public safety departments from Braintree Police, Braintree Fire, EMS, and Emergency Management also played an active role in the exercise. The AFJROTC at Quincy High School, numbering some 25 students, received first-hand experience on what our military, public safety departments, EMS and Emergency Management encounter in protecting the lives and property of citizens.

Giving our students the opportunity to play the active part of a rioter in a Civil Disturbance as young adults increases their awareness of what's going on in this world.

The majority of our AFJROTC students who graduate in good standing go on to a military career. We are extremely fortunate to have our AFJROTC students actively involved in our Emergency Management Agency.

Along with the obligations to Quincy High School (including two encampments at military installations), training includes: a flight in a military UH-1 helicopter, military KC-135 refueling aircraft training, the use and safe handling of, as well as proper ways of field stripping weaponry; military inspections, and training courses.

As deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management, I am extremely proud of our students, not only from Quincy High School but from North Quincy High too. Our motto at Emergency Management is very simple: "Family First, Education, Employment, Volunteerism."

As for the Civil Disturbance Exercise in Braintree, I feel that all who participated gained first-hand knowledge in what to do if the real thing occurs. This was a well-organized and realistic exercise.

Riot Exercise Not Proper For Future Military Officers

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

After reading the article on the recent activities of the National Guard and Quincy students at the "riot" control demonstration in Braintree, I ask the following:

Was this a class in political history? Were credits allowed? I know these kids missed the "fun" of the late 1960s. A great number of radical students attempted to destroy this country through their civil disobedience, riots and protests.

How come no flags or draft cards to burn? (Remember those?)

I am glad to note the student rioters were members of the ROTC. Great "training" for our future military officers. They should learn to riot, set fires, taunt soldiers and storm buildings. By jove, I bet it was similar to the training of the "brown shirts" in the mid-1930s. (Sorry, kids, that is another story; check your history books!)

It would appear that the majority of those participating in this brainless exercise were in diapers when the 60s riots actually took place. They do not realize the tragedy our country was experiencing during those years. Those "leaders" of this so-called exercise who are old enough to remember should be ashamed of opening old wounds.

Teaching these kids what did happen at that time in our history is great, but your method is somewhat bizarre. Some of you older MNG troops should remember the "welcome" you received on your return from Vietnam! Want to see a repeat of that?

Are the three "Rs" now riot, rape, and rowdiness? Are the kids going to sign up for these classes in political history?

What next? Drive-by Shootings (advanced), and the proper methods of yelling "pig" at your local police? Spitting, stone throwing, and four-letter words?

Other subjects could be a special class in rape, plunder, and terrorism. (Furnish your own masks and ninja suits.)

The graduation exercise could be held on the campus of Kent State and sponsored by the Ohio National Guard. We are looking for four or five volunteers who really want to get into it! It should be a blast! (This is a live ammo demo!)

MNG riot control training is necessary, but why not keep it "in house?"

A Good Learning Experience

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

What I learned at the Civil Disturbance Exercise was what the National Guard, police, fire and EMS have to go through in such a case.

I learned the techniques in which the National Guard would use, and how it was necessary for the National Guard to protect any emergency personnel that responded to the scene.

I think that it was a good learning exercise for both the National Guard and the students of Quincy High School, because if there is ever a real riot the students and the National Guardsmen know (sort of) what they are up against.

Quincy High School 'Stars Of The Quarter'

Quincy High School announces its three students and one faculty member have been named "Stars of the Quarter."

Students receiving the recognition are senior Kristin Priscella, senior Amy Leung and sophomore Dan Nichol. Teacher Jack Raymer was also recognized.

Priscella, who will attend Harvard, was named to the Boston Globe All-Scholastic SuperTeam, the state's most prestigious all-star squad, for excellence in volleyball.

She was one of just six players throughout Eastern Massachusetts named to the Super Team. The elite six, culled from a total of 19 leagues competing at the varsity level, were chosen by a committee of Eastern Massachusetts coaches.

Leung, who plans to study law and political science, was honored for participation in the National Honor Society, Foreign Language Honor Society and state Science Olympics.

She is also serving as operations support commander and drill team member for the Air Force Junior ROTC her senior year.

Nichol was a sophomore starter on offense and defense for the Quincy High Presidents football team. His coaches describe him as a very hard worker who "never misses a minute and is intense in every drill."

He carries this attitude to the classroom where his diligence has paid off in honor roll grades. Additionally, he is well-behaved and respectful of his teachers and well-respected by his peers.

Raymer was cited for his work in the community. He played in active role in the city's inaugural Kids' Vote program, volunteered as an on-the-street television commentator for Channel 3's broadcast of the Quincy Christmas Parade, and served as coordinator and emcee for the dedication ceremony of finalists who were called back for second interviews. Mader said the committee is looking at experience in four categories in making its decision: tourism, organization of special events, budgeting/marketing/fund-raising and public relations/public speaking. "We're still running some background checks," she said. "We want to be very thorough." Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino, another committee member, said he did not want to release the names of the finalists for confidentiality reasons. Mader, however, said one is a man who works as an assistant director of tourism for a community in Massachusetts and the other is a woman who formerly served as director of tourism for the island of Puerto Rico. Neither is a Quincy resident, she added.

Other committee members include Sheets, City Councillor Michael Cheney and Quincy Center Business and Professional Association Executive Director Maralin Manning.

Two Boston Symphony tickets have been donated anonymously to the Thomas Crane Public Library to benefit its building fund.

The orchestra seats will go to the highest bidder during February's silent auction held at the main library in Quincy Square. The value of the two seats is $114.00.

The concert is on Friday, March 29, at 1:30 p.m. at Boston's Symphony Hall. Guest conductor Franz Welser-Most will lead the orchestra.

and asked some informative questions."

Another thing that impressed him was the city itself. Ryan said Quincy was attractive because of its impressive historical background, its proximity to Boston, and its 27 miles of shoreline. (He and his wife of 23 years, Gail, enjoy living by the water.)

The Ryans also are pleased that after more than five years of having what the new college president termed "a commuter marriage," they now will be spending more time together. Gail, who served as human resources director of Monro Muffler-Brake in Rochester, N.Y. while her husband was at Harford, will be seeking new employment in or near Quincy.

Ryan, who will officially begin his duties as college president March 18, said he and Gail plan to move to the city as soon as possible.

"I want to be a part of the city," he said. "Historically, the college has been very close to the city, and I think it's important that the president is, too. That way, I'll have a better flavor for what's happening."

Ryan knows a thing or two about being involved. In addition to being a 24-year veteran of his profession—he worked at three different community colleges in New York before he started at Harford in 1990—he served on a number of city and county boards in New York, including the Binghamton City Council.

Ryan said he was proud to have been chosen by the Board of Governors for the college presidency from what was originally a field of 92 candidates.

"I was very honored by that," he said. "And it was a very professionally done search. I knew exactly where I stood at each stage, and I was very appreciative of that."

Ryan—who earned an annual salary of $76,000 at his previous position and is expected to make between $80,000 and $95,000 in Quincy—began negotiating his first contract with the college last week. He said is not concerned about reaching and agreement before March 18.

"I'm not at all worried about that," he said.

Regarding the college's future, Ryan said the school must develop a vision for where it should be going as well as a strategic plan for the future. That plan, he noted, will be a "logical outgrowth" of the reaccreditation process with the New England Association of Schools and Colleges that will begin in November.

Ryan said his two immediate concerns are the reaccreditation and reaching a collective bargaining agreement with the unions representing the college ("so that we can firm up a budget"). Once those are addressed, work on the strategic plan—which will include input from students, staff and faculty as well as the community—will begin.

He added that among the first improvements he would like to see at Quincy College are increased technology, larger student facilities, and better "customer service" or "total quality management to improve services to students."

Ryan said he wants all students—full-time and part-time, daytime and evening, old and young—to know their all of their concerns are of equal importance to him.

"I'm really concerned with finding out what students want," he said.

Still another concern is the potential influx of students at the college's other campus in Plymouth, a community Ryan noted is growing at a considerable pace. About 700 of the approximately 5,000 Quincy College students attend classes at the Plymouth campus.

"We fully expect that campus to grow rapidly," he said.

Asked about the possibility of a baccalaureate program at the school—a topic that has been brought up in the past—Ryan said the Board of Governors recently decided to put that idea on the backburner for the time being, a decision he agrees with since there are so many more immediate priorities on the table.

"My desire would be for the college to become a better community college first," he said. "We have plenty of other things to do before we think about a baccalaureate program."

"Quincy College is a good place...that could become great. I'm really looking forward to the challenge of this position."

Mark Osborne Elected To Chamber Board

Mark A. Osborne, Chairman and CEO of The Hibernia Savings Bank, has been elected to the board of directors of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

"I am delighted to join the prestigious board of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce," said Osborne. "This Chamber is widely-recognized for its strong, action-oriented support of businesses large and small. I look forward to making a contribution to such a well-regarded and influential organization."

General Manager Terry Fancher welcomed Osborne to the board stating, "We are thrilled to add the element of community banking that Mark Osborne and The Hibernia Savings Bank will bring to our board. Mark is an active member of this community and involved with many local issues. It is gratifying to know we will now have his in-depth level of community experience and local management available to the Chamber."

Osborne joined The Hibernia Savings Bank in

MARK OSBORNE

1971, became the bank's youngest president in 1982, and chairman of the board in 1988.

Throughout his career, he has served on the boards of a number of community and charitable organizations. Among many current affiliations, he is director of the South Shore YMCA; Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.; Beechwood Community Life Center, Quincy; Notre Dame Academy, Hingham; and serves as a member of the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army of Quincy.

Fast Showers Healthier

(NAPS)—Turn down the heat and toss the soap! According to New York dermatologist, Dr. Debra J. Wattenberg, "A short, lukewarm shower is healthier than a vigorous scrub. Excessive bathing washes away natural oils causing skin to become dry or sensitive."

To make bathing healthy for the psyche and the skin, you might try these time- and skin-saving treats.

- Shave with state-of-the-art razors equipped with moisture strips.

- Suds up with soft synthetic poufs or body sponges to help gently cleanse and exfoliate the skin.

Did you know...

Even after 40 or 50 years of smoking, the body repairs much of the damage caused by smoking. It's never too late to quit and here's how you'll benefit from quitting.

- If you tire easily, are short of breath or have problems sleeping, you may be suffering from the ill effects of smoking and not the effects of age. You'll feel better after you quit!

- Your circulation will improve right away. You'll breathe better and walk farther without running out of breath. You'll cough less. You'll have more energy. You'll start to feel more in control of your life.

- The U.S. Department of Health & Human Services reports that within the first year, your excess risk of heart disease caused by smoking is reduced by about half. You also lower your risk of stroke and lung disease.

- You'll find new pleasures to replace smoking. It may be hard at first, but you'll soon learn to replace smoking with other activities. Ex-smokers polled six months after quitting say they feel calmer and more in control without cigarettes.

What if you've tried to quit before? You haven't failed. You're a step ahead! Research shows that it usually takes a few tries before smokers quit for good. Just consider past efforts as practice you need to succeed now. Your years should give you added wisdom to quit for good. What Is Chiropractic?

Chiropractic is an independent branch of the health sciences which specializes in the diagnosis and treatment of mechanical disorders of the joints, particularly those of the spine and their effect on the nervous system.

DR. THOMAS KRETZ

Chiropractic prides itself on being a drug-free, non-surgical science. The most characteristic aspect of the chiropractic practice is the correction of a subluxated (misaligned) spinal vertebrae or pelvic segment by means of making specific adjustment. The purpose of this correction is to normalize the spinal vertebrae segment and relieve the attending neurological, muscular disturbances.

Currently, there is one

NEWS OF HEALTH

chiropractor for every 10,000 Americans. The greater acceptance and understanding, increasing insurance recognition, the high cost of hospitalization and greater consciousness among the general population have added to the growth of chiropractic both as a profession and a medical alternative. The evidence for effectiveness is well-documented and the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, validates manipulation for spinal-related conditions.

Here is a list of conditions which often respond favorably to chiropractic treatment: arthritis, back problems, headaches, disk problems, low back and leg problems, neck stiffness, tension, and whiplash.

Chiropractic is for the entire family. Dr. Thomas Kretz has over 10 years of experience treating sports, work and auto injuries. He was one of a dozen chiropractors from across the country to complete the "Advanced Team Physician" program through the American College of Sports Medicine.

Dr. Kretz has also been one of the treating chiropractic physicians for the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

For more information about chiropractic and a particular condition, call Dr. Kretz at Hancock Street Chiropractic, 1245 Hancock St., Quincy Center, at 773-5400.

A HAIRY PROGNOSIS

Osteoporosis can be a silent crippler, doing its damage for years until a sudden fracture gives away the first hint of brittle bones. It is also a selective villain, targeting some people with a vengeance and others not at all. How do you know if you might be at risk? Studies are now indicating that there may be a connection between hair color and osteoporosis. Specifically, people whose hair turns gray prematurely (50 percent of hair by the age of 40) have been found to be four times as likely to develop the bone disease as those who turn gray later. Everyone can take steps to prevent osteoporosis. People with a family history of early graying may wish to take a special care in discussing the disease with their doctors.

P.S. Consuming adequate daily amounts of calcium throughout life is the key to preventing osteoporosis.

All kinds of therapy are now available to help improve your chances of not suffering as acutely from osteoporosis; ask your physician for information if you are passing through menopause. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I make sure you receive the right information to make informed decisions. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. We make our patients feel at home.

Podiatrists Recommend Flexible Shoes That Fit

Shoes are the most expensive piece of apparel that parents will buy for their children because, before a child reaches age 10, their foot size will change more than 30 times. This fact isn't meant to discourage parents, so much as it is to encourage careful and educated shoe buying.

The American Pediatric Medical Association (APMA), which is based in Bethesda, Maryland, also believes that young children do not need shoes until they begin to walk in areas that could potentially affect their feet, such as rough or dirty surfaces. When shoes are worn, they should be flexible and fit properly to ensure normal development of the foot.

Dean Wakefield, director of public affairs for the APMA, says that children's feet attain almost half of their adult size in the first year. Thus, it is extremely important for parents to measure a child's foot every four to six weeks to make sure shoes still fit. Shoes that are too small, for example, are harmful because they restrict growth and development.

The APMA recommends shoes that are wide enough at the ball of the foot and the toe box. The length of the shoe should be a thumb's width longer than the child's longest toe.

Saving used children's shoes for younger siblings and friends may seem practical and cost-effective, but this is not healthy for a child's feet. Shoes conform to the shape of an individual's foot, which means that size and it cannot be guaranteed in a hand-me-down pair of shoes. In addition, fungal and viral organisms can be transferred.

The best way to avoid these problems, Wakefield says, is to discard children's shoes when they've been outgrown, even if they shoes remain in good condition.

Youth And High Blood Pressure

(NAPS)—Did you know that high blood pressure can be just as dangerous for younger people as it is for older people?

For those with high blood pressure, the heart has to pump harder than normal to get blood to all parts of the body. This increases the long-term risk of stroke, heart and kidney problems.

According to the National Institutes of Health, it's possible to limit your risk of developing high blood pressure. You are more likely to get high blood pressure if it runs in your family. But high blood pressure is not inevitable. Prevention is a matter of maintaining a healthy weight, becoming physically active, limiting your salt and sodium use, and if you drink alcoholic beverages, doing so in moderation.

Sometimes medication may be prescribed for people with hypertension. And, if your doctor has recommended that you begin taking medication you should know that all drugs to treat hypertension are not priced the same.

Remember, only your doctor can prescribe the right medication for you, but if cost is a problem, you should ask if there are lower cost alternatives.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Housing Market Shows Mixed Results In 1995

Slowed by high interest rates early in the year and the implementation of tough, new state regulations governing the operation of septic systems and cesspools last March, single-family home sales declined in the Bay State for the first time in five years in 1995, according to a recent report by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

In addition, low mortgage rates over the final two quarters of the year helped boost local housing affordability levels and trade-up activity, the MAR said, enabling statewide average selling prices for single-family homes to rise for a third straight year.

Sales activity did improve substantially in the final quarter of 1995, rising 16.2 percent in the detached single-family home market and 29.4 percent in the condo market over 1994 fourth-quarter figures, but MAR officials suggested the increases may be artificially high due to closing delays caused by Title 5. In fact, the sharp fourth-quarter increases still left year-end sales of detached single-family homes down 4.5 percent from a year ago, a drop from 38,365 units in 1994 to 36,656 this past year, while condominium sales increased a slight 2.6 percent over the 1994 sales level, rising to 7,054 units in 1995 from 6,873 the previous year.

Overall, the 1995 sales volume for all residential property is the sixth-highest on record in Massachusetts.

"There was good news, and bad news for home sellers last year," said

MAR president Laura E. Shifrin. "Title 5 made it more difficult for property owners to sell their homes, but those who were able to sell benefited from nearly three full years of modest appreciation."

One other conclusion to be drawn from the data, MAR officials said, was that home sales most likely would have exceeded 1994 levels had it not been for Title 5.

"Over the last nine months of the year, with Title 5 in effect, fixed-rate mortgages averaged a full point less than in 1994, yet sales declined," said Shifrin. "Clearly, Title 5 hindered sales."

The regional sales figures back this up. On Cape Cod & the Islands, where stringent sewage disposal regulations have been in place for years, detached single-family homes increased 13.4 percent in 1994 compared to one year earlier. Sales also rose in the West region by 2.8 percent, but in all other regions of the state sales activity fell between 1994 and '95.

Additionally, in the condo market, the Cape & Islands saw steady improvement, with sales up 29.1 percent in 1995, while greater Boston posted a 7.4 percent increase and the Northeast region gained 0.3 percent vs. levels of a year ago. Elsewhere, year-to-year sales decreased, with declines ranging from 2.2 percent in the West region to 14.8 percent in the Central region.

In general, the condo market fared better than the detached single-family home market last year because of higher inventory levels and fewer concerns about Title 5, Shifrin noted.

"As mortgage rates dropped, many people got the urge to move, and as a result, the supply of condos on the market increased significantly," she said.

In fact, MAR data shows that in December, when the average 30-year fixed rate mortgage fell to 7.25 percent (from 7.25 percent in 1994), the number of condo listings statewide was up 40.5 percent from December 1994, but detached single-family home listings were down 8.1 percent.

"The increased buyer demand created by declining interest rates, as well as widespread fear among property owners afraid of facing expensive Title 5 repair costs if they list their home for sale, has produced inventory shortages in a number of market areas, particularly for detached starter homes," Shifrin said.

Furthermore, with consumer demand rising and purchasing power up dramatically due to today's more attractive financing terms, an increasing number of buyers are trading up to larger homes or those with more land and amenities in more expensive neighborhoods. For this reason, it comes as little surprise that state-wide average selling prices for detached single-family homes and condominiums have increased during the past year by 2.6 percent and 4.5 percent respectively.

The Children's Attic, My Sister's Closet Bargain Hunters' Oasis

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

First a child learns to stand, then to walk, and then a child learns to run. It's a natural progression that we all follow when we are very young.

The Children's Attic, located at 142 Willard St. in West Quincy, has been in business since August 1995—just six months—and has begun to take those first steps toward success. And they like walking.

The Children's Attic and My Sister's Closet, both located at 142 Willard St., are clothing resale shops that are a bargain hunter's oasis. They specialize in children's clothing, but also feature a selection of women's clothes as well.

"Clothing resale is the new trend," said Alyce Collins, co-owner of the store. "People are a lot more frugal and savvy shoppers these days. They are wise with their money and want a good bargain. We try to give them that."

Collins and her partner, Mary McDonald, know very well how expensive it can be to dress children. Alyce has four children—three boys and a girl—and Mary one, a girl. "Children's clothes can be expensive, and they grow out of them fast, so people are always looking for good bargains. That's where we come in," said Collins.

She holds up a first communion dress as an example. "This is a very nice dress, around $200, that a girl would wear for her communion. But she'll probably only wear it that once and then put it away. We can buy that from a customer and then resell it for around $60 or $70 dollars. It's a little easier to live with $70 than $200," she continued.

Collins and McDonald originally wanted to buy into a franchise children's clothing store, but were turned off by the lack of personality in a franchise. "Chain stores end up in strip malls somewhere with no personality, and they are boring. We wanted to have our own place that looked like we wanted it to look, a little boutique-type place," said Alyce.

McDonald, a former retail buyer, has some insight into the clothing business, and believes that a store with personality is more appealing to customers. "People like the fact that we look like a boutique. Customers come back to the store for the personal touches we give it—we're friendly, we talk to the customers, we let kids come in and play with the toys we have—we're happy to help. Even hold a baby when necessary. We know what it's like to shop with kids," said Mary.

The store is located in a renovated house and has a very "homey" feel to it. "We're lucky to have found this place. It's a great location right off the expressway and our landlord has been fantastic."

"When we first saw this place, it was a brown house with curled shingles and a 'For Rent' sign that had crooked letters. Our landlord fixed up the outside of the house, repainted it and put in some big windows for displays, and we did the inside," said Collins.

But Alyce and Mary started to formulate the idea for their own resale shop before August. "We started buying clothes probably about six months before we opened, going to people's homes and picking things up to get some inventory. We advertised in the newspaper and started to slowly build some stock for the store," said Alyce.

Now that they are open, the Children's Attic usually takes clothes at the store by appointment, but will sometimes venture out for pick-ups if it is a large amount. "We try to have people bring their clothes to us by appointment because that way we get to meet the people and talk to them. And by doing it by appointments, it's easier to deal with the customers, because we're not trying to do nine things at once," said McDonald.

The Attic also takes children's furniture, which has become a sort of cottage industry for the store. "We can't keep furniture here very long because customers always are buying it up. We could have something in the store, like a crib or even a four-poster bed, and people will be all over it."

"That was something we really didn't anticipate. Someone could come in, see the furniture and ask us to hold it, and then another person might have the money right there and want to buy it as well. We can't keep the furniture on the shelves," said Alyce.

The Attic has proved to be an excellent lead-in for My Sister's Closet, the women's clothing resale shop upstairs. The Attic's average customer is, as one might expect, mothers. And they want bargains for their clothes, too. "Customers will come in and look around the kid's stuff, then will go upstairs looking for something for themselves," said Alyce.

Although the two stores opened at the same time, My Sister's Closet has been growing a bit slower than the Attic. Originally, My Sister's Closet was only going to feature evening/ career wear, but, according to McDonald, "so many people asked for casual clothing and started bringing in all types of things that we started to buy whatever came in."

The Closet now holds everything from elegant Chanel suits to jeans and sweatshirts to wedding gowns. They feature all sorts of sizes, from 2-24, to accommodate everybody.

"Most stores stop at certain sizes, but we carry everything in both kid's and women's sizes. Sometimes you have a customer whose daughter might be tall, so she can go upstairs and get her a pair of jeans that most kid's stores wouldn't have," said Alyce.

The Children's Attic and My Sister's Closet have standards as to what they will—and won't—buy from customers. They don't take any stained or torn clothing—"No pulls or pills, either," said Alyce—and the clothes must be fairly modern, although not necessarily that season's newest style.

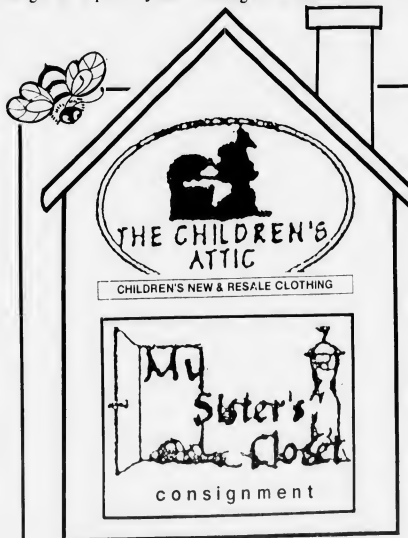

"People will come here looking for a dress or shirt that is last year's style because they don't like what is out for this year. We buy most stuff because it is classic styles or fairly recent, but please: No overalls with bell-bottoms," she laughs.

The Children's Attic and My Sister's Closet are open Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays from 10:530 p.m. They take clothing by appointment only and will do pick-ups in some cases. If you would like to sell some clothing or just want to know more about the store, contact Alyce Collins or Mary McDonald at 471-8602.

"We try to offer a lot of selection and good prices, because we think we're pretty good shoppers and we know we want a bargain when we shop. Everybody wins in this: we get good stuff and smart customers, and they get a good bargain. I love it. It's just been a lot of fun so far," concluded Alyce.

Siciliano Gets Hurricane Warning At Florida Preparedness Course

Quincy Emergency Management Agency Deputy Director Anthony Siciliano recently participated in an Introduction to Hurricane Preparedness course at The National Hurricane Center in Miami, Fla.

Thirty representatives from Massachusetts, including police and fire chiefs and officials from the State Police, Mass. Highway, Harbormasters, Boston Fire Department, EMS Boston, and local Emergency Management agencies attended the 4 1/2-day event. Siciliano was the only Quincy representative.

Jerome Meister, operations officer for the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, presented a proclamation from Gov. William Weld to Robert Burpee, director of The National Hurricane Center during the course.

Siciliano said the following was among the data presented at the event:

•Communities along the New England coast that are accustomed to severe storms (such as 1985's Hurricane Gloria and 1991's Hurricane Bob) should be prepared to deal with a Category 3 hurricane, which could strike the area sometime in the future.

•Nationwide, the 1996 hurricane season could produce as many as eight named storms and five hurricanes, two of which could be of major concern.

•The 1995 hurricane season will go down as one of the stormiest in history, as it produced 19 named storms including 11 hurricanes nationwide. (Hurricane seasons run from June through November.)

•Hurricane Andrew, which struck South Dade County in Florida on Aug. 24, 1992 caused $25 billion in damage.

MITES

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mites proved to be a most ungracious host, whitewashing the Belmont Youth Hockey Mites 4-0 in the second game of the day.

Kevin Richardson's hat trick led Quincy, while Alex Shaeffer added a goal and an assist. Paul McLean had a pair of assists for the Mites, with teammates Myles Clancy and Dave Oronte each

Squirt B's Take State Title With 3-2 Win Over Milton

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Squirt B's, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, beat Milton 3-2 in the District 3 state championship game on Feb. 17.

The Squirt B's were undefeated in state play and one of 16 teams in the state to qualify for this tournament.

A big reason for the Squirt B's success this season has been the play of goalie Nick Manning and the best defense in the state of Matt Alleve, Bob Donovan, Ryan McFarland, Sean Moriarty, Jake O'Donnell and Richard Stone.

In the District 3 title game, neither team was able to break through in the first period, despite the aggressive play of Quincy's Justin Swierk, Liam Powers and Ryan Tobin.

Milton broke the deadlock in the second period, scoring the game's first goal with 3:49 left in the second.

With 1:54 left in the second period, Brendan Craig put the Squirt B's on the board with a goal off a Dan Sullivan and Josh Giordani assist to tie the game at 1-1.

Sean Moriarty gave Quincy a short-lived lead with 6:36 left in the third period, drilling home a shot from the point past the Milton goalie. Milton came back a minute later and tied things up at 2-2.

Then, with 3:02 remaining, Dan Sullivan put Quincy ahead to stay, converting a Rob Mooney pass to give the Squirt B's the lead—and the win—at 3-2.

Stanton Shines For Raiders; Connolly Paces Presidents North Girls Cruise Past Quincy

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

The North Quincy girls' basketball squad shook off a first-half shooting slump and cruised to a 58-46 win over Quincy High School last Thursday in the final meeting between North Quincy's Sara Stanton and Quincy's Kerry Connolly, the Nos. 1 and 2 all-time career scorers in Quincy public school history.

Before the game, both Connolly and Stanton were honored for their achievements, and both received commemorative plaques after being named Old Colony League all-stars. The seniors on both teams were introduced as well in their last game against their cross-town rivals.

The two teams saw-sawed back and forth in the first half, exchanging leads, with neither team able to gain an advantage. A late charge by North Quincy tied the game at 19 to end the half. Quincy's plan-pressure the ball and take Stanton out of the flow of the game—had worked almost perfectly.

"Defensively, everything we did in the first half worked. We forced some bad shots and made them turn the ball over some, and we took Sara out of the game," said Quincy coach Bob Noble Jr.

But everything that went right for Quincy in the first half—and wrong for North Quincy—changed in the second half. The Raiders went on an 11-4 run to open the half that featured five points from Kelly Keegan and four from Stanton. After a QHS timeout, the Presidents were able to pull to within three, but NQ widened the gap to seven and then 13.

Quincy would get no closer after that, with Stanton scoring six points down the stretch to seal the win. NQ coach Ken Panaro pulled Stanton from the game with :29 left to a standing ovation from the Raider faithful. Presidents' coach Noble pulled Connolly with :12 left to a standing ovation from her home court fans.

Kerry Connolly finished the game with 19 points (two 3-pointers) despite foul trouble in the first half. Sara Stanton ended up with 23 points (13-of-14 free throw shooting), including 18 in the second half.

North Quincy also got 13 second-half points from Kelly Keegan (three 3-pointers) and six points from Dawn Kohler (4-of-6 free throws). Quincy's Erin Barry chipped in eight points and some nifty passing, while Kate Sullivan pulled down 10 rebounds, scored six points and played great defense.

Following the game, both stars talked about the contrast between the first and second half. "They played tough defense in the first half," said Stanton. "It was hard to move around and get good shots. At halftime, Coach told us to relax and stop dribbling around so much, and we all picked ourselves up."

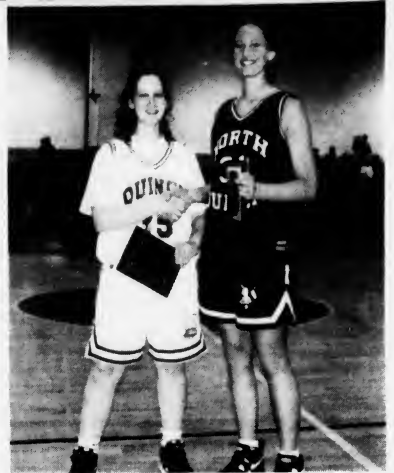

Connolly admitted that the outcome was "not the way I would have planned it. We played great defense and got some breaks in the first half, but they started to get their shots in the second half. We played hard and worked hard out there," said the senior.

Quincy coach Bob Noble praised both players after the game. "You have to give North Quincy credit. They came out after a tough first half and put the game away. They needed someone to step up, and they got it."

"I'm extremely proud of my players. They played their hearts out and did everything I asked of them. You never want to lose this game—especially for the seniors—and they did everything they could to stay in the game," praised Noble.

As for the two seniors, Connolly and Stanton, Noble pointed out the obvious. "They're two great players, and they showed that tonight. They both stepped up when their team needed it, and that's why they are OCL all-stars," he said.

THE LEADING SCORERS in Quincy public school history, Quincy's Kerry Connolly (left) and North Quincy's Sara Stanton, hold plaques given to them before their final meeting of the season on Feb. 15. In a ceremony before the game, both players were given awards in honor of their being named to the Old Colony League all-star team.

SCOTT DEWARE*A Thought For The Week

George Washington was a great and gracious man; a dedicated patriot. It has been said that Washington's greatness was a composite of simple virtues; honesty, courage, physical and spiritual and tremendous force of character. Add to this, great dignity and a sense of moderation and there is the moral picture of a great man. His moderation was often criticized, yet it was a golden virtue.

His life melts into the background of the times in which he lived. In fact, he was such an integral part of this background that at times his personality completely vanishes in the vast panorama of events...

Yet, his example has been an inspiration to the people of many nations and circumstances; for this was truly one of the great men of all time...

six vans, and as many as eight more may be needed as part of Transvan service in Quincy because the city has a higher population than Cranston, he noted.

The Transvan service costs $671,000 annually to operate in Cranston and made a profit of about $20,000 this past year, Sheets said. While it is unclear at this point what the cost will be in Quincy, funds will be derived from user fees, state grants, and the Council on Aging budget.

The Council on Aging's Fiscal Year 1996 budget is comprised of about $168,000 in federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds, $58,000 in state money and $45,000 in city money. Sheets stressed that he does not plan to use additional CDBG or city funds for the service beyond anything taken from the Council on Aging budget.

"Our objective is to create a (Transvan) budget that's self-sustaining beyond the Council on Aging budget," he said. "We do not plan to use any other city money, and we do not want this program to take away from any other CDBG programs."

Sheets added that among the plans he announced at last month's inaugural address is to eventually transform the Council on Aging into a multi-faceted Department of Elder Affairs.

The Transvan program will be "phased in" over time, Sheets noted. It likely would begin with the existing van fleet this summer, with additional vans being added as needed. Vans cost approximately $40,000 apiece and have an average life span of six to seven years, he added.

Computerized records will allow the city to keep track of requests for the service and monitor its progress so that officials will know if additional vans are needed, the mayor said. Van drivers all will have any necessary medical training as well as commercial driver's licenses, he added.

Sheets stressed that the Transvan service would not conflict in any way with van services already supplied by the Council on Aging, which mainly consist of transportation for medical reasons.

He also said the service would not be competing with Van About Town, the senior shopping shuttle service that was initiated by City Councillor Michael Cheney and Quincy Transportation Inc., a non-profit agency, that is expected to begin operating next month.

Sheets said Van About Town would differ from Transvan because it would travel designated routes similar to those used by the MBTA while bringing groups of seniors to shopping centers, medical buildings, and other locations.

"It (Van About Town) will take some pressure off the Transvan system, and possibly even help make it less costly," said Sheets. "The two systems will complement each other."

RINGING ENDORSEMENT

When a cold engine will not start quickly and lacks power, the problem could be worn piston rings. Wear of these circular components fitted in grooves in the pistons can be confirmed by a compression test. If a ring job is indicated, the cost of performing this work should be compared against the cost of rebuilding the engine. This latter fix offers the advantages of providing a clean engine block to prevent cooling problems and reboring the cylinders to restore perfect roundness, thereby ensuring maximum compression, power, and control of oil consumption. The crankshaft is also machined to restore a perfect fit, if the crankshaft has not worn excessively, if the camshaft bearings are in good shape, and other important components are okay, then simply honing the cylinders and replacing the rings may be all that is necessary. Measure can be taken of these components while performing a ring job to see how serviceable they are.

HINT: While a rebuilt engine carries the potential of offering like-new performance, a ring job on an engine with over 80,000 miles on it may not run like new.

VICTORY PARK, the latest site proposed for a new elementary school to be built in Quincy Point, is examined by Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi

At Victory Park Near Old Pollard New Site For Point School Is Proposed

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Because of a plan to bring shipbuilding back to the Fore River shipyard, city officials are looking at a new site for a proposed elementary school in Quincy Point.

The new location is Victory Park, located between 1000 Southern Artery and the former Pollard Elementary School. The two men who originally proposed the construction of the new school, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano, are eyeing the 6.2-acre site because their first choice may be needed by the Greek shipbuilder who hopes to revitalize the shipyard.

Last September, Raymondi—who then served on the School Committee—and Mariano identified a 1.8-acre parking lot at Cleverly Court and South Street near the shipyard at the best site for the new school, which will help relieve overcrowding at the Sterling Middle School in South Quincy. The Cleverly Court site is owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

The two men said this week, however, that they have been told by Mayor James Sheets the MWRA-owned site may be needed as part the plan by Sotirios Emmanouil, chief executive officer of Swampscott-based Massachusetts Heavy Industries, to revitalize the shipyard. Both also noted that Sheets and a number of other officials have expressed confidence in Emmanouil's plan and financial stability, although he must await federal loan guarantees for which he has applied in order to succeed.

"We want the best of both worlds," said Mari-

Republican Contests Highlight Election Light Turnout Forecast For Presidential Primaries March 5

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

With most of the interest stemming from the race for the Republican presidential nomination, about 20 to 22 percent of the city's 46,486 registered voters are expected to go the polls in the Massachusetts presidential primaries next Tuesday.

City Clerk Joseph Shea predicted the low turnout, which is slightly higher than the 18 percent forecast state-wide, because there is no competition in the Democratic primary.

"There are no contests on the Democratic ballot and we're an overwhelming Democratic city," Shea said. "Usually we have more action on the Democratic ballot. There's no competition for state committeeman state committeeman or state committeewoman (in the Democratic primary)."

The interest in the primaries is being generated by the tightening battle for the Republican presidential nomination. Although among conservative columnist and New Hampshire primary winner Patrick Buchanan, Sen. Majority Leader Bob Dole and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander.

Other GOP presidential candidates on the ballot are, in order, Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar, businessman Morry Taylor, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, publisher Steve Forbes, broadcaster Alan Keyes and California Rep. Richard K. Dornan. Lugar, Gramm and Dornan have officially withdrawn from the race.

The Republican primary also features a four-way contest for state committeeman and a three-way race for state committeewoman.

Running for GOP state committeeman are Andrew J. Himmel of Braintree, Community Meeting March 6 On Proposed Marina Bay Condos

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting on a proposal to build condominium homes at Marina Bay Wednesday, March 6 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the cafeteria at 500 Victory Rd.

Ayers said the purpose of the meeting is to inform residents about the downsized plans of the developer, Thorndike Development Corporation/Marina Court Associates Limited Partnership, for lowrise condominium homes on 19.7 acres known as Parcel 37 at Marina Bay. The proposed Marina Court Planned Unit Development (PUD) application abuts Victory Road in the Marina Bay Development Complex.

The proposal also will go before the Planning Board Wednesday, March 13 at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Area residents expressed concerns about the project at an earlier community meeting held by Ayers. Based on those concerns, the developer is redesigning the proposal and will meet with residents and the councillor over the next several weeks to discuss the modified plans, Ayers said.

He also noted that he agrees with residential concerns which is why he is holding another community meeting before the Planning Board hearing.

"I will continue to work with the residents of my area until a suitable proposal is presented," said Ayers. "Marina Bay is a beautiful area and it is important that whatever projects are proposed for additional construction will fit in with the current decor of the area, will protect residents' investments, and will be beneficial to Marina Bay and the entire City of Quincy."

Two-Year's Probation Board Closes Pub For 21 Days On Drug Violations

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board voted unanimously Tuesday to close the Point Pub, 536 Washington St. for 21 days and placed it on probation for two years for seven violations involving drugs.

On Police Chief Francis Mullen's stipulation a manager has to be hired to work 40 hours a week and recorded as to "who he is."

Mullen said any violation within the two years will result in the revocation of the liquor license.

According to Ann Lind, secretary to City Clerk Joseph Shea, this is one of the most severe penalties imposed by the board in recent years.

Board member Matt Mulvey added to the motion that anyone involved in the investigation be barred from working in any licensed establishment in the City of Quincy. Mulvey said the board has to send a strong message that "drugs are not allowed in the City of Quincy."

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said he had concerns over a "very

Quincy 2000 Hires Firm For Downtown Plan

Quincy 2000 has hired Sasaki Associates of Watertown, one of the region's top redevelopment consultants, to devise a master plan for the revitalization of the city's downtown shopping district.

The firm has taken part in redesigning Boston's waterfront and Newburyport's historic downtown as well as other major projects in cities from Cleveland to Dallas.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino said the city's public-private planning corporation will pay Sasaki $25,000--taken from the dues Quincy 2000 has collected from member businesses--to conduct a "fact-finding mission" designed to find ways to improve the downtown. The firm will hopefully begin its work on the study next week and complete the work in about two weeks, he said.

"The whole process will be designed to identify areas that need to be improved," he said. "The focus will be to get people to verbalize the issues and to concentrate on the identity of the downtown."

The study will encompass a "target area" that includes Hancock Street from Bridge Street (just south of Furnace Brook Parkway) to School Street, according to Michael Rie of Quincy 2000.

Mannarino said Sasaki will take information Quincy 2000 has collected from merchants and city officials and hold a series of workshops on the downtown's future. Eventually, he added, the firm will issue a detailed report suggesting long and short-term steps the city should take.

Sasaki will also include other information, including studies of the proposed Quincy Center Concourse, ideas for a downtown hotel, and a similar 1973 study done by Hilgenhurst Associates.

Mannarino called Sasaki Associates "a very innovative planning group" and said among the results of the study will likely be suggestions for improvements in downtown parking, pedestrian access and signage as well as changing the faces of buildings and the retail mix in the area.

A spokesman for Sasaki said the entire project should take about four months to complete.

DOWNTOWN DIAGRAM highlights the "target area" Sasaki Associates of Watertown will concentrate on while coming up with a master development plan for Quincy Center at the request of Quincy 2000. The area includes Hancock Street from Bridge Street, which is just south of Furnace Brook Parkway, to School Street.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

- Granted a request from Fiesta Shows to hold a carnival to benefit First Night at Faxon Field from April 20 through April 27.

- Granted a permit from the Mothers and Others Club and Boy Scout Troop 6 for a permit to hold an indoor yard sale March 23 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave. (Alpha Story represented the groups in place of Gayle MacKay.)

- Gave public notice to the State for a Keno license applied by the Blue Note Exchange, 1626 Hancock St. The application is a result of a new law that each business in the city has to apply to the license board before notifying the state.

- Allowed the transfer of managers at the Squantum Yacht Club, 646 Quincy Shore Drive from Richard Crehan to Richard Blaikie subject to his attending a training session concerning the sale of alcohol.

- Continued a hearing indefinitely regarding conditions of the property at 109 Lancaster St. (a former metal junkyard). Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi spoke of unsightly fencing and graffiti.

The next board meeting will be held March 13.

Would Fund Project's First Phase $150,000 Available For Faneuil Hall Type Marketplace

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said this week that about $150,000 is available to begin work on the first phase of a proposed Faneuil Hall-type pedestrian marketplace in Quincy Center.

The project, which would be located along Ross Way behind the stores on the west side of Hancock Street, would be designed to help stimulate business in the downtown. It is planned as a "festive area" that would increase foot traffic in the shopping district.

Colton said Tuesday about $150,000 is available to begin the first phase of the project. He said the funds will come from a $500,000 bond issue for other area improvements passed by the City Council.

Colton explained that approximately $150,000 should be left over for the marketplace project once the other improvements are completed. The funds would not have to be approved by the City Council, he said, since they are part of a bond that has already been passed.

"I'd say $150,000 would probably be enough to get something going for this year," he said.

Colton said the sum would likely be used to make improvements to area lighting, the facade of the Ross Parking Garage, the nearby alley next to the old Hancock Bank building and the street itself.

It may also include awnings and other materials needed to house the Quincy Farmers Market in the Ross Garage, he added. Officials have suggested that the Farmers Market be a part of the new marketplace, although nothing is definite at this time.

Colton said work could begin as soon as designs are completed by Mary Smith of Mary A. Smith & Associates Landscape Architects of Quincy.

Although Smith came up with an overall design for the project last month at the city's request, the new designs would provide more specific details for the project's first phase.

Colton noted that Whitman and Howard Engineers of Wellesley, which is involved with plans for the proposed Quincy Center Concourse, will be providing Smith with aerial photos and mappings of the area to help her as she plans her new designs.

Smith, whose credits include various Quincy projects as well as the Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts in Mansfield, said she hopes to have the designs completed by the end of May or early June.

She added that she is looking forward to seeing

Gate Valves Affected Water Pressure During HN Fires

A preliminary report from a Peabody-based engineering firm indicates that closed gate valves may have caused lower water pressure experienced by firefighters during recent fires in Houghs Neck.

The report by Weston & Sampson Engineering Inc. was done at the request of City Council President Peter Kolson, the Ward 1 councillor. Kolson received a copy of the report, as well as a summary of its contents by Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, this week.

"The long and the short of it is that closed gate valves were found in the Adams Shore area which affect pressure in Houghs Neck," Colton wrote. "These valves have been re-opened. Re-testing was done subsequently to the date of this report (Feb. 20) and it seems that the problem has been solved for now. I will submit a copy of the re-testing as soon as it is available."

The report from Weston & Sampson also notes that the fire department indicated there was particularly low water pressure during the Feb. 6 fire that destroyed the landmark Louis' Cafe in Houghs Neck.

SOMETHING SMELLS FISHY

Some people can use a pharmacy full of fancy soaps and deodorants, and still have a problem with body odor. When that odor is a strong fish-like smell, the diagnosis may be "fish odor syndrome." First recognized about 25 years ago, the condition is caused by the body's inability to break down the smelly chemical trimethylamine, which is derived from foods containing the substances carnitine and choline. The syndrome is genetic, inherited when a person receives a recessive gene for the malfunction from both parents. There is no known cure, but the odor may be reduced by avoiding foods high in carnitine and choline, including eggs, peanuts, organ meats, soybeans, peas, lentils, tuna, mackerel and herring. P.S. Unexplained, persistent odor anywhere on the body could be a signal that something is wrong. Check with your doctor. The Loss Of Two Legends

In just a month's time, North Quincy sadly has lost two beloved legends: Fr. Cornelius Heery and Laroy (Curly) Rogers.

Fr. Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church and "Mr. Rogers" as he was affectionately known, had a special love for North Quincy High School.

FR. HEERY

"MR. ROGERS"

Fr. Heery, who died Jan. 12 at age 72, became a close friend of students at NQHS during his 20 years at Sacred Heart. And it became his adopted high school.

"Mr. Rogers," who died Feb. 11 at 94, was a four-sports coach at the school over a 34-year span.

The paths of the two crossed often at football and basketball games, practices and school rallies. They attended frequently.

Fr. Heery celebrated Mass for the football players each week before their game and wrote weekly letters to them encouraging them for that game while slipping in a little coaching of his own for their bigger game to come, the game of life.

And in one of those "Hello My Young Friend" letters he had a tribute for "Mr. Rogers."

YACUBIAN

Fr. Heery usually sent a copy of his letters he wrote to his friend Dr. Allan Yacubian, the dentist who is somewhat of a North Quincy legend himself. As a student he was the model for "Yakoo," the NQHS symbol and is a loyal supporter of the school today.

Dr. Yacubian shares a letter with us written by Fr. Heery to the players Nov. 9, 1993, which said in part:

"You know, in my wanderings to your workouts at Cavanagh Field, I always stand in awe of a living legend who comes so faithfully to watch you—Mr. Laroy Rogers.

"This century was about a year old when he first saw the light of day. Imagine the history he has lived! His gift to the youth of 'North' over the years, especially during the depression time of the thirties, has no price tag. He truly is a role model in the real sense of the word.

"When you jog by him, greet him as thousands have before: 'Hello, Mr. Rogers.' His smile will be for you a cherished memory."

Just before the Thanksgiving Day game with Quincy that year, Fr. Heery noted in another letter to his "Young Friends:—"

"Looking at the squad on the field I always give the nod to the men on the line. They make plays happen and, sometimes, their strong defense prevents plays from happening.

"Now and then it is good for the ball carrier to look back from the goal line and give a quick nod to his teammates who made the opening for him to 'scoot' through."

Fr. Heery said he considered the letters "an investment in the future. They could well be like little seeds planted in your memory that may bloom a few years from now."

And, his caring for people came through when he added:

"When you are older and might need someone to listen as you wrestle with a personal problem, it is possible the memory of a football letter received when you were a 'Red Raider' might let you know there is someone who lives at Sacred Heart Rectory who would be willing to open the door and give you a warm welcome and listen."

Fr. Heery doesn't live at Sacred Heart Rectory anymore. But the memory of him always will.

And it will also live at North Quincy High School along with that of "Mr. Rogers."

YOU MIGHT SAY Frank Mullen believes in a "hands-on policy" when it comes to running the Quincy Police Department.

MULLEN

Even though he is chief you can find him there seven days a week. After Monday-through-Friday, he spends time there Saturdays and Sundays keeping an eye on things in general.

A former Boston Marathoner, he likes to get out and walk a couple of miles a day if he can.

And even then he's working.

"It gives me a chance," he smiles, "to see who's around and what they're doing."

FRANK McCAULEY, former mayor and present school committeeman, is endorsing Geradine Sharkey of Quincy for Republican State Committeewoman in the Norfolk-Plymouth District in Tuesday's Presidential Primaries.

McCauley, however, is staying neutral in the contest for State Committeeman, the post he held but is vacating to concentrate on his school committee duties.

Incidentally, Sharkey is a Republican cousin of Democrat Paul Harold, Quincy city councillor and former state senator.

WHILE YOUR ARE looking for the first robin here's another sign that spring is just around the corner. State Rep. Steve Tobin and his wife, Francine, are holding their seventh annual Salute to St. Patrick Thursday, March 14 from 7 to midnight at Pat Flanagan's Pub, Parkingway, Quincy Center. Refreshments, a band, dancing and step-dancers from the Forbes School.

TOBIN

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD postcard view of Billings Road in Norfolk Downs looking east from Hancock St. The building on the left is now two stories and is the home of the Neighborhood Pharmacy. All the houses to Felton St. on the left and Vane

St. on the right were moved to other lots throughout the Downs to make way for the commercial buildings that now line both sides of this street.

Praise For The City's Snow Plowing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The other day I called Mayor Jim Sheets to let him know that I appreciated how well the snow plowing was following our most recent storm Feb. 16-17.

Quincy lucked out twice thanks to the timing of the two snowfalls and schools were able to ride out both. Hopefully, that kind of luck will continue for the remainder of the snow season or the kids already in school until Friday, June 28 may very well lose part of the April vacation because when you run out of options, you run out of options, right?

Getting back to this last storm. The streets on Saturday morning looked great considering what they looked like back following the New Years' Blizzard and the Blizzard of '96. The snow plowing crews are to be commended. Atlantic Street, which looked like a Beacon Hill alley last month, was so much better this time around. It even got the sanding treatment. Something I never remember happening before!

Actually, as I told the mayor, North Quincy's sidestreets even looked better than Quincy Shore Drive and that truly shocked me. Evidently, someone at City Hall heard of my letter to the editor last month and for that I and my neighbors are grateful. But in all fairness, if I criticize, I should also praise when it is appropriate and it is appropriate now.

While I had the mayor's ear, I also informed him that I supported that name change request he publicized in The Sun when he called on the MBTA to add Quincy College to the Quincy Center stop.

Mayor Sheets used JFK/UMass as an example to support such a name change for the stop. However, I informed the mayor that as a former Charlestown resident, I remember well when the MBTA relocated the Orange Line through Charlestown. Back in 1974, City Square and Thompson Square stations were replaced by Community College Station which was built right behind the then-new Bunker Hill Community College. I believe if the Orange Line can have a Community College Station then the Red Line can have a Quincy Center/College Station too.

Opposes Deregulation Of Electric Utility Industry

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As an employee of the utility industry, I am dismayed by Governor Weld's new proposal to deregulate the electric utility industry; as a consumer, however, I am appalled.

The plan would allow independent power producers to sell their electricity on the open market and would remove regulation of electricity rates. Power producers would be able to choose what neighborhoods to sell in and what neighborhoods they want to avoid. They would be allowed to pass on any costs created by environmental regulations (something they can't do now). How can anyone think this is good for Massachusetts residents?

Apparently, the plan is very good for big businesses. They all seem to support it. Without rates being regulated, they will be able to bargain with the new utility companies for special rates. But what will happen to the senior citizens, small businesses and individual consumers who don't have the bargaining power of their local mall?

As someone who has to worry about supporting a family, I am also worried that most electric companies are already preparing for deregulation by sending out lay-off notices.

Please call your state representatives and tell them you oppose the electric utility deregulation plan.

Educating Students To What Public Safety Is All About

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The exercise of training with the National Guard, Braintree Police, Braintree Fire and Braintree Civil Defense along with A.M.R. Ambulance Company was to plan for a Civil Disturbance that may occur in the town of Braintree.

This also trained the Quincy Emergency Management Agency for a Civil Disturbance that also may occur in the city of Quincy.

Yes, there were students from Quincy High School. But that also educated them to what public safety is all about. If we don't train younger individuals about public safety, that's where we have failed.

People do not live forever and if you don't reach out to at least one person's life within your lifetime, then everything you have done in your life has lived and died with you. And if we don't train for things that may happen, then a lot of people will suffer the loss of things very precious to them because of our

No New Sub Work For Fore River

By PAUL HAROLD

A spokesman for the Quincy yard of the General Dynamics Electric Boat Division said the two contracts won last week for the construction of submarines would not be built in Quincy. Both would be built at Groton.

"The Quincy yard is to be used primarily as a surface ship yard. By building subs at the yard, we would be defeating our purpose in buying it," the spokesman said.

There were currently four ships in the Quincy yard. Two, the Greenling and Sato, were built in Groton, but were in Quincy for lengthening. The Whale and Sunfish were awarded to Bethlehem Steel when they owned the yard and were entirely built in Quincy.

DELLA CHIESA PREDICTS $7 TAX RISE

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa forecast an increase in the city's tax rate of $7 for fiscal year 1996.

The mayor's predication came after an examination of the "cherry sheets" from the state. The city's share of revenue from the income and corporate taxes was $468,000, less than last year when a speeding up of collections brought a one-year windfall.

In addition to reduced receipts, the city's 30 percent increase for the operations of the MDC and the Norfolk County Hospital, resulted in a shortfall of $769,000 that would have to be made up by a tax increase.

KOLSON CITES YOUNG DEMOCRAT LEADERS

Sugar Free Apple Pie

Over the weekend a few guests enjoyed dinner with a few more coming in for dessert.

I made two apple pies, one with sugar and one without for a couple of guests who have to watch their sweets. It turned out that most of the guests wanted the sugarless pie and liked it as much as the other.

The only trick to making this pie is to make sure the apples are red. (they usually are sweeter.) (I used Courtland which were very sweet.)

SUGAR FREE APPLE PIE
8 or 9 medium sized red apples
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon (a smidgen more if needed)
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
Preheat oven to 425 degrees
Cut apples and slice. In a bowl add the rest of the ingredients and blend until apple slices are all covered.

If you don't want to bother making the crust, it can be purchased at most supermarkets. However, if you want to make the crust, here is the basic recipe.

PIE CRUST FOR APPLE PIE

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
5-7 tablespoons ice water

Combine flour and salt. Work in the shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add the water one tablespoon at a time pressing lightly until dough is moist enough to form a ball. Shape the dough into two balls and then on a floured board roll out the size of pie.

Note: Adding too much water makes the dough sticky and tough, while too little makes it crack or tear.

Bake in a 425 degree oven for 10 minutes and reduce to 350 degrees for 40 minutes. (I always place strips of aluminum foil over the edges of the pie crust to prevent burning)

Citizens Group Supports Proposal For City Council Open Forum

The Quincy Citizens and Wollaston Park Associations (QCWPA) has voiced support of a proposal that a 15-minute public forum be held before every City Council meeting.

The proposal, introduced by Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi, recently was voted down by the council 5-4. QCWPA members, however, have asked Raymondi and other councilors to reintroduce the proposal--at least on a trial basis--saying that it would benefit the public and noting that the School Committee already does the same.

Councillors who opposed posed the proposal said the public already is allowed enough input through public hearings, community meetings and other forums.

Other matters discussed with councillors at the recent QCWPA meeting:

•The proposed Quincy Center Concourse and related plans for the Hancock Parking Lot. The QCWPA previously voted against those plans.

•The need for improved water pipes in the city and attracting quality "magnet stores" to Quincy Center.

•Mayor James Sheets' proposal to put more foot patrolmen on duty throughout the city, which was met with unanimous QCWPA approval.

•The environment, the bird sanctuary at Marina Bay association members feel is in jeopardy because of proposed housing construction, enforcement of parking restrictions and curbing traffic violations.

Members also suggested to councillors that a notice be sent with the next real estate tax bill regarding restrictions of the height of fences and bushes at intersections, as well as notices educating residents about the city's recycling program and asking them to cooperate with the Cleaner Greener Quincy program.

Board Continues Hearing

Roche Bros. Supermarket Seeks Beer-Wine License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board continued until March 13 a hearing regarding a request from PCC, Inc., of Roche Bros Supermarket for a beer and wine license until a meeting is held with the Ward 2 Civic Association and residents of the complex called The Falls at 101 Falls Blvd. next door.

Atty. Carl Johnson, representing PCC, Inc. told the board the 1,900 square feet designated for the beer and wine will be a segregated area of the Roche Bros Supermarket and the move would not cause any parking problems.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond said he would reserve judgment until the Ward 2 Civic Association and residents and trustees of "The Falls" had a chance to review the request.

Former Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro who was representing the Ward 2 Civic Association strongly opposed the granting of the license saying the city of Quincy worked hard to get Roche Bros up there, and that the area "does not need another liquor license."

Owners of area package stores said even though they welcome competition, they thought there were already "too many in the area." One owner presented the board with 100 signatures opposing the license.

Johnson told the board there would be "no outside signage" and spoke about the change in supermarkets where consumers want to "buy everything in one place."

Robert Annand, president of Roche Bros. said the liquor store would "fulfill the needs of the customer."

The hours of operation would be from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. (Roche Bros will open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.).

Now you'd just like to know how they got through it.

After all, your parents weren't made of money. So how did they manage? Well, maybe they had a little help. And if that sounds like something you could use, call me. (While you're at it, don't forget to call your parents.)

the project get off the ground, saying area merchants she has spoken to have expressed enthusiasm about it.

"I think this is great," said Smith. "I think there's a lot of excitement about it in the business community."

Both Colton and Smith said the project likely will be done in two or three phases. Colton added that while he hopes the first phase can be completed by the end of the summer, the entire project will not be finished until the course is in place.

Other planned highlights of the Faneuil Hall-

Stan Grossfeld To Receive UNICEF Local Hero Award

Stan Grossfeld of Quantum will be honored by UNICEF with its 1996 Local Heroes Award at the fifth annual UNICEF Ball for the World's Children on Saturday, March 2 at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston.

The gala event will commemorate the 50th anniversary of UNICEF.

Grossfeld, one of four local Massachusetts recipients, was chosen for his exemplary dedication and commitment to the welfare of children in the state. Associate editor at The Boston Globe, Grossfeld's local Emmy Award-winning project entitled "Lost Future's 'Our Forgotten Children'" won the World Hunger Year award, as well as raised thousands for the

STAN GROSSFELD

Boys and Girls Club of Boston. He has been named New England photographer of the year five times and has received Overseas Press Club awards for both his reporting and photography.

"Never before in human history have so many children been saved from the ravages of war, the threat of starvation, the loss of education, or have come to know the sheer joy of being a child," said Edward J. Mitchell, UNICEF director of Greater Boston. "On the occasion of our 50th anniversary, we look back on our successes and accomplishments, and we look to the future in hopes that tomorrow poses new opportunities and touches new lives."

Ball activities include music by the Lynne Jackson Mike Palter Group, dinner, dancing, a silent and live auction of vacations, artwork, jewelry and other items worth more than $50,000.

Proceeds will support UNICEF's global children programs. Tickets are $150 each and can be purchased by calling 617-492-0029.

Daffodil Days For Cancer Society March 19-24

The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society will hold its annual Daffodil Days March 19-24 to benefit the research, education and service programs for cancer patients throughout the area.

The unit holds the event, headed by Pauline and Dennis Sweeney of Quincy, in the city and eight other South Shore communities.

"People on the South Shore have been buying up to 150,000 blooms on Daffodil Days because they not only love to see the bright yellow flowers after the gray of winter, but because they want to help with the fight against cancer," said Pauline Sweeney, who along with her husband has headed record-breaking sales of $60,000 and more in this area for many years.

Advance orders for the blooms will be taken March 8. Volunteers will deliver and sell them beginning March 19. A bouquet of 10 is $5, and a box of 500 is $250. A custom-designed vase is $5. Orders for three or more bunches will be delivered by volunteers March 19 and 20, while pickup of smaller orders may be made at pickup spots in Quincy and Brockton beginning March 19.

To place an order, call 1-508-584-9600.

Ward Committee Candidates

Voters in next Tuesday's presidential primaries will be electing individuals to ward committees.

Ward committee people tend to be party activists who are involved in local government and politics.

"They help set and make policy for their respective party's platform and conventions. They do the same thing as state committeemen and state committeewomen but on a ward level. The ward committee people report to their state committeeman and state committee woman." City Clerk Joseph Shea explained.

The number of ward committee people in each party is determined by the percentage of registered voters in the respective parties. The higher the number of registered voters, the more ward committee seats. In Quincy, 35 Democrats and 20 Republicans can be elected from each ward.

Shea said ward committee candidates can get on the ballot with five signatures. Ward committee chair-people usually coordinate the group of candidates, called a slate. Voters can cast ballots for individual ward candidates or the entire slate.

Democratic ballots in Wards 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6 have 35 ward committee candidates. Ward 3 has 34 candidates, meaning an individual could be elected with as little as five write-in votes.

Fewer Republicans are seeking ward committee posts. Ward 6 has the most candidates with 16. Ward 3 has none. And James Foley of 8 Captains Walk is running as a write-in in Ward 1.

Candidates seeking election on ward committees are:

Low Turnout For Primaries

(Cont'd from Page 1)

Darrin McAuliffe of Braintree, John H. McDuff, Jr. of Quincy and Mark F. Roberts, also of Quincy.

Seeking the GOP state committeewoman seat are Stephanie A. Bradley of Braintree, Anne O'Donnell of Quincy and Geradine Harold Sharkey, also of Quincy.

In the Democratic primary, Rep. Michael G. Bellotti is opposed for State Committeeman in the Norfolk and Plymouth senatorial district. Bernice Mader, administrative assistant for Mayor James Sheets, is opposed for State Committeewoman in the same district.

Voters in the Democratic primary will also cast ballots for president and ward committee in all six Quincy wards. President Bill Clinton has a marginal opponent, perennial candidate Lyndon H. LaRouche.

Democratic voters will also elect as many as 35 ward committee people in each ward.

There is also a Libertarian primary for president. The three candidates are Harry Browne, Rick Tompkins and Irwin Schiff. According to the Quincy election office, there are 50 registered Libertarians in the city.

Asked how much voters are interested in the presidential primaries, Shea answered, "There's some interest. On Valentine's Day, which was the last day to register to vote in the primaries, we registered 105 new voters and it was snowing that day. We did some decent business. It will grow steadily as the November election approaches."

Shea noted there were 36 party changes, mostly Democrats to unenrolled, the last day. Because Tuesday is a primary, Democrats, Republicans and Libertarians can vote only in their respective primary. Unenrolled voters can select the party ballot of their choice, but cannot change back to unenrolled status at the polling precinct. Enrolled voters who want to remain unaffiliated will receive a card declaring their intent to revert to unenrolled status. The card must be mailed to the city's election office. If not, unenrolled voters who vote in the primary will be listed as being a member of the party of the primary they voted in.

On Tuesday, voters in Quincy will join voters in Massachusetts as well as seven other states as part of "Yankee Tuesday," the name adopted for the March 5th primaries. Other participating states are Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, Vermont, Colorado, Georgia and Maryland.

The vote on Tuesday will decide the winner of the Bay State's 12 nominating delegates. It's a winner-take-all contest, meaning whomever tops the Republican and Democratic presidential ballots will win all 12 delegates.

Democrats Still Stronghold

50,000 Voter Registration Expected By November

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

As interest in the presidential election mounts, the city's voter registration rolls are expected to swell to 50,000 by November, an increase of about nine percent over the present total.

Historically, Quincy has had its highest registration in the year of a presidential election, said City Clerk Joseph Shea. This year should be no different, he said.

"We were down around 43,000 (last year) but now we're up to 46,000. We'll be up to 50,000 (registered voters) by November," Shea said. "We're rolling again. It's a constant flux."

Currently, there are 46,486 registered voters in Quincy, an increase of 2,845 since last October when 43,641 were registered.

Democrats still outnumber all other parties combined, but the number of voters choosing unenrolled status appears to be outpacing the other affiliations.

The latest figures show:

- The number of Democrats grew from 25,782 to 26,884, an increase of 1,102.

- Unenrolled voters climbed from 11,595 to 12,818, up 1,225.

- Republican voters rose from 6,212 to 6,729, up 517.

The Libertarian party experienced a nominal increase of seven, from 43 to 50. In addition, there are three Conservatives, one Prohibition and one Socialist registered in Quincy.

Shea said the 46,486 registered voters represent 72 percent of the voter age population in Quincy. In other words, 28 percent of the city's population who are old enough to vote, 18 or older, are not registered.

"There are 67,000 people in Quincy age 18 or older. The 46,000 or so registered voters means our registration is at 72 percent. We're a little ahead of the state norm which is about 65 percent."

"We'll get as high as 72 or 73 percent (50,000 registered voters) for the November election. Every year I run a number of how many residents we have who are over age 18. That's how I get the percentage," Shea said.

Besides being 18, a person must be a U.S. citizen to register to vote.

Only voters who were registered to vote by Feb. 20 can vote in next Tuesday's primaries. The last day to register for the Sept. 17 state primary is Aug. 28. The last day to register for the Nov. 5 election is Oct. 16.

One way to increase the number of voters is allowing registration at the polls on election day. It has worked in other states, including New Hampshire which had a record turnout (72 percent) in its first-in-the nation primary two weeks ago.

Shea said he is "cautiously optimistic" that election day registration will someday come to the Bay State. "It's further down the line. The Commonwealth hasn't accepted that but it is currently looking at same day registration. I'm cautiously optimistic about it.

"It can be done. I've been the Lewiston, Maine, and I've seen it work," the clerk added.

New Lead Paint Regulations Put Landlords On Notice

By EILEEN PARTRIDGE

A reduced number of lead-paint poisoning cases in Massachusetts has been attributed to state regulations concerning deleading.

However, the presence of lead paint in residual rental units affects both tenants and landlords.

Effective Sept. 1, 1995, regulations issued by the state Department of Public Health mandate that all property owners, property managers and real estate agents notify prospective tenants of the presence of lead paint in residential properties constructed prior to 1978. Between Dec. 1, 1995, and Dec. 1, 1996, current tenants must receive the lead paint notification.

The disclosure requirements apply to rented single-family dwellings as well as multi-family property. These new regulations are added to the already existing paperwork for complying with lead paint laws that require owners to notify prospective buyers, prior to signing any agreement to buy, of the presence of lead paint. And soon-to-be released federal regulations could create even more paperwork by requiring property owners to distribute nearly identical state and federal forms notifying prospective purchasers and tenants of the presence of lead paint in all residential properties built prior to 1978.

Under the Massachusetts revised Lead Paint Law, the only exceptions apply to dwelling units with less than 250 square feet of floor space or to rooming houses (i.e., boarding houses, hotels, motels, lodging houses or dormitories), as long as no child under the age of six occupies the unit being rented. Units rented for 31 days or less for vacation or recreation are also exempt from deleading, as long as they have no peeling or chipped paint, but renters instead must be provided with a copy of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Short-Term Vacation Rental Notification Form. One copy is given to the tenant and signed by both owner/manager agent and the occupant/tenant.

For residential rental units, whether a single-family house or other rental unit, the Massachusetts regulations require property owners or their agents, before entering into rental agreements, to provide prospective tenants with two copies of the Department of Public Health's Tenant Lead Law Notification and Tenant's Certification, along with any lead inspection reports, or letters of interim control or compliance.

It is illegal to discriminate against prospective tenants because a property may have lead paint. If a family with children under the age of six wants to live in an apartment, it is the owner's obligation to remove, cover or encapsulate the lead paint at no additional cost to the tenant. The only exemptions are for an owner of a rental unit in an owner-occupied two-family house or for a property of three units or fewer and occupied by an elderly or infirm person for whom the presence of children is a hardship.

If a rental agreement is renewed between Dec. 1, 1995, and Dec. 1, 1996, the tenant must be given the same disclosures and documentation prior to lease renewal or prior to the anniversary of any tenant-at-will agreement or any other self-extending lease.

The notification and certification form may be in the rental agreement. Failure by an owner to comply could result in liability for all damages caused by noncompliance and a penalty of up to $1,000. Should any real estate agent or person engaged in the trade fail to comply under M.G.L. Chapter 93A, they could be forced to pay treble damages and the tenant's attorney fees and court cost.

Although Massachusetts is known for having some of the most stringent lead paint laws in the country, financial loan assistance and grant programs are being set up to help landlords pay for deleading, and since 1984 there have been tax credits for lead abatement of $1,500 per unit.

Anyone wishing to obtain a free copy of the Tenant Lead Law Notification/Certification form or the Short-Term Vacation or Recreational Exemption form, can do so by calling the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MRA) Legal Affairs Department at (617) 890-3700.

Concourse Meeting March 7

The Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet Thursday, March 7 at 3:15 p.m. in the second-floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy Center.

The CAC will conduct its main mission in the months ahead prior to the final approval of the proposed city plan to construct a new roadway linking Burgin Parkway to Hancock Street on the West to Mechanic Street and points beyond the east.

The main objective of the project is to provide direct access to the Quincy Center and Hancock street commercial areas. Officials have said the overall project will significantly reduce peak-hour traffic congestion in the downtown business district as well as reducing gasoline consumption and improving air quality.

Officials have also said the project will provide greater pedestrian access to the commercial area. The concourse will include a bridge crossing over the MBTA rail corridor, thereby providing direct access between the neighborhoods west of Granite Street and downtown Quincy.

Residents of elderly housing facilities in the area will benefit by this project, officials said. The residents now have a walk of over a mile-and-a-half around the MBTA tracks and across hazardous intersections to reach downtown stores. The project will provide direct access with a walk of about 1,400 feet.

The CAC will hold open public meetings and hearings as various phases of the project unfold such as the Massachusetts Highway Department review, Mass. Environmental Protection review and assessment, and bridge and road preliminary and final designs.

CAC chairman David Ezickson invites all interested residents and Quincy officials to attend CAC meetings and participate in the public forum part section of each agenda.

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

Bad Abbot's: A Break From The Routine

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Looking for a restaurant traditional Irish fare? A bar to watch your favorite soccer club? How about just a place to get away from the hectic Beantown bar scene?

Well, look no further. Bad Abbot's, located at 1546 Rear Hancock Street, is all of the above—and more.

Although it has been open just a little over three months, Bad Abbot's already has loyal clientele that have given them a lot of repeat business. Michael Conneely, a manager at Bad Abbot's, believes that the repeat business is due mostly to the restaurant's atmosphere.

"People come in and see that it is a more relaxed, friendly place," said Conneely, who is originally from Galway, Ireland. "It's a change of pace, and people like that. It's a different social scene; not so hustle and bustle."

Formerly Barnaby's restaurant, Bad Abbot's is owned by Peter Kern and his wife, Ann, who were deciding between buying a boat and opening a restaurant, according to Conneely. "Peter chose to open a bar. They can't sink," laughed Michael.

Peter, who hails from Glasgow, Scotland (Ann is also from Galway, Ireland), got the name from a pub over in Ireland named Bad Abbot's.

The food is another reason that Bad Abbot's is starting to catch on. Most people think that traditional Irish fare is anything with potatoes, but the menu proves that that is not true. Bad Abbot's has seafood, chicken, steak and, its most popular dish, lamb. All prepared by the chef, Richard Canavan, who also is from Galway, and previously worked at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

"Our most popular dish is probably the lamb. People see it on the menu and are surprised; most restaurants don't really feature lamb dishes because it is expensive. But our prices for lamb aren't that bad. The most expensive entree we have is $12.95, and people like that," said Conneely.

Bad Abbot's has more than just food and atmosphere, though. Eschewing the traditional D.J.-type entertainment on weekends, Bad Abbot's features live entertainment Thursday through Sunday with an Irish flavor. And they also have hors d'oeuvres free every night from 5 to 7 p.m.

Bad Abbot's also carries your favorite live and tape-delayed games—soccer games, that is. If you're a fan of the only true international game, then Bad Abbot's is the BAD ABBOT'S RESTAURANT, located at 1546 Rear Hancock Street, offers patrons a break from the hectic bar scene. place to catch the best of Ireland's teams.

"Peter and Ann had originally intended to carry the games. Once they started to get them and show them, people began coming in, and now we get pretty good crowds for the good games," said Conneely.

The restaurant will usually feature a game on Sundays to go along with its "Traditional Irish Ses-si'un" live entertainment from 2 to 6 p.m.. And they offer a cavalry roast buffet of Irish/American fare along with it. All that makes Sunday the busiest day of the week for Bad Abbot's, according to Conneely.

Now that spring is coming, Bad Abbot's has planned a variety of special events for the month of March. On Wednesday, March 6, from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m., the internationally renowned Dublin City Ramblers will be performing live. And on Tuesday, March 12, Bad Abbot's will have their official opening, with live entertainment and dinner specials.

And on Friday, March 15, the National Radio Station of Ireland will tape the "Mike Maloney Show" live from Bad Abbot's. The show will be broadcast on tape delay on the following Tuesday and will be complete with live entertainment. "We're really looking forward to that [the broadcast]. It will give us a chance to say 'Hi' to everybody back home," said Michael.

As for St. Patrick's Day (March 17), Conneely says that they haven't gotten all the details yet, but it's sure to be a busy day. "We'll have live entertainment and all types of specials. It will be a real fun Irish celebration," predicted Michael.

The typical crowd at Bad Abbot's tends to be around 25 to 40 years old—a laid-back group. "We don't get that many young, hyper-type people. Customers come out for a good meal, see that we have live entertainment and stay for a while," said Michael.

As expected, the crowd at Bad Abbot's is about 90 percent Irish. But they are not all local. As a matter of fact, Bad Abbot's draws people in from Quincy, Dorchester, Boston—all over. The word is getting out that Bad Abbot's is the place for traditional Irish fare and real Irish entertainment. "We draw them in through the food mostly, but the live entertainment is starting to bring people out and the soccer games are getting crowds, too," observed Michael.

Depending on how successful the spring is, Bad Abbot's is thinking of expansion. Conneely says that the first step will be fine-tuning the menu to fit the customers. "Mostly everything [on the menu] does well, but some things move faster than others. The lamb dishes have been very popular, so we might add some more of them, plus a little more red meat. People seem to moving back to red meat again."

The restaurant is looking to get out more in the community and has plans for sponsoring a golf tourney, trips to Ireland, more entertainment—according to Conneely, "We're still trying to figure it out."

Bad Abbot's is open Monday through Saturday from 10 to 1 a.m. and Sundays from 11 to 1 a.m. So if you're looking for a change of pace from the usual bar scene, Bad Abbot's is the place. And it even has parking—"That's usually the biggest complaint when you go to most places," says Conneely, "but we have plenty of space."

"Everything has been great since we opened. We are getting a lot of regular customers and word of mouth is getting around. We're really looking forward to the rest of year," finished Conneely.

BANTAM CHAMPION QUINCY I squad holds their trophies after topping Burlington in the Bantam Division title game of the 23rd Annual Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament, a 2-1 overtime thriller

Quincy Mites Bow In Championship Squirts, Bantams Win Kiwanis Tournament

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association placed three teams in the four divisional finals at the 23rd annual Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament, finishing with two championships.

The Quincy Squirts won their division with a 5-3 decision over Pembroke in the finals, while the Bantams won a 2-1 overtime thriller over Burlington to secure the divisional title. The QYHA Mites fell 8-2 to Milton in their championship bid.

Overall, Quincy proved to be a most ungracious host on the ice, that is. The five Quincy teams posted a 12-7-2 mark for the week, including a 5-0 run by the Bantam I squad and a 4-0-1 campaign by the Squirts.

MITES

In the Mite Division semi-finals, Quincy triumphed over Arlington 3-2 behind two goals and an assist from Kevin Richardson. Mark Lewis and Myles Clancy contributed two assists apiece, with Andy Patten scoring the third goal.

In the final game, Quincy ran into the hot-shooting Milton squad, which exploded for eight goals in the championship contest in topping Quincy 8-2. Two points each by Richardson and Jonathan O'Connor—a goal and an assist apiece along with Mike McKeon's assist—provided all the offense for Quincy.

Goalie Pat Maloney was praised for his outstanding play throughout the tourney, and every player was an important part of the Mite's title run.

"This is another step along the way for these kids," said Mite assistant coach Rick Patten. "They work hard and give 100 percent, and keep getting better each game."

SQUIRTS

The QYHA Squirts used good defense and timely scoring to wrap up their title, scoring nearly twice as many goals as their opponents in the playoffs.

The semi-final game was a close 2-1 win over Medford that featured strong goaltending by Bruce Maggio and balanced scoring. Matt Levery opened the Quincy scoring, converting a Matt Germain assist for a goal. Teammate Jeremiah Hasson then added the game-winner, taking a Ryan Donahue assist and beating Medford's goalie. In the championship final, Quincy faced off against Pembroke, a team that had scored 13 goals in its previous two games. Quincy was able to hold Pembroke in check, however, and took a 5-3 win and the division title.

Brian O'Hanley scored three goals for the QYHA Squirts and Donahue earned "Playmaker" honors with his three assists, leading the Quincy offensive charge. Teammates Steve Kelley and Billy McKeon added unassisted tallies to secure the divisional title for the Quincy Squirts.

PEE WEES

In the Pee Wee divisional playoffs, the Winchester squad outscored its opponents 9-4 in winning the title.

Winchester topped Revere 4-1 in the semi-finals, and then gave the South Coastal (Calif.) Sabres the cold shoulder in the final, winning 5-3 for the divisional championship.

The Quincy Pee Wees finished the tourney with a 1-2-0 mark, highlighted by a 7-1 decision over Klag-enfurt (Austria) on Feb. 24.

BANTAMS

In a pair of game that showcased their talents on both ends of the ice, the Quincy Bantam I squad used explosive offense and stingy defense to wrap up the Bantam divisional title.

The Bantam I's, who finished the tourney with a 5-0 record, squared off against Dorchester in the semi-finals and got all the offense they would need from Mike Powers' two goals and a goal and an assist by Mike Sullivan in their 5-1 win. Chad Fitzpatrick and Ryan Barret added one goal apiece, with Didier Alther contributing an assist.

The final game was a marked contrast to the semi-final, with neither Quincy or its opponent, Burlington, able to score in the opening period.

Alther finally broke the stalemate for Quincy, converting assists by Mike Powers and Steve Ford for a goal.

Quincy clung to that tenuous 1-0 lead until late in the third period, when Burlington pulled its goalie for an extra attacker and tied the game. Ryan Kreuger, who relieved Chris Carthas in goal at Mike Sullivan finally broke the deadlock in overtime, taking a behind-the-net pass from Alther (off a Paul Markarian feed) and beating the Burlington goalie for the game-winning tally—and the Bantam championship.

Bantam I coach Dennis Furtado praised all his players after the game, saying that his team "really peaked, really came together at the right time for this tournament. The kids were definitely ready for this tournament—they had been looking forward to it and wanted to win it. I can't say enough about how hard they worked and how great they played."

The Quincy Youth Arena, Quincy Youth Hockey, the Kiwanis Club and the tourney organizers would like to thank everyone who helped make this year's tournament a success.

They would also like to extend a special "Thank You" to the wonderful people in the program who opened up their homes—and hearts—to the two teams from Klagenfurt, Austria, during the tournament: Judy & Fagota Tupe; Maureen & Rick Cashins; Jane & Arthur Carthas; Mary Ann & Roger Giese; Diane & Harry Markarian; Sue & Mike Gregory; Jean & Bill Walker; Mary Fitzgerald; Marilyn & Lionel Lumaighini; Terri & Mike Murray; Carol & Jim Virtue; Zita & Dave Cooper; Karen & Rob Ross; and Ellen & Ed Campbell.

Squirt B's Win Central Mass. Tourney Title

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Squirt B's, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, dominated the Central Massachusetts Winter Classic at the New England Sports Center in Marlboro last week.

The Squirt B's scored 25 goals in the week-long tourney while allowing just six goals in five games. Goaltender Nick Manning was superb all week, while the rock-steady defense of Matt Alleva, Bob Donovan, Ryan McFarland, Sean Moriarty, Jake O'Donnell and Richard Stone frustrated opponents in every game. The Squirts took home the gold in winning the tournament championship.

In the first game, Quincy gave Billerica a 7-0 whitewashing behind a Nick Manning shutout.

Rob Mooney had a hat trick for the Squirts, with teammates Brendan Craig, Josh Giordani, Liam Powers and Justin Swierk getting solo tallies.

Pat Clifford, Ken Young, Ryan Tobin, Bob Donovan, Sean Moriarty, Richard Stone and Dan Sullivan all contributed assists in the win.

Framingham was the next team to fall to the Squirts in a 3-1 decision. Liam Powers and Josh Giordani had a goal and an assist each, with Rob Mooney scoring the third. Ryan Tobin, Matt Alleva and Brendan Craig all contributed assists. The defense held Framingham scoreless after allowing an early goal in the first period.

Brendan Craig's six points (four goals and two assists) were all Quincy would need in their 8-1 romp over Salem in the third game. Josh Giordani had four points (three assists, one goal) while Justin Swierk and Ken Young had a goal and assist each. Rob Mooney rounded out the scoring, while Bob Donovan had two assists. Ryan McFarland, Dan Sullivan and Matt Alleva all contributed assists.

The B's got by the Seahawks 3-2 in the third game behind solo tallies from Ryan Tobin (one assist), Josh Giordani and Rob Mooney, and solid goaltending by Manning. Richard Stone and Sean Moriarty had assists in the win.

In the fifth game, the championship final, the Squirts scored four goals in the first period on their way to a 4-2 win over

THE QYHA SQUIRT B's, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, took home the championship title at the Central Massachusetts Winter Classic tourney in Marlboro last week. The B's allowed just six goals in five games while scoring 25 against their competition.

Casco Bay, Maine. Liam Powers opened the scoring with an unassisted blast, and Ryan Tobin followed that with a goal of his own off assists by Dan Sullivan and Powers.

Matt Alleva struck next for the Squirts, converting a Rob Mooney pass for the B's third goal, and Justin Swierk scored the fourth- and final-goal for Quincy, assisted by Brendan Craig.

Once again Nick Manning did the job in goal, and the Squirts' world-class defense kept Casco at bay as the B's took home the championship gold.

Three Raiders Qualify For All State Meet

The North Quincy High girls' track team's experience at the State Class "B" Meet on March 24 was a bittersweet one.

Although three individuals qualified for the Massachusetts All State Meet on March 2 at the Reggie Lewis Center, the 4x200 sprint relay took center stage for the Raiders when their apparent fourth-place (and All State-qualifying) finish was erased by a disqualification for a zone infraction.

The sprint relay team of Casey Ngo, Aja Jackson, Jasmine Gonzalez and Kellie Johnston ran a time of 1:52.6, equaling their previous season best. But two different runners moved over the checkered zone-line before taking the baton, and so race officials issued the disqualification.

"We may have done that [a zone infraction] in the past," said a disappointed Geoff Hennessey, NQ track coach, "but in dual meets, there are far less officials, and it may have been overlooked. We did it, it's against the rules, and that's the way it goes. The kids handled it well. They knew they could run with the state's best, but that chance will have to come later. They can't wait for the spring [track] season."

In the individual events, senior Jennifer Pineo took second in the shotput with a throw of 37'4", giving her a berth as the fourth seed in the All State meet. Jasmine Gonzalez placed fifth in the 600 to qualify for the All States, while Casey Ngo earned an at-large spot in the 55-meter dash. Even though Ngo finished seventh, her time was faster than the sixth-place finishers in the Class A, C and D meets, so she was awarded one of the 24 qualifying spots.

Other Raiders participants were: In the mile, Lauren Molloy at 6:08.8; Kelly Duggan in the two-mile (at 13:05.1); Kristy Deptula (30'2 1/4") and Claire Quilty (30' 1 1/2") in the shot put; Phyllis Poon (9.0—a new school record) and Suk Ng (9.7) in the hurdles; and the 4x400 relay team of Aja Jackson, Sharon Lee, Jen Pineo and Kellie Johnston, who finished with a time of 4:29.8.

Wrestling

Quincy's Nguyen Second At States

Quincy High School's Dai Nguyen barely missed a chance to advance to the New England Championships, falling in the Massachusetts All States' finals 13-9 on Saturday.

It was the end of a stellar year for Nguyen, who rolled all the way through the south sectionals and the Division I tournament in just his second year of wrestling at QHS—and just his third year in America.

Dai, a junior at Quincy High, came to America in 1993 from Vietnam. He had not participated in any varsity sport until last year, when he wrestled for the Presidents' junior varsity team, and he needs a translator most of the time to communicate with his teammates and coaches.

Despite that, Nguyen had a tremendous year for Quincy wrestling coach Lou Venturelli. He was crowned Div. I South sectional champ in the 103-pound weight class and advanced to the Div. I state level, where he lost the final match to finish second. Both Dai and teammate Mark Froelich (third overall at Div. I championship in 140 lbs.) advanced to the All States.

Nguyen finished second overall at the All States at Franklin High School, beating Foxboro's Bill Iyvis in his first match and defending Division II champion Tom Fisk of Needham in his second match. Dai lost in the finals to Adam Roys of Burlington 14-9.

"He's a tremendous worker and is very focused," said coach Venturelli. "He's a natural wrestler with great balance and strength, and what he's done this season has been mostly by himself. He's ready to work hard over the summer and come back ready to go further next year."

Basketball

Raider Frosh Finish First Season At 12-6

The North Quincy High School freshman girls' basketball team overcame a horrendous start to beat the Quincy High School freshman girls 35-24 Feb. 15.

The Raiders ended their season with a four-game winning streak. Coach Doug McFarlane's team finished their first campaign of high school basketball with a 12-6 overall record, 10-4 in the Old Colony League.

The game against Quincy was a foul-plagued sloppily-played contest. North didn't score a point for the first 8:28 of the game until Shannon Hillis finally put them on the board off an offensive rebound. By that time, Donna Damata and Heather Schatzl had led Quincy to an 8-0 advantage.

North missed their first 11 free throws and were just 3-of-23 from the charity stripe at halftime. Free throw shooting turned out to be an important part of the game as four players fouled out. The Presidents struggled from the floor and line as well and the halftime score was a low 12-7.

In the second half, the Raiders regained some of their shooting touch. North's trapping defense forced several Quincy turnovers as Rachel Powers, Lauren Luzzo and Colleen McDougall combined for eight second-half steals. The Raiders turned around their free throw shooting with a 12-of-15 second half effort, with Ali Haddad going 8-for-10 from the line.

Strong rebounding and hustling defense from Quincy's Leanne Martin and Liz Ashworth kept the Presidents in the game until the six-minute mark, when the Raiders started to pull away to the 11-point final margin.

For Quincy, Donna Damata was the their high scorer with 12 points. Ali Haddad led North Quincy with 11 points, and Rachel Powers added 10. Kate Lavery, Marianne Weiler and Marcia Hern also scored for the Raiders.

Regas, Costales Named League All-Stars

The North Quincy High School boys' track team placed fifth overall at the Old Colony League Championship Meet at the Reggie Lewis Center on Feb. 19.

North finished with a total of 25 points, with Raider athletes placing (top five) in five different events.

George Regas was the day's top finisher, placing first overall in the shotput with a throw of 45'8". Regas' toss and his excellent season landed him a spot on the OCL track all-star team in the shotput, chosen by the league's coaches.

North Quincy's Mike Costales placed second overall in the 60-yard hurdles, finishing with a time of 7.8 seconds. Costales also was named an OCL all-star in the hurdles following the meet.

Other North Quincy top finishers were: Matt Kiely, who finished fourth overall in the 300-yard run with a time of 34.3 seconds; the 4x400 team of Kevin McCue, Jay Newhall, Joe Linsky and Mike Devin placed fifth overall with a time of 3:58.9; and the 4x200 relay team, made up of Kiely, Chris Morris, Tom Chan and Mike Costales, which placed sixth at 1:40.6.

Coming up for the Raider boys' track squad is the State Class Meet on Feb. 25. North will send five different athletes: Mike Costales and Adam Deake in the hurdles; George Regas in the shotput; Kevin McCue in the mile; and Matt Kiely in the 300.

Coach Peter Chrisolm would like to congratulate those five athletes and all the other members of the North Quincy track squad for a great season and a job well done.

Philip Johnston To Speak On Health Reform March 7

Philip W. Johnston, Democratic candidate for the 10th Congressional District, will discuss his commitment to health reform during a campaign coffee to be held at the home of Mimi Campbell, Quincy Shore Drive, Thursday, March 7 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Johnston, who recently resigned his federal appointment as regional director of health and human services in order to campaign full-time, will address a major theme of his candidacy: The economic insecurity faced by workers throughout the district and the need to ensure that all working families are provided adequate, affordable health insurance.

"The fears of American workers are generated in part by mergers and downsizing which results in job layoffs," said Johnston. "In addition, I believe the fact that the number of people in our state without health insurance—which ballooned from 500,000 in 1991 to 700,000 today—underscores the continuing importance of health insurance reform in our nation.

"It is simply wrong that working families should have to worry about bankruptcy if someone faces a serious illness. It's time that Congress deals with the issue once and for all."

From 1975 to '83, Johnston was a five-term state representative from the 10th Plymouth District. In 1993, President Clinton appointed Johnston regional director of health and human services, an office he held until his resignation in January.

For more information about the Johnston for Congress campaign, call (508) 747-1996.

Mark Roberts Candidate For Republican State Committee

Mark F. Roberts of 30 Curtis Ave., Quincy announces that he is a candidate for the Republican State committee seat which will be elected during the Presidential Primary Election on March 5.

The Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial District includes Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, Norwell, Quincy, and Rockland.

Roberts, 32, received his law degree (J.D.) from the Massachusetts School of Law and his business degree (B.S. in financial management) from the University of Massachusetts. Along with experience as a small business owner, he is currently employed by State Street Bank in Quincy.

This past year, Roberts has completed six years of service in the Massachusetts Air National Guard where he was awarded several commendations and decorations including the Air Force Achievement Medal and the Airman of the Year for the First Numbered Air Force.

Roberts and his wife Judy have been involved in numerous civic and political activities including working as volunteers with Saint Jude Children's Research Hospital.

"I believe that I can help continue the revolution that has brought many voters back to the polls to support conservative, fiscally responsive Republicans. At this critical time in Republican politics, we need to have individuals who can get the job done and establish leadership to unify Republicans and establish grass root support of local candidates."

Council On Aging Trip To Notre Dame Band Concert March 13

The Quincy Council on Aging will sponsor a trip to the University of Notre

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"I don't make jokes. I just watch the government and report the facts," said Will Rogers, the great American humorist.

Everybody loves a good one-liner. It is incredible how wisdom, insight, humor and/or truth can be delivered in a single quotation... Let's look at a few: "A billion here, a billion there - pretty soon it adds up to real money."

- U.S. Senator Everett Dirksen referring to the money that government spends.

"I was gratified to be able to answer promptly. I said I don't know." - Mark Twain (1835-1910)

"Falsehood may have its hour, but it has no future." Francois D. Pressence

"I never did give anyone hell. I just told the truth and they thought it was hell." - Harry S. Truman (1884-1972)

"Talk is cheap because supply exceeds demand." - Author Unknown

"Honest criticism is hard to take, particularly from a relative, a friend, an acquaintance or a stranger." - Franklin P. Jones

And finally...

"The man who doesn't read good books has no advantage over the man who can't read them." - Mark Twain

One can indeed say a great deal in a very few well chosen words...

Site Near Old Pollard Seen For Point School

ano. "We both want a new school in Quincy Point, and we both want to see shipbuilding back, so we've been encouraging the mayor to look at other sites, including this one."
"It's as good a location as there is in Ward 2 for the new school. And everyone is looking optimistically at the shipyard proposal. Everyone's pretty confident."

Raymondi said the new site, which had been among the locations under consideration before the Cleverly Court lot was chosen, is somewhat of an ironic choice.

"Fifteen years ago the city closed the Pollard School, and now here we are looking to put a school right next to it," he said. "That's the irony of the situation."

Mariano added that while the new site is larger than the Cleverly Court location, it is "very rocky" and would require more site preparation, likely resulting in a larger cost. No official price tag has been put on the project for either location.

Mariano expressed hope that the return of shipbuilding combined with a new Quincy Point elementary school will make the neighborhood more attractive to young homebuyers.

"We're hoping this is a stimulus for revitalization more than anything," he said.

Sheets, who is on vacation this week but has said he will support construction of a new elementary school in Quincy Point, could not be reached for comment.

Raymondi said while there is no guarantee shipbuilding will return to the city, it is necessary to locate a new site as quickly as possible in case it does happen. The state's new School Building Assistance legislation, which begins July 1, will not allow for the same reimbursement for such projects the city would receive under the current legislation, and the fate of the shipyard will not be known until after that time.

"It's critical that we move fast," said Raymondi.

Currently, communities are reimbursed for about 63 percent of the construction costs of such projects.

While Raymondi and Mariano said they are pleased with the new location they have chosen, they noted that there are many more neighbors living in close proximity than there were at the original site. They said a series of meetings will be held with residents of 1000 Southern Artery, the condominiums at the site of the former Pollard School, and nearby streets such as Chubbuck Street and Watson Road as well as parents of students at the Point-Webster Elementary

Support for the original location from residents and city officials alike was virtually unanimous, they added.

The new site for the elementary school must be approved by the School Committee. Sheets would then send a bond issue which would fund the project to the City Council for consideration, something Raymondi said he hopes is done by April.

Following council approval, the city would have to send a home-rule petition to the state Legislature because the Victory Park location is zoned open space. Mariano, who serves as a state representative, said such legislation would have to be filed by the city by June 30, the end of Fiscal Year 1996, in order for Quincy to be eligible for the current reimbursement process.

Raymondi and Mariano have proposed building the new school to help relieve overcrowding at Sterling Middle School. Under their proposal, the new school would accept pupils who now attend Point-Webster Elementary School, while Point-Webster—currently Quincy Point's only public school—would become a middle school.

Students who now move from Point-Webster to Sterling for sixth grade would stay in Quincy Point for middle school, reducing by about half Sterling's growing population of more than 450 students.

Officials have no definitive timetable for the project.

Under the present districting, half of Sterling's students originate from Point-Webster with the other half coming from Lincoln-Hancock Community School in South Quincy.

GETTING CENTERED

After a turn, the steering wheel should return to its straight-ahead position with little steering effort on the part of the driver. The absence of this self-centering characteristic may indicate that bent suspension parts have altered either the caster angle or the steering axis inclination. The caster angle is the angle between that of the strut and the vertical, when viewed from the side. On some cars, the caster is not adjustable during a wheel alignment. If the steering wheel does not return to the straight-ahead position after a turn due to an incorrect caster setting, the damaged steering parts responsible for the problem must be replaced. The other possible cause of the steering wheel's failure to self-center may be incorrect steering axis inclination, which is the angle between that of the strut and the vertical, when viewed from straight ahead. Steering axis inclination is not adjustable and must be corrected with new parts.

HINT: Incorrect steering axis inclination may indicate a bent steering knuckle or a bent spindle (front axle).

Ribbon Cutting Starts Senior Shuttle Service

City Councillor Michael Cheney announced Tuesday that Van About Town, the new senior citizen van shuttle service, will begin with a ribbon-cutting ceremony today (Thursday) at 8:15 a.m. at City Hall.

Cheney made the announcement on behalf of the Board of Directors of Quincy Transportation Inc., a non-profit group established to provide the service to seniors throughout the city. The cost of the service is $1 for a round-trip ticket or $30 for a three-month unlimited pass.

Stops will be made in Wollaston Center, Quincy Center at Presidents Place, Quincy Center in the vicinity of Woolworth's, Bradley's at Presidents Plaza, Roche Bros. and Wal-Mart when they open in Quincy Point, Shaw's on Quincy Ave., and Shaw's on the North Quincy-Wollaston line when it opens later this year.

The shuttle service will also provide round-trips to Crown Colony medical buildings. The van service will run from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Seniors will be picked up at the 15 senior citizen buildings in the city.

Seniors do not have to be a resident of a senior building to participate in the shuttle program.

Within three months' time the Board of Directors of Quincy Transportation Inc. expects to expand the service to include the city's community centers. The van service was recently approved by a unanimous vote of the City Council.

"This is a much-needed service in the city," said Cheney. "Seventy-nine percent of our senior citizens do not have automobiles. This service is sorely needed to provide senior citizens with a high level of independence."

The van service was made possible by a $60,000 start-up fund which was placed in the Granite Crossing shopping plaza permit that included Wal-Mart and Roche Bros. Cheney said ongoing contributions will be made by various sponsors including Stop & Shop, Shaw's, Roche Bros. and Wal-Mart.

"The board is seeking additional sponsors, particularly from the health

Raymondi Meeting Tonight On Proposed Shaw's

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi will hold a neighborhood meeting on a proposal by Shaw's Supermarket tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Martensen St. Senior Complex, Sawyer Towers Community Room.

The proposal involves the demolition of the existing Shaw's store as well as the nearby Quincy Oil Co. building on Quincy Ave. and construction of a larger supermarket at the site.

Discussion on related traffic improvements to the area, including intersections at South and Scam-mel Sts., Quincy Ave. and Water St. and Quincy Ave. and Scammell St. as well as Faxon Lane also will be discussed.

Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon and a Shaw's representative will also be in attendance.

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy voters lined up with those in the state and region in Tuesday's Yankee Primary to give front-runner Senator Bob Dole a propelling giant step toward the Republican Presidential nomination.

Although Dole swept to big wins in Massachusetts and four other New England states, his margin of victory in Quincy over Patrick Buchanan was only 196 votes.

Dole received 1,341 votes here to Buchanan's 1,145 in what turned out to be a local two-man race.

Steve Forbes and Lamar Alexander were a distant third and fourth with 294 and 169 votes respectively.

Trailing behind them were Alan Keyes, 62; Richard Lugar, 41; Robert Dornan, 10; Morry Taylor and Phil Gram, each with 4.

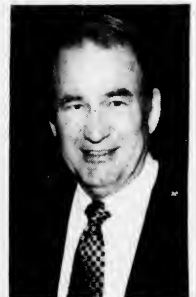

There were 57 "no preference" and 58 blanks.

Dole scooped up 37 winner-take-all delegates in Massachusetts, 27 in Connecticut, 16 in Rhode Island, 12 in Vermont and most if not all of 15 in Maine.

President Bill Clinton rolled by Lyndon LaRouche, Jr. on the Democratic ballot, BOB DOLE

PAT BUCHANAN

2,461 to 161. There were 447 "no preference" and 246 blanks.

John McDuff, Jr. won the Quincy vote for Republican State Committeeman in the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

Anne O'Donnell, also of Quincy, carried the Quincy vote for Republican State Committeewoman.

Results in the district were incomplete at press-time. The district includes Braintree, Abington, Holbrook, Norwell, and Rockland in addition to Quincy.

McDuff's vote in Quincy was 974. Darrin McAuliffe of Braintree, a former Quincy resident, was second with 779 and Mark Roberts of Quincy, third with 670. Andrew Himmell of Braintree followed with 175.

O'Donnell polled an impressive 1,444 votes for State Committeewoman.

Sheets: 'I'm Guardedly Optimistic' Council Still Waiting For Shipyard Plan Update

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Members of the City Council are upset they have not been updated on the progress of a proposal to bring shipbuilding back to the Fore River shipyard.

Mayor James Sheets, however, said Tuesday he is "guardedly optimistic" the plan will succeed.

The council last month called upon representatives from the state Executive Office of Economic Affairs, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which owns the shipyard and Swampscott-based Massachusetts Heavy Industries, the firm behind the shipyard revitalization plan, to present an update on the plan's progress.

Councillor Paul Harold expressed disappointment when the update did not place as scheduled Monday night. No one showed up to appear before the council at the meeting.

Harold read from a letter dated March 1 from Economic Affairs Secretary David Tibbetts who declined to attend the meeting but said others would be there.

"I understand that Mr. (Sotirios) Emmanouil (owner) of Massachusetts Heavy Industries, along with representatives of the mayor's office and the MWRA, will attend the meeting and discuss items of interest to the council," Tibbetts wrote. "At this time, I would defer specifically to Mr. Emmanouil in that he is the driving force of the project currently being considered."

Harold said if those affiliated with donut shops appear regularly before the License Board, those involved with the shipyard plan should extend the City Council the same courtesy.

"This group has shown disrespect for the legislative body of the city," he said.

City Council President Peter Kolson agreed.

"I don't like being made a fool of," said Kolson.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi also expressed disappointment, noting that he recently changed the site of a proposed new elementary school in Quincy Point in order to cooperate with the Massachusetts Heavy Industries plan.

"I hear that this is the last best hope for the shipyard," he said.

Executive Secretary Michael McFarland, who represented Sheets at Monday night's meeting, said he was as surprised as everyone else that nobody from Tibbetts' office, the MWRA or Massachusetts Heavy Industries was in attendance.

McFarland did provide councillors with a chronological order of events at the shipyard dating back to December 1993. Harold, however, said more needs to be learned about Emmanouil's financial stability and projected schedule for the future.

The council agreed that another letter be sent to all relevant parties requesting they attend the council's next meeting. Councillors also said they would have their previous correspondence attached to the new letter to remind those parties of how long the council has been waiting for the update.

On Tuesday, Sheets said based on what he is heard, he is "guardedly optimistic" Emmanouil will be able to secure the $230 million in federal loan guarantees from the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) necessary to bring shipbuilding back to the shipyard.

"We're further ahead now than we've ever been," said Sheets. "We've never come this far. I would say if Sotirios Emmanouil doesn't build ships there, ships will not be built there."

Sheets said if successful, the Greek shipbuilder's plan to build freighters and tankers at the shipyard will make the site "internationally competitive" and create about 1,500 local jobs.

The MWRA already has agreed to Emmanouil's offer of $10 million for the shipyard. The deal must be approved by the state Legislature, although Sheets noted that likely will not happen until MARAD approves the federal loan guarantees.

In the meantime, Sheets said he has formed a special team to put "a full-court press" on MARAD, which is "notoriously slow" in such matters. It consists of the mayor, Sens. Edward Kennedy and John Kerry, Congressman Gerry Studds, state Rep. Ronald Mariano, Raymondi, Emmanouil and U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena.

MARAD falls under the U.S. Transportation Department, Sheets noted.

Police Dept. Joins SSES In Helping Senior Citizens

The Quincy Police Department has joined forces with South Shore Elder Services (SSES) to ensure that isolated, homebound senior citizens receive meals during weather emergencies.

The agency appealed to the police after severe snowstorms forced the cancellation of several Meals and Wheels deliveries.

SSES Nutrition Director Linda Fitzgibbon said that elders are supplied with emergency packs that contain the essentials to make up one meal. The packs do not require refrigeration.

"Elders usually have an emergency, and in a storm, family or neighbors will often help," she said. "But if we get hit with a weekend storm or more than one storm in a short time, some elders may be without food."

SSES Executive Director Edward Flynn appealed to police departments on the South Shore by storing emergency packs of food and delivering them to those in need in a severe storm.

"The response was tremendous," Flynn said. "We realize that police officers are very busy, especially, during a storm, but the Quincy Police Department said they'd be

Raymondi Seeks Demolition Of Abandoned QP House

The City Council has agreed to ask Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey to begin demolition proceedings for an abandoned house in Quincy Point.

The action was proposed Monday night at the request of Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who called the house which is numbered 34-36-38 Sixth Ave. and located at the corner of Chubbuck Street, an "eyesore" and a threat to public safety.

Raymondi said the building is "very dangerous" to passers-by and area residents and also poses a fire hazard.

Tunnel workers and the Quincy Fire Department will hold a mock fire and rescue training exercise Saturday at about 9 a.m. at Nut Island.

There will be fire apparatus and ambulances at the plant.

'We're Not Going To Count The Cost'

Sheets Favors Hiring Consultant For Safety Task Force

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday the city will spend what it has to in order to provide a special task force with the necessary tools to improve safety conditions for city workers.

Sheets said he will send an appropriation to the City Council to hire a special safety consultant—one of the task force's proposals—as soon as he receives a formal request for one.

"I certainly do support hiring a consultant regardless of the amount," he said.

Sheets added that the city will make any other expenditures the task force deems necessary in order to make public buildings safe.

"We need to find a way to make our buildings secure," he said. "We're not going to count the cost, we're just going to do it."

Members of the task force, which was formed at the request of Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond following the recent rape of a Quincy High School administrator, held their first meeting last week. Several courses of action were suggested at the meeting.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon has directed all school employees to notify their supervisors if they stay late. He is also prohibiting anyone from working more than two hours after dismissal.

The task force also agreed to hire a consultant to evaluate security at all city buildings and offer safety workshops to all employees. Officials at the meeting estimated it would cost about $10,000 to do so.

Members of the group said the reduced hours, workshops and consultant are all necessary tools in improving safety.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the city has provided rape prevention education in the past and will immediately make it available to any of the city's 3,200 employees who request it. He added, however, that his department does not have the expertise to sort through the many security devices on the market, from identification card readers to surveillance cameras.

City employees have also made suggestions for improvements such as the return of regular police patrols to City Hall, installing buzzers under desks that would ring alarms at the police station, and better lighting outside buildings.

School Committee Vice Chairman Ronald Mariano aid the need for improved security exists, but said the task force should not go overboard, especially because of pressure on the schools to stay open at night for recreational programs.

The task force also includes representatives of Quincy Hospital, Quincy College, the Department of Public Works and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Police have made no arrests in the Feb. 15 rape, which took place in the Quincy High administration building.

IRS Tax Assistance Program At Council On Aging

The Internal Revenue Service has several programs designed to educate individuals on how to prepare their own tax returns, including one at the Quincy Council on Aging.

"During the tax filing season, IRS-trained volunteers in community locations assist low-income, disabled, and non-English speaking taxpayers with their tax forms," said Francine Crowley, IRS district director.

Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE) volunteers are specifically trained in tax issues affecting elderly taxpayers, such as the tax credit for the elderly or disabled and taxability of social security benefits.

Individuals in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program are trained to handle special credits and deductions, such as: the child care credit, earned income credit and deductions for medical and dental expenses.

"Taxpayers who need help should remember to bring their blank tax forms, W-2 forms, bank statements (1099s), last year's tax return (if available), as well as any other documents or receipts," said Crowley.

For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at 376-1245 or the IRS taxpayer assistance line at 1-800-829-1040.

A PAINFUL MYSTERY

The problem can be as complex and tough to understand as the name of the disorder itself: fibromyalgia. Symptoms may include widespread pain, tender spots, sleeping problems, fatigue, migraine headaches, irritable bladder or bowel, and depression. No wonder it has been described as the disorder in which everything hurts.

Adding to the pain is often the difficulty of diagnosis. The cause is unknown, and coming up with a successful treatment strategy can be a process of trial and error. May physicians agree that the key lies in breaking the chain reaction of symptoms that seem to follow in a downward spiral. This may involve diet and exercise changes, biofeedback, and relaxation training as well as medication.

P.S. Many people with fibromyalgia report worsening of symptoms after a physical or emotional stress.

If you are suffering persistent soft muscle pain, tiredness and difficulty sleeping, you might find you have a syndrome such as this one that can be ameliorated through proper treatment. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. A Young City Council

This year's City Council, in case you haven't noticed, is one of the youngest in Quincy's history.

All nine members are under age 50 and together they average only 37.8 years.

City Council President Peter Kolson is the "dean" at age 49.

Youngest is Michael D'Amico who at 20 is also the youngest ever elected to the council.

KOLSON

D'AMICO

Between them are:

Patrick McDermott, 26; Bruce Ayers, 33; Tim Cahill, 37; Steve Durkin, 39; Michael Cheney, 42; Paul Harold, 47; and Dan Raymondi, 48.

If you add Mayor James Sheets' age 60 to that of the nine councillors, the average age for the executive-legislative branch combined is 40.1.

But the mayor and council of 30 years ago had an even younger look.

McINTYRE

Oldest was Vincent Smyth at 45. In between were:

Richard Barry, 31; George Burke, 33; Walter Hannon, 34; John Koegler, 34; Francis McCauley, 35; John Quinn, 42; and George McDonald, 43.

The reins of Quincy's municipal government passed from one generation to another on that inaugural day in 1966.

McIntyre succeeded Amelio Della Chiesa who was 64 as he left office after 12 years as mayor, eight under Plan A and four under the ill-fated Plan E form of government.

McIntyre was the fourth youngest elected mayor.

The three youngest: Russell Sears, 27; Charles Francis Adams, 29; and Thomas Burgin, 33.

McIntyre and the 1966 council gave Quincy its youngest mayor-council combination in the city's history: average age, 36.

Look at the age s of this year's council all nine are still young enough to have thoughts of someday being mayor.

□

CITY COUNCIL President Peter Kolson has just completed a two-week stint--his first--as acting mayor on a little quieter note than when his predecessor Michael Cheney held the honor when Mayor Sheets was out of town.

Whenever Cheney stepped in as acting mayor as council president, all kinds of things seemed to start popping.

But Kolson's tenure was quiet and peaceful: representing Sheets at functions, signing warrants to pay bills, signing small consulting contracts, etc.

"It was great though," he says. "It gave me a better perspective and appreciation of how well the city is run."

"I found out first hand that Jim Sheets has a great staff. They really do a wonderful job. I was pretty impressed."

Did being acting mayor give him any ideas about the future?

"Well, let's put it this way. If I get to be mayor, I hope I have as good a staff as Jim Sheets does. If they are still around, I'll keep them on."

Oversight To Study PUD Payments

The City Council voted Monday night that its Oversight Committee will conduct a study of all payments to the city related to special PUD (Planned Unit Development) permits.

The council also agreed that special "revolving accounts" will also be included in the study.

The action came at the request of Councillor Paul Harold, who said he wants the Ordinance Committee to make recommendations for better channeling of PUD payments and disbursements through appropriate officers or boards.

Among Harold's prime concerns is the special PUD permit for a planned Wal-Mart store in Quincy Point. One stipulation of the permit requires Wal-Mart to pay $5,000 to help fund the soon-to-begin Van About Town shuttle service for senior citizens, and Harold said he wants Wal-Mart to channel the money through the City Council rather than directly paying Quincy Transportation Inc., the non-profit group that will run the service.

Councillor Michael Cheney suggested an amendment to Harold's proposal that "revolving accounts," which Cheney has voiced concerns about in the past, also be included in the study. Councillors agreed to the amendment but noted that the accounts for Quincy Hospital and Quincy College, which were created by special legislation, will be excluded.

Free Legal Clinic March 19

A Free Legal Clinic will be held Tuesday, March 19 from 6 to 8 p.m. at Quincy District Court.

Attorneys will be available for a private, one-on-one consultation to discuss any legal issues. Clinics

The clinic is sponsored by the Bar Association of Norfolk County. For more information, call 471-9693.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1910 postcard showing the original central fire station on Quincy Avenue. Built in 1892, this was one of numerous municipal buildings erected just after Quincy became a city in 1888. New state building codes required the use of brick and masonry instead of wood, so this building, the Wollaston fire station and many of the schools built at the same time had similar architectural details. This postcard was sent to a young fellow staying at 'Camp Wollaston' in South Wolfboro, New Hampshire.

The Dental Office And Good Health

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Massachusetts Dental Society has closely monitored recent legal proceedings in Springfield, during which an individual claimed he was infected with the AIDS virus through contact with contaminated dental equipment during a 1989 dental procedure.

We commend the jury for its thoughtful and well-reasoned deliberations, which resulted in the finding that the dental office was not the source of the patient's HIV infection. The verdict was based on scientific evidence which reaffirmed the safety of the dental office, and should reassure patients that the dental office is a place where good health is promoted and maintained.

The Massachusetts Dental Society and the American Dental Association have advised and promoted the sterilization of all dental instruments for decades. Since the early 1980s, our recommendations have continued to evolve into a set of more stringent guidelines for the protection of patients and dental personnel. These procedures, known as universal precautions, have been adopted overwhelmingly by our profession. We have consistently based our guidelines and educational programs on the scientific literature, Centers for Disease Control guidelines and directives, and other sources of rigorously tested scientific information.

Patient health and safety remain the foremost concerns of all dental professionals. Dentists and other allied professionals are working diligently to ensure that the dental office remains safe. We urge patients to feel free to discuss their concerns with their dentists, who will welcome the opportunity to educate them about the steps being taken to ensure their continued health and safety.

Finally, the society commends those members of the media who, through balanced coverage of the recent trial, helped the public become better educated about their health needs, based on scientific fact and not unfounded accusations.

Neighbors Oppose Sale Of Hospital Land

By PAUL HAROLD

Residents of Glendale Rd. turned out in force at a hearing at City Hall to oppose the proposed sale of hospital land on Glendale Rd. for the construction of an extended care facility.

Medi-masters, Inc. had planned a 120-bed facility on the 168,000 square foot parcel to the rear of the main hospital complex. The hospital Board of Managers had voted in favor of the sale, but Dr. Anthony Koury presented a petition to the city council with 850 signatures in opposition to the plan.

Former Mayor Thomas Burgin said that because the land was given as a gift for hospital purposes in 1939 that the city was precluded from selling it for another purpose.

CARDWELL CALLS BUDGETS CUTS "TOKENISM"

Timothy Cardwell, head of the Quincy Taxpayers Revolt, called the City Council's projected half million dollars in budget cuts "nothing more than a pittance tokenism" that represented a mere two dollars on the tax rate.

Councillor John Quinn, chairman of the council's finance committee, predicted the half million dollar cut following the committee's second session on the proposed $87.2 million, 18-month budget.

Pork Tenderloin

Here is a wonderful recipe for that "other white meat" pork sent from Toby.

This recipe calls for pork tenderloin which can be purchased at most supermarkets. It resembles a long thick sausage and cuts like a dream.

TOBY'S TENDERLOIN OF PORK

- 1 pork tenderloin (usually about a pound and a half to 2 pounds)
- 3/4 stick butter
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon dijon mustard
- 1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons fresh parsley

2 tablespoons parmesan cheese
Melt the butter, add the Worcestershire sauce and mustard

Dip the pork into the mixture and roll into a mixture of bread crumbs, parsley and parmesan cheese.

Place in a baking pan. Pour any remaining butter mixture over the top and bake for about an hour at 350 degree oven.

NOTE: In last week's recipe for the pie crust, 2/3 cup of shortening needs to be added to the ingredients of flour, salt and ice water.

Community Input, Voter Registration Among Priorities New Asian Association Chairman Sets His Goals

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The new chairman of the Quincy Asian American Association (QAAA) lists increased voter registration and more community input as among his goals for the coming year.

Tackey Chan, 22, said he is hoping for a "good turnout" when the group holds its first meeting of the new year tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy. He noted that the evening's agenda will not be rigidly structured but will include discussion about fund-raising and other administrative issues.

"It will give me a chance to find out what direction they (Asian residents) think we should be taking in the community," he said.

Chan was appointed to a one-year term as QAAA chairman last month. A 1991 graduate of Boston College High School and 1995 graduate of Brandeis University--where he majored in politics--he is a former intern for state Rep. Michael Bellotti and currently works as a legislative aide for Sen. Michael Bellotti.

TACKEY CHAN

Given his background, it is not surprising that Chan calls voter registration among the Asian community "a personal interest" that he will make a priority. He said it is important that the city's Asians take a more active role in the political process.

"Putting people in the books is half the battle," he said. "Then, the next challenge is getting them to the polls."

Chan added, however, that the concerns of the community will be put before his own agenda. Although he was born in the United States--he is, in fact, a lifelong resident of Quincy--he is fluent in Cantonese and familiar with the history and background of several Asian cultures.

He said he hopes members of the various Asian cultural groups in the city will come forward to speak about their concerns.

"The Asian community is a large group of people, and like any large group of people, you have certain cliques," said Chan. "I want to create an atmosphere where anyone feels free to contact me."

"There are other Asian associations in Quincy. But the QAAA represents everyone, and we want to keep it broad and open."

Betty Yau, whom Chan replaced as chairman, said he has "many skills" that qualify him to be the leader of the four-year-old QAAA.

"Tackey is a good listener and will work hard to address community concerns," said Yau. "He will be a positive influence in Quincy."

Visiting Nurses Receive Accreditation With Commendation

The Quincy Visiting Nurse Association announces its Accreditation with Commendation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

Only 19 percent of accredited home care organizations have achieved Accreditation with Commendation, the highest level of accreditation awarded by the Joint Commission.

Formed in 1951, the Joint Commission is dedicated to improving the quality of the nation's health care through voluntary accreditation. Quincy VNA received the accreditation award after a Joint Commission surveyor conducted an on-site survey and found that Quincy VNA had demonstrated compliance with the Joint Commission's national standards for home care organizations.

"Receiving Accreditation with Commendation is a significant achievement, one that recognizes exemplary performance by Quincy VNA," said Dr. Dennis S. O'Leary, president of the Joint Commission. "The organization should be commended for its commitment to providing quality care to the people in its community."

"Joint Commission accreditation was a very important goal for Quincy VNA," said Stephen Robbins, QVNA director. "Accreditation with Commendation is an outstanding accomplishment and a reflection of Quincy VNA's dedication to providing quality care to all of our patients in the South Shore."

Heel Pain: A Common But Treatable Problem

By DR. WYNN PERLICK

Heel pain is one of the most common foot complaints. Such pain may have many causes.

A heel spur or plantar fasciitis is the most common cause. A heel spur is a projection of bone on the bottom of the heel or calcaneus.

To understand how and why a spur forms, you must first understand the structure and operation of the foot. The arch of the foot consists of bones, joints, ligaments, muscles and tendons. The strength and alignment of these structures determines how our foot functions.

The heel spur grows as a reaction to an abnormal pulling on the plantar fascia, a thick fibrous band which attaches to the heel and helps maintain the arch. As the plantar fascia is pulled away from its attachment to the heel, the body tries to repair itself by depositing new bone in the direction of this stress.

The pulling of the plantar fascia occurs during walking, running and standing in a foot which is imbalanced due to poor bone alignment or weak muscles and ligaments. The stress on the heel and fascia can be affected by different types of shoes, weight gain, various activities, or occupations and by the aging process itself.

Heel pain is not generally caused by the heel spur. Rather, it is the inflammation in the plantar fascia and other supporting structures which causes pain. When the plantar fascia is pulled from its attachment to the heel, this causes tearing and bleeding which leads to inflammation.

Remember, it is not the size of the spur that matters! This only indicates the amount of stress and the length of time the process has been going on. There are many people who have heel spurs that do not have heel pain.

The most common time for someone to experience this type of heel pain is when the plantar fascia is contracted: first thing in the morning or after sitting for a period of time and then getting up to walk. In the early stages, the pain will lessen after walking briefly. In the later stages, the pain will be alleviated with walking initially but then increase with prolonged standing or walking.

Pain associated with plantar fasciitis may cause abnormal walking patterns which may lead to undue stress on other parts of the foot or even other parts of the body. The longer you wait for treatment, the more difficult it is to alleviate the symptoms.

The treatment of heel pain is initially directed at reducing the inflammation. Ice, rest and anti-inflammatory medications may be recommended. Physical therapy may be used along with padding and strapping of the foot. A series of injections may be offered to decrease inflammation. This treatment will generally decrease the pain to some degree.

Attention is then directed at preventing recurrence of the symptoms. Orthotic devices (corrective shoe inserts) can be used to reduce the stress on the plantar fascia and other tissues by helping to maintain the foot structure in better alignment.

If conservative treatment measures fail, then surgery may be indicated to release the plantar fascia. However, most people will get better without surgery.

In short, if you have heel pain you do not have to live with it. This is a common problem and treatment is generally conservative and successful.

Waging Germ Warfare At Home

(NAPS)—For many of the germs that cause colds and other infectious illnesses, there is no place like home. Although your household may seem squeaky clean, germs can still be hiding on surfaces such as baby's toys, doorknobs, even the remote control.

According to Dr. Patricia Bowman, microbiologist and Senior Vice President of Research & Development for L&F Products, many surfaces in your house can harbor harmful viruses that can cause colds, gastrointestinal diseases and other illnesses. Dr. Bowman adds that the best offense is a good defense, so first concentrate on household "hot spots" where harmful viruses are most likely to be found: the bathroom, the kitchen and the nursery/child's room.

Since some viruses can live for days on contaminated surfaces, cleaning with traditional cleaning products including baking soda, vinegar, ammonia or Borax just isn't enough. The key to keeping viruses in check is regular disinfection, along with thorough handwashing. As a general rule, commonly touched surfaces should be cleaned and disinfected at least daily with an EPA-registered disinfectant such as LYSOL® Disinfectant Spray; more often if a family member is ill.

To help prevent the spread of germs in your home, follow these tips:

- Practice thorough handwashing after using the toilet, changing the baby, before and after handling food, caring for the sick, and immediately upon arrival home.

- Colds are contagious before symptoms develop, so regularly clean and disinfect commonly touched surfaces like toys, faucets and doorknobs.

- To help prevent the transmission of viruses, avoid touching your eyes or nose and refrain from putting pencils and other objects in the mouth. Do not share drinking glasses, straws or utensils with friends.

- Teach kids to cover their nose and mouth with a tissue when they cough or sneeze, dispose of used tissues right away and then wash their hands.

St. Jude 'Workout' At World Gym March 23

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital announces to day that World Gym in North Quincy will conduct a St. Jude "Workout" to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital on March 23.

Locally, Sara Evans has volunteered to coordinate the program.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, located in Memphis, Tenn., was founded by entertainer Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases in children. St. Jude is a non-sectarian, inter-racial, and has provided total medical care to over 13,500 patients. All costs of treatment beyond those reimbursed by insurance are covered by the hospital.

At St. Jude, scientists and physicians work side-by-side seeking not only better means of treatment, but also the cause, cure and prevention of such diseases. All information gained at St. Jude is shared with other hospitals and institutions around the world.

The money raised at the workout will help to ensure that children with cancer and other life-threatening diseases will have a better chance to live. To participate in the program, registration information is available by calling World Gym at 472-9525.

Chiropractic Exam A Good Idea After Whiplash Injury

By DR. STEVEN WINDWER

Whiplash is a term generally used to describe an injury which takes place when someone is injured in a motor vehicle accident.

When a person suffers a whiplash injury, their spine has been hyperflexed or hyperextended and that is most commonly seen in a rear-end collision. A whiplash usually occurs when the head and neck are unexpectedly or suddenly thrown very quickly in one direction and then rebound in the opposite direction, which you might say the head is whipped forward and back on the neck.

In an auto accident, when one car is hit from the rear, the first thing that occurs is the body is thrown forward, but the head is thrown backward and the neck is hyperextended. A whiplash can also result from sudden stopping of a car when the body remains fairly in place but the head and neck are thrown forward into hyperflexion.

DR. STEVEN WINDWER

In almost all whiplash-type injuries, there is a certain amount of hyperflexion and hyperextension. This is because the muscles react to the initial injury by pulling a rebounding in the opposite direction. The rebound can and often does cause injury.

A whiplash injury can be even more serious when the head is rotated or tilted slightly to either the right or the left when the accident occurs. This will tend to complicate the effects of the injury.

Like any other type of injury, all whiplash injuries are a little different because there are so many things that can change from each accident; for instance, how the driver was facing, the age, the condition of the spine prior to the accident, the amount of warning or state of preparedness prior to the accident, the health of the muscles, ligaments, discs and bones, the direction of the impact and the speeds that were involved. Unfortunately, wearing a seat-belt has little effect on whiplash injury protection. Headrests, however, which are fairly standard, do offer some protection in the hyperextension aspect of the injury.

The symptomatology of a whiplash varies from person to person. They can range from barely noticeable stiffness to severe trauma and even death. In most cases, the damage is to the neck's ligaments, tendons, muscles, and the vertebral alignment.

When the vertebrae become misaligned or stuck, they create pressure on the Exercise Your Right To Better Health

(NAPS)—You can lower your blood pressure by 20 to 50 percent by taking up an exercise program, health experts at the National Institutes of Health say. And you don't have to be a marathon runner to benefit from physical activity.

Even light activities, if done regularly, can help lower your risk of heart disease. More vigorous exercise has added benefits. It helps improve the fitness of the heart and lungs which, in turn, further protects you against heart disease. Activities like swimming, brisk walking, running and jumping rope are called aerobic exercises.

This means that the body uses oxygen to make the energy it needs for the activity. Aerobic activities can condition your heart and lungs if done at the right intensity for at least 30 minutes three to Working toward your target heart rate zone will help condition your heart and lungs, as well as lower your blood pressure.

four times a week. But if you don't have 30 minutes for a break, try two 15-minute periods or even three ten-minute periods.

According to Robert DiBianco, M.D., Associate Clinical Professor of Medicine at Georgetown University, School of Medicine, Washington, DC., "Most people don't need to see a doctor before they start exercising since a gradual, sensible exercise program has few health risks. But you should check with your doctor first if:

- you have a health problem like high blood pressure;
- if you have pains or pressure in the chest or shoulder area;
- if you tend to feel dizzy or faint;
- if you get very breathless after a mild workout; or
- if you are middle-aged or older and have not been active, and you are planning a vigorous exercise program."

Exercise and other healthy habits like avoiding tobacco and alcohol, and eating right can usually lower blood pressure, except in some severe cases. Sometimes, your doctor may prescribe certain medications to control your condition.

Further information may be obtained from a healthcare provider or pharmacist. Other sources of information are the Physician's Desk Reference and the package insert for the product.

tine, weight gain, and other concerns and fears encountered when trying to quit smoking. It will be followed by a hypnosis session and further dis-

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

TanLine II: A Luxury For The Thrifty '90s

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

As most business owners will tell you, the free-spend years of the 1980s have given way to the frugal '90s, where people are tighter with a dollar and more conscious of a good deal. The challenge for these business owners is to provide the best service available while keeping down the cost.

Guy Bognanno is familiar with the frugal '90s. As the owner of Fabulous Tan in Wollaston and the newly-opened TanLine II in Quincy, Bognanno has accepted the challenge of providing top service at a low price. And he's proving that it can be done.

"At TanLine II, we offer the latest technology in tanning," said Bognanno, who has been in the tanning business for 16 years. "We have the best available lamps, booths and beds as well as a fully-trained staff."

The tanning business boomed in the early 1980s after coming over from Europe in the late '70s. Following that boom, the tanning industry was blasted by critics because of cases of severe neglect and abuse on the part of both customers and tanning parlor owners.

But according to Bognanno, those days are over. Stricter certifications and education have made tanning a more reputable industry. There a lot of good things happening in this industry; owners are better educated, and that has made for less and less cases of abuse."

TanLine II is the third tanning parlor that Bognanno owns, with Fabulous Tan and Personalized Fitness in Milton already establishing his reputation for quality service. TanLine II reinforces that reputation, adding a new wrinkle: massage therapy.

"I take pride in the fact that we provide good service. My equipment is always top of the line and I maintain it regularly.

"For example, most lamps recommend replacement after 1,000 hours of use. But I usually change them at around 800-850 hours, because I want to make sure I have the strongest available lamps for my customers," continued Bognanno.

Bognanno began working in the tanning industry in 1980, selling equipment and, as he puts it, "learning the nuts and bolts" of the business, from the types of equipment and different tanning systems to marketing and customer service. "I saw that the industry was saturated, and some salon owners weren't getting good equipment. So I decided to open my own supply company and sell quality equipment," he recalled.

QUINCY'S TANLINE II, located at 148 Parkway, boasts one of the most well-trained and educated tanning staffs around. Owner Guy Bognanno has been in the tanning industry for almost 17 years and offers customers the latest in tanning technology and service. led.

One of his clients was Fabulous Tan, a family-owned business. The owners were looking to sell their salon, so Guy bought it in 1986 and took over, continuing the salon's great service. The following year, he opened Personalized Fitness as a combination tanning salon/fitness center.

When the opportunity came this year to expand again, Bognanno leaped at the chance. TanLine 2001 was going out of business, so Bognanno remodeled and reopened the salon in January. The salon has been open for just over a month.

TanLine II offers the latest in tanning technology. The salon is completely computerized, which not only streamlines customer service, but also insures against any tanning abuse. "Before the industry became computerized, there were instances where timers malfunctioned or weren't set right. Now it's all done by computer and is very closely regulated," said Bognanno.

In addition to the latest technology, TanLine II offers a fully-trained and knowledgeable staff that are professional and customer-oriented. "TanLine II was a pretty elite salon before, and I don't want to change what works. I want to make the salon more customer-friendly, providing a more cost-effective way to tan through good service and quality equipment," said Bognanno.

TanLine II customers know that the salon has their interests and welfare at heart. The salon has a complete screening process that is aimed at giving the customer the most "bang for their buck," according to Bognanno. "We put them on a schedule based not only on what they want, but also on what is best for their skin type and their health. We ask that the customers believe we have their best interests at heart; if they do, we promise that they will get the best results we can give. I take pride in providing the best service."

The salon offers a number of different tanning packages based on a customer's desired tanning goals. "We have monthly packages for people who might be going away on vacation and wish to pre-tan. We also have longer packages for people who wish to maintain tans, and VIP packages for people who will be tanning regularly," said Bognanno.

The benefits of tanning are two-fold. "Tanning has many health-related benefits. It can help with some skin problems, as well as any light-related psychological disorders—we have customers who come in on a doctor's advice.

"We also have customers who come in who are looking for relaxation. Being in a booth or a bed for 30 minutes a couple of times a week is a way for people to escape and relax. You'd be surprised at the number of mothers we get in here who want just 20 minutes of peace and quiet," laughed Bognanno.

It's not always easy to provide quality service for a low price, but Bognanno believes he has done that. And his satisfied customers are his proof. TanLine II will also offer customers a chance to give suggestions, comments or criticisms by setting up a consumer hotline. "When customers know they can make suggestions like that, it encourages them to do so. And it makes me and my staff work hard to provide that good service. I stress to my employees to be as helpful and open as possible, because good service is what keeps customers coming in," finished Bognanno.

TanLine II is located at 148 Parkway in Quincy and is open seven days a week. They are currently offering a special introductory package of three sessions for $6 for new customers only, and walk-ins are always welcome. They are also planning to offer massage therapy and are looking for a massage therapist.

If you are interested in becoming the salon's massage therapist or would more information about TanLine II, please call the salon at 786-0093.

Council Eyes Ordinance Change For Special Permit Liquor Licenses

Three city councillors have proposed an ordinance change that would require businesses seeking special permits in the city to wait two years for a liquor license if such a license is not part of the original permit request.

The council's Ordinance Committee will hold a public hearing on the proposal Monday, April 1 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The council's action Monday night follows a request by Roche Bros. Supermarket, which is being built as part of the Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point that will include a Wal-Mart, for a beer and wine license. Although the special permit for the store was granted in 1994, the license request was made only recently.

City Clerk Joseph Shea also noted that a similar "late" request recently was made by Shaw's Supermarkets, which is planning to build a new store on the North Quincy-Wollaston line, straddling Wards 5 and 6. He added, however, that the Shaw's request has been withdrawn for the time being.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymonti, who is among the ordinance change's three co-sponsors, said the change will make it mandatory for businesses planning to request a liquor license to be "up front" about doing so at the beginning of the permit process. He noted that he finds it difficult to believe Roche Bros. did not know in advance it would be requesting such a license.

"It's hard to imagine," said Raymonti.

He added that the special permit may have run into more opposition on the council had Roche Bros. made it known from the beginning it was seeking the license.

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, the other co-sponsors, agreed.

"I think that when a special permit is granted, the neighbors have a right to know what they are getting," said Durkin.

"I believe we need to have safeguards on these types of issues when they come forward," said Ayers.

Michael Bellotti, Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) Executive Director John "Jake" Comer, Rep. Ronald Mariano, QHA Board of Directors Assistant Treasurer Kay Bamford, QHA Superintendent of Maintenance Peter Kolson and QHA Board of Directors Chairman James McDonald.

care industry, and in order to make this van service affordable it must be supplemented by the business community," said Bryant Carter, clerk of Van About Town.

Joseph McArdle, owner of Hancock Tobacco in Quincy Center said, "This should be a boost to our downtown economy--bringing our senior citizens into the downtown area is certain to help local businesses."

Other board members include Mayor James Sheets, Quincy Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley and Council on Aging Chairman John Noonan, who chose the name "Van About Town" for the service. The Quincy Housing Authority is represented on the board by Joanne Young.

Cheney recently visited every senior citizen facility in the city and said the response to the service has been overwhelming.

"Senior citizens are anxious to get out of their units and become independent," said Cheney. "This van service will provide that opportunity."

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino has also played a major role in the establishment of the van service by linking it with the business community.

"Quincy 2000 is proud to assist both the elderly and the local merchants in bringing more consumers to our downtown areas," said Mannarino. "We are very pleased to provide any assistance that is needed to make this an overwhelming success."

Cheney said he is "delighted" he was able to get the project off the ground. Work Inc. of North Quincy has been contracted by Quincy Transportation Inc. to provide the shuttle program.

"Work Inc. won the contract on a competitive bid, and the Board of Directors are very pleased to be working with a reputable corporation such as Work Inc.," said Cheney.

Work Inc. is providing the service on a cost reimbursement basis which essentially means they will not make a profit from the van shuttle program. The staff at Work Inc. has donated hundreds of volunteer hours to help establish the service for which the Board of Directors is very appreciative, Cheney said.

"We look forward to a long and successful operation as we start up this Van About Town for the benefit of the senior citizens in the City of Quincy," he added.

Property Management Is More Than Collecting Rent

By RONALD CIBOTTI

Many building owners don't realize the complexities and benefits of professional property management.

It is a lot more than making sure the common areas are clean, or collecting rent from tenants. Good property management requires the ability to maximize rental income and monitor expenses, and not at the expense of the tenant's comfort or satisfaction. A building owner's time is too valuable to deal with every little problem that goes on with their property, and owners must realize that good property management creates value in their investment.

The most recognizable aspect of property management is monitoring the physical needs of the property. Daily maintenance, capital improvements, energy conservation, and security fall into this category. How your property is perceived on an aesthetic level is essential in maintaining the image of your building and the potential for signing new leases or renewing existing ones. If your property is in a state of despair or is viewed as not being very secure, tenants will be hard to come by and your return on your investment could be lost.

As any building owner knows, keeping your tenants happy is important and sometimes very time-consuming and costly. Because a tenant is paying their rent on a monthly basis, they have every right to demand that they receive what they essentially signed into.

A good property manager helps ensure tenant satisfaction. Without tenant satisfaction, you will not have a stable tenant population and turnover of tenants costs money. How long will it take to secure a new tenant? What will the cost be to put into the space? So many unknowns. Tenant satisfaction should be high on the list of building owners and property managers to insure steady flow of income to support the debt service and operating expenses.

Monitoring expenses and controlling costs is key to the profitability of your building. A good property manager will be able to provide a building owner a complete accounting and financial reporting of his or her building. Many owners don't know how their building is doing on a financial basis until tax time, and thousands of dollars in profits can be lost unless income and expenses are properly monitored. Monthly, quarterly and yearly reports from property managers will keep owners informed at all times.

Good property managers become very valuable when tenants' leases are coming up for renewal. Lease negotiations can be very time consuming for owners. A property manager can alleviate the owner of that arduous task and can become the liaison between the owner and tenant during negotiations.

Supervising vendors is also a very important aspect of a property manager's role. Plumbers, electricians, cleaners, painters and other contractors become the responsibility of the property manager, thus alleviating the owner of having to deal with the myriad of vendors. Also, when you have a new tenant moving in, a good property manager is invaluable in monitoring and supervising construction build-out.

As a building owner, there are certain criteria that should be considered when choosing the right property management firm. Property management requires a professional approach to all aspects of the property and requires a full understanding of all of the operating systems and the building components to provide the tenants with a quality work environment. Effective property management requires seasoned professionals who can maintain your property inside and out in the most cost-effective manner.

A good property manager will know how to formulate a sound business strategy to preserve and enhance the value and marketability of your property and they can guide you through the maze of capital improvements, daily maintenance problems, contracting, and leasing issues. Professional management can provide clients with prompt and meaningful information using their wide range of skills and experience with clarity and professionalism to achieve maximum profitability for you, the building owner.

Youth Arena Hosting Preliminary Round Senior Ice Hockey Players Shine At Own Olympics

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Upon retirement, the general belief is that people have to move to Florida, buy a condo and play golf all day.

But that's not entirely true. In fact, there's a group of hockey players that would take umbrage at that belief—and run you into the boards.

Meet the players from the Quincy Executive League. With ages ranging from 50 to 75 years old, these icemen are proof that Father Time can't stop a hockey lifer from lacing up his skates.

The Massachusetts Senior Olympics has given them an arena—literally—to play the game they love so much with others who share that passion for hockey. On March 4, the Quincy Youth Arena played host to the opening ceremonies for the 1996 Senior Games ice hockey tourney.

The tourney featured three Quincy teams—one 50+ squad and two 60+ teams—with a total of nine Quincy residents on their collective rosters. All told, there are 13 teams in this year's Senior Games hockey tourney.

1996 marks the second year that Quincy Youth Arena has hosted the preliminary round of the games, according to Quincy Recreation Department Director Barry Welch. "Last year we had only six teams in the ice hockey tourney—this year we have 13," said Welch. "And this is only the second year that ice hockey has been a part of the games."

"The whole Senior Olympics is growing. Two years ago, at the National Games, there were 5,000 competitors. Last year, the Games drew 6,000 athletes. And they expect even more this year. People know there's a place to play and compete, and they want to be there," continued Welch.

In the first game, the Quincy Egg & I 60+ squad met a powerful squad from Merrimac Valley that included former collegiate All-Americans Jack Garrity (two goals) and Art Chisholm (four assists). Merrimac cruised 7-0, giving Quincy all they could handle.

In the second game, it was Quincy's DeWolfe Real Estate 60+ team taking on the Central Massachusetts Rusty Blades. DeWolfe prevailed 3-1, getting goals from Lou Cook, Ted Rouillard and Gene Leahy. Mike Marklis, Charles McGrath and Jack Buonopane all had assists in the win.

And in the final game, the 50+ Quincy Arena Presidents fell 4-2 to the Boston Whalers. 50-year-old Bob Walker and 54-year-old Bob Martell had the goals for the host squad, with QYA's own Marty Tolson and Pete Peterson assisting.

But the games were more about getting together with fellow players and, as DeWolfe's Al MacKay puts it, the "camaraderie of the team. I've been playing with most of these guys for a few years," said MacKay, "and some of them for almost 30 years. We love playing together and having fun on the ice."

MacKay, who at 71 is the second-oldest on the squad (and the oldest Quincy resident), tried to go the Florida-condo-golf route, but, as he puts it, "golf is just too frustrating. So I tried playing in a 20 & over league, but my wife put the kibosh on that when she found out. They skate a little faster and play rougher, and I really wouldn't want to ruin the winter by breaking something."

But when MacKay heard about the Senior Games, he came home to play. "Bibby Lewis [the Commissioner of the Executive League] knew there was interest in a senior league, and those players also were interested in the Senior Games. So I wanted to come home and play with them," said MacKay.

MacKay showed Lewis that there was interest in a senior league when he took him to Pawtucket (R.I.) league a few years back. Once they found out there was interest on the South Shore, they set up the Executive League.

"I just enjoy playing. When you've been playing hockey your whole life and then you stop, you miss playing and the guys you play with. You miss the fun of being with the guys and the camaraderie.

Sometimes I think we have more fun together off the ice than on it.

"It's also a great way to stay in shape. When you get to be 70, you want to stay in shape as much as you can, and this is a great way. You don't have to lay around and become a couch potato when you retire—you can still do whatever you want, and I am," finished MacKay.

The three Quincy squads travel to Fitchburg State College tomorrow (Friday) for the championship round of the 1996 Senior Olympic ice hockey tourney. Chances are, they won't be playing golf anytime soon.

But a trip to Florida for some sunshine sure would be nice.

QYHA Pee Wee C's In State Tourney Finals This Weekend

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Pee Wee "C" Team topped Needham in the regional finals of the State Hockey Tournament 2-1 in a hard-fought and exciting game.

Paul Zenga did the scoring for Quincy, putting home two unassisted tallies to lead Quincy to victory. Peter Turowski and Dan Jones played excellent two-way hockey in the Pee Wee's victory.

The Quincy defense, led by Kevin Patten, Jill McInnis, Kris Farr, Joe Callahan, Matt Miller and Bill Barrus, played stingy hockey to hold high-scoring Needham to only one goal. John Mooney had a strong game in goal, making several late game saves to preserve the win.

Quincy also reached the semi-finals of the Cranberry Tournament, compiling a 1-2 tourney record overall. The first game saw Quincy lose to Milton 5-3. Pat Lahar, Brian Scott and Kevin Patten all scored goals, with Patten, Paul Zenga and Bill Barrus.

The second game saw Quincy defeat Pembroke 5-2, with five players scoring for the Pee Wees. Jim Mateu, John Paquette, Martin McGrath, Lahar and Zenga all had goals, with Zenga, Mateu, Scott, Pat Mullen and Chopper Walsh handing out assists.

In the semi-final game, Quincy dropped a tough 3-2 decision to Medford. Chopper Walsh accounted for both Quincy goals, with Scott (two assists), Martin McGrath and Joe Callahan assisting.

The QYHA Pee Wee C's are now 15-2 as they move on to the finals of the State Hockey Tournament, being held in Taunton on March 8-10. Good luck to coaches John Nee and Jack McInnis and the entire team in the upcoming tournament.

Squirt A's Stay Hot

Fresh from winning the Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament championship, the Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt "A" travel team continued their winning ways in the Greater Boston Youth League with a 4-1 win over Waltham March 2 at Boston University.

The Squirts, sponsored by South Boston Savings

Bank, were led by the "Top Gun" line (all GBYHL Squirt Major Junior Bruins) of Billy McKeon (two goals, one assist), Ryan Donahue (one goal, two assists) and Brian O'Hanley (one goal, one assist). Bruce Maggio nearly had the shutout in net, but surrendered a late third-period goal off a Waltham rebound.

The Squirt defense was outstanding, with some even getting the opportunity to rotate up to the forward line. Andy Ross and Miah Hasson were great at both forward and defense for the Squirts.

The "Matt Line" of Matt Germain, Matt Gratzioso and Matt Lavery (GBYHL Minor Jr. Bruins) had a strong game, leading several offensive rushes for the Squirts A's.

defense, keeping Waltham at bay, with teammate Brendan Linnane protecting the blue line. Pat Maloney had a great game in net, making several key saves to keep the game close.

Alex Shaffer, Dave Orente, Paul Lennon and Mike McKeon all played solid two-way games for the Mites.

Player for her outstanding performance during the 1995 soccer season.

joints, the nerves can become irritated and the muscles that attach to the vertebrae become spasmed and tense. This may also lead to headaches and numbness and tingling.

Whiplash symptoms may start as neck soreness or stiffness perhaps accompanied by a headache, immediately or within a few hours of the accident. Sometimes these symptoms actually do not occur for a week.

Along with these symptoms, there may be a pain or numbness, tingling, pins and needles feeling between the shoulder blades, arms and hands. Some people may experience ear ringing, dizziness or even hearing loss. Sometimes the eyes can be affected and there may be pain behind the eyeballs, blurred vision, sensitivity to light, or other visual symptoms. Occasionally, there may be nausea/loss.

An individual who has been in an accident should first make sure there is no life-threatening emergency, no broken bones, torn blood vessels or hemorrhages. Whiplash injuries are usually seen at the emergency room to rule out any life-threatening situations.

Once these serious situations are ruled out, a chiropractic examination is in order. After any kind of accident or trauma, especially a whiplash, when the spine becomes misaligned, this is when a chiropractic examination would be most beneficial. This is because once these vertebrae are misaligned and are creating pain and nerve irritation, then taking medications and rest will only help to a certain degree.

No amount of pain killers, muscle relaxants, sedatives or physical therapy can realign the vertebrae and relieve the nervous system and skeletal system from the pressure that this misalignment can cause. What is needed is chiropractic care and a spinal adjustment which will realign the spinal column safely and easily.

Some people may have had a whiplash in the past but now feel pretty good. Usually these people can also benefit from seeing a chiropractor. These are people that usually have seen their MDs after an accident. They had some X-rays taken and found nothing broken, yet the spine still may be structurally unsound.

Many times these people develop arthritic changes and disc problems years after the accident. Without structural integrity, the spine will not heal properly. It may become symptom-free, but ultimately down the line problems can and do develop.

A whiplash injury is a dramatic example of one way to cause vertebral misalignment, the kind produced by accident or trauma or great stress that occurs suddenly. These misalignments may also be caused by other stressors and tensions that slowly build up day by day. They are called microtrauma.

Examples of microtrauma are poor posture, bad sleeping positions, weak muscles and poor diet. Even extensive dental work may cause neck and head misalignments. A chiropractic examination of 10 includes a discussion of your personal habits, which includes any injuries, falls, accidents or situations which may contribute to these misalignments.

The role of the chiropractor is to permit the body to function with a healthy spine, but if you have been involved in a whiplash-type accident, you should see your doctor for chiropractic as soon as possible to make sure that you heal as completely as possible.

(Dr. Steven Windwer, a chiropractor and physical therapist, is owner of Milton Chiropractic and Rehabilitation, 111 Willard St., West Quincy. For more information, call 471-4490.)

Northland Mite A's Fall

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Mite A's, sponsored by Northland Seafood, lost a hard-fought close contest with Waltham on Saturday 2-1.

After finishing second overall in the Quincy Kiwanis Tournament the week before, the hard-hitting Mites played Waltham close the whole way before succumbing at the end. Kevin Richardson had the Mites' lone tally, taking an Andy Patten pass and beating the Waltham goalie with a shot to the top right corner. Jonathan O'Connor narrowly missed the game-tying goal when his blast just missed the net.

Myles Clancy and Matt Haskins were stingy on University on Feb. 2.

A Thought For The Week

Some funeral homes regard the people they serve as clients. A few funeral homes regard the people they serve as customers. We believe such identification is a misnomer. Speaking for ourselves, we serve no clients, no customers. The people we treat them as friends.

Our friends are the most important people we know. They depend on us for service and we depend on them for friendship. Our friends are an important part of our organization. They are never outsiders. Our friends are never a statistic; they are flesh-and-blood human beings with feelings and emotions like our own. Our friends are never a number; they are individuals with individual names. They depend on us to supply their needs in critical hours and do our best to satisfy them. Our friends deserve and receive the most courteous and attentive treatment we can give them - day or night - regardless of time. We appreciate the privilege of friendship and we at Deware dedicate ourselves and services to deserve that privilege... These are not mere words. Our many, many friends know this is an established fact...

AIDS Service Directory Available

The Quincy South Shore AIDS Consortium has published a directory of services for people with HIV/AIDS.

The directory includes information on services such as counseling, health care, housing, referral and support, testing, financial information, legal assistance, pastoral care, and substance abuse treatment. The directory will be distributed to community agencies and organizations, physicians and schools as well as other businesses and individuals as requested.

The Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium began several years ago as the Quincy AIDS Consortium. It regained momentum in 1995, after the Department of Public Health awarded grants to Manet Community Health Center and Quincy Visiting Nurse Association to create testing services, to perform case management and to re-establish the Consortium.

In September 1995, the Consortium became the Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium when it expanded its service area to include the towns of Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Weymouth, Milton, Canton, Holbrook and Norwood.

The Consortium consists of representatives from 15-20 organizations in the South Shore area that meet on a regular basis to share information about services available to people with HIV/AIDS. Their mission is to reduce the rate of HIV transmission and facilitate the collaboration and expansion of HIV/AIDS services in Quincy and other South Shore communities.

To find out how to obtain a copy of the directory or if you would like more information about the Consortium itself, please contact the HIV Service Coordinator at (617) 472-2828, ext. 237.

LEO MEADY, 76, receives his ballot Tuesday at Ward 4, Precinct 2 (Quincy Elks Lodge) from poll workers Lillian Bolea and Mary Donoghue.

Dole Edges Buchanan

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Runner-up Geradine Harold Sharkey, also of Quincy, received 679 votes.

Rep. Michael Bellotti and Bernice Mader were unopposed in their bids for reelection as Democratic State Committeeman and Committeewoman.

Only 6,547 or 14.08 of Quincy's registered voters went to the polls. It meant nearly 40,000 stayed home.

Malfunctions in two computer counters caused a near two-hour delay in the start tallying the ballots. All 30 voting precinct ballots were at City Hall shortly after 8:30 but the actual counting did not start until 10 p.m. as computer replacements were twice brought in from Newton. The counting was completed at 11:45 p.m.

It was believed that the long ward committee portion of the ballots may have been part of the problem.

ABS: STUMPED OR STOMPED?

Anti-lock braking systems (ABS) is an idea that has caught on with the American public. Fifteen million of the cars on this country's roads are equipped with ABS, and half of the cars sold in the last model year had ABS. The trouble is that a recent study by the American Automobile Association shows that less than half of all drivers of ABS-equipped automobiles know how to use the system. Most drivers hold on to the old notion that the brake pedal should be pumped lightly to avoid wheel lock-up. While this braking strategy applies to stopping cars not equipped with ABS, it only serves to defeat the braking ability of ABS-equipped cars. To make ABS work, it is necessary to apply heavy pressure on the brake pedal and keep it applied. The pulsations that may be felt in the brake pedal are only an indication that the ABS is working. To keep ABS on, drivers must "stomp" on the brake pedal and hold the pressure. HINT: Drivers should not see ABS as a reason to drive more aggressively. It does not make the car stop in a shorter distance, but it helps it to hold a straight line in a panic stop.

For all your automotive needs and wants, come to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We look forward to putting our years of training experience to work for you and your vehicle. From a simple lubrication and filter change, to maintaining such complex systems as ABS, we are here for you. We are also your local source for propane for grills, motor homes and converted autos and trucks. You'll find us conveniently located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. SHOW OF SUPPORT—Sotiris Emmanuel, second from left, president of Massachusetts Heavy Industries, Inc., is confident he will reopen a section of the idle Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point to shipbuilding. He has the support of several local officials, including (from left, State Rep. Ron Mariano; Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets; and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi. Emmanuel said he has invested "several thousand dollars" of his own money to the new venture.

Asks For Council Amendment

Raymondi Seeks Permit Change To Block Beer, Wine At Supermarket

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi wants the council to reconvene as a special permit granting authority to consider amending a permit granted in 1994 to Atlantic Development of Hingham.

The permit gave the developer permission to build the Granite Crossing shopping center, which will include a Roche Bros.

Supermarket and a Wal-Mart store, near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point.

Raymondi said Tuesday he wants to amend the special permit because of a recent request from PCC Inc., a Randolph-based subsidiary of Roche Bros., for a beer and wine license at the new supermarket which is scheduled to open in the next few weeks.

Wal-Mart is scheduled to open this fall.

Raymondi has sent a request to Council President Peter Kolson to have the matter placed on the council's agenda for discussion next week. He also wants the council to set a date at that time for a public hearing which it would hold in its role as special permit granting

An Honest Man: Returns Lost $1,000

An honest clerk recently returned $1,000 in cash lost in the Hancock Parking Lot.

According to James Kelley Jr., operations manager of the city's parking facilities, a pocketbook was lost in the parking lot recently. It was discovered by Robert McDonald, the clerk on duty at the lot.

When McDonald discovered that the wallet inside the pocketbook contained about $1,000, he immediately contacted its owner.

"Robert notified the woman, who was absolutely thrilled that he had recovered her pocketbook and all its contents were intact," said Kelley. "She rewarded Mr. McDonald for his honesty, but his real reward was with himself for showing that people really can make a difference in this troubled world we all live in."

Sees Contracts For 21 Vessels Shipbuilder Hopes To Start Work On Tankers By May

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The owner and president of Massachusetts Heavy Industries in Swampscott vowed Tuesday to restore the idle Fore River Shipyard and return shipbuilding to the site.

Speaking from his office at the shipyard, Sotiris G. Emmanuel said he hopes to begin shipbuilding in May, with the first of 21 vessels ready by the end of next year.

He said his plan is to build six double-hull and double-bottom tankers with 15 more in the future and employ some 1,500 workers.

Emmanuel said he is pleased at how far he has come in a few months with only preliminary applications.

He added that he is confident in the success of his plan. As examples of his financial strength, he noted that he has already spent a "few hundred thousand dollars" of his own money and has the promise of some $20 million in loan guarantees from various banks and investors.

"Failure is not an option with me," he said.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi and state Rep. Ronald Mariano said Emmanuel's "biggest hurdle" will be approval in Washington by the U.S. Dept. of Maritime Administration (MARAD). The shipbuilder has applied for $230 million in loan guarantees from MARAD. While officials are hopeful Emmanuel's plan to begin building ships in May will become a reality, it is likely MARAD's decision on whether to grant him the money--on which the deal hinges--will not be made until later in the year.

Emmanuel has also offered $10 million to buy the shipyard from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. The offer has been accepted, although the deal must still be approved by the state Legislature.

Others speaking on Emmanuel's behalf Tuesday were Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, and Gerard Dhooge of Northeast Public Strategies.

Dhooge said Emmanuel's proposal reflects his "effort, commitment and quality of application."

Mader spoke of Emmanuel's credentials and the "substance of the man."

Mariano called Emmanuel a "passionate fighter for the shipyard and the best hope for shipbuilding."

"We have a real shot for bringing shipbuilding back to Quincy," he said.

Calling Emmanuel's plan a "serious proposal" and one that is a lot "sounder" than any other

New Tourism Consultant Named

The city now has a new tourism consultant.

Quincy 2000 announced Tuesday Jo-An Thomas of Hull has been appointed director of the Quincy Tourism and Visitors Bureau. The new position has been created to energize Quincy's tourism promotion efforts.

Mayor James Sheets said he is pleased with the appointment.

"We're thrilled," he said. "We're pleased the director is here. It's a major step forward. It means we'll clearly be able to begin working on bringing more tourists to the city and on a specific calendar of events."

"I would say the next year could be very interesting for tourism in Quincy."

Quincy 2000 Executive

JO-AN THOMAS

Director Joseph Mannarino voiced similar sentiments.

"We're fortunate to bring Jo-An's skills to Quincy," he said. "Our search attracted a terrific number of resumes from highly qualified individuals, but Jo-An's clearly stood out. She'll be a real asset to the community."

Mannarino said 50 people originally applied for the position. Ten semifinalists subsequently were interviewed, as were two finalists of whom Thomas was the unanimous choice, he said.

Thomas was interviewed by the Quincy 2000 Board of Directors Executive Committee, the Selection Committee of the Quincy Tourism and Visitor Bureau, and a third group consisting of Mannarino, Sheets, City Councillor Michael Cheney and Bernice Mader, Sheets' administrative assistant, Mannarino noted.

He added that the first year of her salary--which is "in the mid-40s"--and benefits will be paid out of "operations money" in the Quincy 2000 budget, after which she will have to

MWRA: 'Yellow' Water Not A Health Threat

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has notified residents in Quincy that several neighborhoods in the city may be experiencing incidents of "yellow" water resulting from iron discoloration.

The water discoloration results from old cast iron or steel water-mains owned by the MWRA or the city. Low levels of corrosion from the mains contribute a very dilute presence of iron in the water.

During the winter months, when demand and use are at their lowest, water often travels very slowly through both the MWRA's water distribution system, as well as through the local pipes, giving the water the opportunity to pick-up increased levels of iron.

Officials said the increased levels of iron that cause the water to become discolored are not a public health threat. Discoloration of the water can be particularly prevalent for residents who live on dead-end streets, where water may stand in the mains for many hours.

The discoloration is not unique in Quincy and several neighborhoods elsewhere in the MWRA's service area are also experiencing the discolored water.

"It is important for residents living in these areas to be aware of the possibility of discolored tap water," said William A. Brutsch, director of the MWRA Waterworks Division. "This discolored water may continue to be a problem through the cold months. Please feel free to call the MWRA if you have any questions."

For more information, call 241-6057.

Reception For Incoming College President March 19

A reception to welcome new Quincy College President Jeremiah Ryan to the area will be held Tuesday, March 19 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at The Neighborhood Club of Quincy, 27 Glendale Rd.

The event is free and open to the public. Honorary hosts will include Mayor James Sheets, Quincy College Board of Governors Chairman Daniel Raymonds, School Supt. Eugene Creedon and South Shore Chamber of Commerce President Ronald Zoolek.

The reception will include a brief program at 4:30 p.m.

JEREMIAH RYAN

Ryan, 46, was named the new permanent president of Quincy College by the school's Board of Governors Feb. 5. He is to assume the presidency Monday, March 18 and inaugural plans are underway for October.

Most recently, Ryan served as vice president for marketing, planning and development at Harford Community College in Bel Air, Md. He was chosen for his new position from a field that originally included 92 candidates.

Ryan has said his goals for the college include developing fund-raising, streamlining student registrations, providing more space for classes and increasing the technological capabilities of the institution.

Quincy College has more than 5,000 students at its campuses in Quincy and Plymouth.

After Snow Delay Senior Van Rolls

AMONG THE MANY residents who took advantage of the new Van About Town senior shuttle service Monday was Josephine Gray of 100 Granite St. who is being assisted here at Shaw's Supermarket by van driver Steven Buccella of WORK Inc. The service picks up residents at senior citizens' complexes and provides round-trip transportation to several destinations including supermarkets and medical offices.

VAN ABOUT TOWN, the new shuttle van service for senior citizens being operated by Quincy Transportation Inc., a non-profit organization, was launched Monday at a ribbon-cutting ceremony. From left are Hank Cheney, executive director of WORK Inc. which is providing the vans and drivers for the service; D.J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development of Hingham, developer of the Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point which is providing $60,000 to help fund the service; Mayor James Sheets, Hancock Tobacco owner Joseph McArdle, City Councillor Michael Cheney, chairman of the Quincy Transportation Inc. Sheets: 'We'll Be OK'

Snow, Ice Removal Costs Reach $1.7M

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The city has spent $1.7 million for snow and ice removal this winter, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said Tuesday the city's free cash (cash reserve) account will be used to cover about $1.1 million of the cost. The balance will be funded by Quincy's annual municipal budget and state and federal aid, he added. "It's going to be tight, but we'll be (financially) OK," he said.

Sheets said the city currently has about $2.3 million in the free cash account, although some of that is earmarked for employee overtime and other expenditures.

In addition to free cash, the mayor said the city has the $300,000 it annually sets aside for snow and ice removal as well as $175,000 in state aid and $147,000 in Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) aid. The state total could increase by as much as another $80,000 because of the amount of snow Quincy has received, although that is not definite at this point, he noted.

Two years ago, during what was then the snowiest winter on record, the city received only $85,000 in state aid and no FEMA aid, according to Sheets. The FEMA aid this year was triggered automatically when President Clinton declared a snow emergency in the region during the Blizzard of '96 (Jan. 7-8), he said. Quincy meteorologist Rob Gilman said the city received about 15 inches of snow last week, bringing the season total to 112.1 inches. That number by far tops the record amount of 93 inches set during the winter of 1993-94, he noted.

Quincy Groups Preparing For Hunger Walk

Community, religious and school groups in Quincy are currently organizing teams to participate in Project Bread's 27th annual Walk for Hunger Sunday, May 5. Pledges raised by walkers help support soup kitchens, food pantries and homeless shelter meal programs that provide emergency meals to people most at risk in Massachusetts: children, the elderly, the disabled, the recently unemployed and the working poor.

Joseph Finn, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, said the hunger problem is growing.

"There is an increased use of our shelter and other local pantries," said Finn. "The Walk for Hunger is our primary source of funding for the feeding program."

The Walk for Hunger is the nation's largest annual one-day fundraiser to alleviate local hunger. The 20-mile walk begins and ends at Boston Common, and winds its way through Boston, Brookline, Newton and Cambridge. It includes a wide variety of entertainment along the route and donated snacks at the half-way point. Bus service back to Boston Common is available to participants who choose to walk fewer than 20 miles.

Registration will take place Sunday, May 5, from 7 to 9 a.m. at the Boston Common. The MBTA will offer free rides to Walkers between 6 and 9 a.m. on any subway, bus or commuter train.

Project Bread is a non-profit community organization dedicated to alleviating, preventing and ending hunger in Massachusetts. For more information, call 723-5000.

EATING AWAY AT CANCER

No one yet has found a "magic bullet" pill to stop cancer, but it is good to know that evidence continues to mount that certain dietary practices can go a long way toward decreasing a person's risk of getting the disease. For example, the Journal of the National Cancer Institute has reported that a study of more than 2,000 women in Greece supports what other researchers have been concluding: Eating lots of fruits and vegetables and using olive oil in place of other fats can protect against breast cancer. The women in the Greek study who ate the most vegetables, fruits, and olive oil lowered their breast cancer rate by nearly 50 percent. So pass the pasta, pile on the vegetables and toss it all in olive oil! P.S. A low-fat diet has been found to cut the risk of several cancers, including breast and colon cancer.

Voting A Better Way

If City Clerk Joseph Shea has his way, you will be using the latest thing in voting machine technology when you go to the polls in the state and Presidential elections this fall.

And you will get the results a lot faster without the computer foul-ups that the present punch-card method runs into as it did last week in the Presidential Primaries.

Last week's experience was the last straw for Shea as far as the present equipment is concerned.

And he had plenty of last-straw company--election workers, police and press--who cooled their heels until just before midnight before the final ballots were counted.

There were only 6,547 votes to be counted--only 14.08 percent of the 46,486 registered voters turned out. The polls closed at 8 p.m. as usual. But the counting didn't get started until 10 p.m.--two hours later--because of computer snafus. The tally was finally completed at 11:45 p.m.

Shea had expected to have it all wrapped up by 9:15 or 9:30. So did the 60 precinct wardens and clerks who had to stay until their present ballot boxes were counted. So did the 40-man police detail. So did the press trying to get the results.

All 30 precinct ballot boxes were delivered to City Hall by 8:30. And there they sat on the council chamber floor while the computer reader and printer whirled briefly and conked out.

A call to Newton brought in a replacement after a wait. But that didn't work. A second call to Newton brought in a second replacement after another wait. Finally, at 10 p.m., to cheers from the frustrated on-lookers, the counting finally began and with the computer struggling here and there it was all finally completed two hours later.

Quincy had to be one of the last to be heard from with the results last week.

But all that will change, says Shea. He has his eye on an "optical scan voting" system similar to equipment used by the Massachusetts State Lottery.

Known as the Optic III-P Eagle, it was demonstrated last December by Business Record Corp., a national firm based in Texas.

Shea wants 33 of the machines--30 for the 30 voting precincts and three as back-ups. Estimated cost is between $160,000 and $167,000.

He is asking Mayor James Sheets to send an appropriation order to the City Council.

"This is state of the art equipment," says Shea. "And it will pay for itself within three years."

Last week's election cost the city about $36,000. Some $4,000 of that was due to the computer malfunction delays.

The optic scan system--in which the voter links the names of the candidate and office by pen--is being used in something like 85 Massachusetts communities, including neighboring Braintree and Hingham.

In a recent election in Springfield which has 64 voting precincts--twice as many as Quincy--the count was completed so quickly that everyone was out of City Hall by 9:02 p.m.

The system also has auxiliary battery power in case of an outage. And an alarm that warns voters if they have accidentally voted for too many candidates for one office.

These "over voted" ballots are quickly removed and the voter gets a chance to vote again instead of having his ballot invalidated.

Besides that, says Shea, a technician spends election day here to solve any technical programs should they pop up. No sending to Newton or anywhere else for replacements.

So, time marches on. And, apparently, progress, too.

The present punch-card system has been used here since 1986, and was hailed back then as taking Quincy out of the election counting dinosaur age.

And it did, ending all-night sessions counting paper ballots by hand--sometimes into 8 and 9 a.m. the following morning.

The system, the cat's meow of the day, was brought in by Mayor Frank McCauley at the request of then City Clerk John Gillis.

But technology marches on and Shea, who succeeded Gillis as city clerk, think it's time for Quincy to again march along with it.

All of those people who had to wait around City Hall last week up to just before midnight will second that motion.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD postcard view of the original Atlantic Methodist Episcopal Church building on the corner of Hunt St. and Newbury Ave. Built in 1894, this building was replaced by a stone church around the corner on East Squantum St. which was recently converted to residential apartments. The building in the left background with the distinctive steeple was the original eight room wooden Quincy Grammar School on East Squantum St. Built in 1873 on the site of today's North Quincy High, it was replaced in 1906 by the brick building on Newbury Ave. which is now residential condominiums.

READERS FORUM

Let The Voices Of The People Be Heard

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Gag order was the term that came to mind when observing the summary dismissal by the City Council of a proposal proffered by Councillor Dan Raymond for a 15-minute open forum before each City Council meeting. (A similar format has been in place for School Committee meetings.) Whether it is in this format or not, the idea of a regular open forum for the public with the collective City Council merits further discussion.

Although there are admittedly, other opportunities for the public to address particular issues, i.e., public hearings regarding specific proposals before the council or various boards, individual letters, telephone calls, etc., the opportunity to bring forth ideas and concerns in a collective forum is limited.

As I sat in the Council Chambers, the evening the proposal was debated, some of the critical comments offered conjured up images of the citizenry as children who could be seen but should not be heard.

My less-than-scientific polling would suggest public seems to strongly favor the proposal of an open forum.

A truly democratic government cannot have enough of activity which encourages the free and open discussion of individual ideas and stimulates individual exertion. The problems arise, when in place of this activity, this communal exchange, government substitutes its own activity.

The value of a government of the people is the worth of each and every individual. It will fail its fiduciary responsibility, when in the name of efficiency, it ignores that from which it derives its power, the voice of the people. True representational government is not a pedantocracy.

Too many of the public feel distanced and disenfranchised from government whether it's Capital Hill, Beacon Hill, or City Hall. Unless people feel they can affect policy and no one person or one body politic can dominate it, and unless there is a routine forum for give and take, for discussion and debate, true freedom cannot be sustained.

The inability or unwillingness to not only allow but encourage regular open forums proliferates intellectual pacification, individual apathy and ignorance. A recently conducted survey, highlighted in the media revealed a startlingly high percentage of ignorance among the general voting eligible population on questions about government and those who hold office. A true democracy cannot long survive pernicious pervasive ignorance of the masses.

As for those who would suggest that City Council meetings are like board of director meetings and therefore not conducive to a 15-minutes open public forum, let us not forget that government is not a private business except for those who are in it for their own self-aggrandizement. Let us also not forget that business may be about products and profits, but government is about people and policies. Business is autocratic and government is democratic. People are the servants of business but government is the servant of the people. And while business must be efficient, as Harry Truman pointed out in 1959, government is not.

If a 15-minutes forum before each meeting with specific parameters regarding the number of speakers, length of presentation and subject matter would not be deemed sufficiently productive, perhaps a regular scheduled monthly meeting open forum, say for example, the second Tuesday of each month circulated among the various neighborhood centers, as well as at City Hall, might make sense. An old-style town meeting, if you will. Such an open forum was recently held at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, sponsored by the QCA.

As we consider the investment of public money into the rejuvenation of the City Council chambers, let us not forget that true representational government is of the people, for the people, and by the people. As we spruce up City Hall, let's open the windows and doors and let the voices of the people be heard.

Community's Generosity Saved Shelter From 'Near Disaster'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Last fall, the hot water heater at Father Bill's Place unexpectedly died. The shelter, which shelters and feeds nearly 80 people a day, found itself without hot water.

There was no hot water for showers, dishwashing, or linens. The projected costs were over $18,000 for the new 200-gallon tank that had to be specially constructed. Near disaster turned into another testimony of good will and spirit of people within the community toward the neediest of our population.

The short-term crisis was to get sufficient hot water to do linens and wash dishes. That crisis was met by Massachusetts Electric Company with a temporary electric hot water system they donated for this purpose. After that, the tremendous cost associated with the equipment was met by generous donations from Raytheon, and emergency grant from Citizen's Energy and a major grant from Charlesbank Homes.

The clients and staff are overwhelmed by the generosity of the community. Without these donations, there would have been a negative impact on our service delivery.

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

The Quincy Adams Restaurant A Good Meal, A Fair Price And A Little History

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

Quincy is a city with a rich historical heritage. It is one of the select few cities in America that lays claim to being the birthplace of a president. Two of them, in fact.

Pat Fallon, owner of Quincy Adams Restaurant—located at 62 Sumner St. in Quincy—is very much aware of this historical heritage. He named his restaurant after the Adams' family, and he has decorated his menus with illustrations of John Adams, the Adams' Birthplace and United First Parish Church—where both John and John Quincy Adams are buried.

"There aren't too many cities that are the birthplace of two presidents," said Fallon. "It's interesting to see those landmarks, and customers enjoy the 'Quincy connection' in the menus."

Fallon, who is originally from Roscommon, Ireland, opened the Quincy Adams Restaurant about 3 1/2 years ago. Before that, he owned and operated the Ashmont Grill in Dorchester for 22 years. He had lived in Quincy since 1963 before moving to Milton a few years ago. So he knows the city and what people want in a restaurant.

"We are a more laid-back place, not so much hustle and bustle," said Fallon. "The location is a bit out of the way, but it is in a good neighborhood, and people see it as a quieter, neighborhood-type place that is more comfortable."

Formerly Mr. Kelly's for 27 years, the Quincy Adams Restaurant has been completely done over—"A challenge and a half," according to Fallon—and features a whole new bar and barroom as well as a remodeled dining room and new menu.

The restaurant has a cozy feel to it, with soft lighting and a club-type atmosphere. On the wall are prints of Quincy and Boston monuments to accompany the illustrations within the menus.

Speaking of the menus, the Quincy Adams Restaurant has expanded theirs, and now offers a wide range of lunch and dinner selections as well as a variety of roasts on Sundays prepared by chef James Healy.

"On Sundays we offer a roast menu along with our full dinner menu. We have five different roasts—leg of lamb, pork, beef, turkey and loin—as well as baked ham and baked Boston scrod," said Fallon.

What sets the Adams Restaurant apart from other neighborhood-type places? According to Fallon, it is that varied menu, including prime rib, Italian food and seafood. "Not too many restaurants offers prime rib for as low a price as we do. We have a prime rib lunch special for $6.95 some days and a prime rib dinner special for $11.95.

"And almost all of our lunches are under $6 and our dinner entrees are under $10. Lower prices are very important to customers, and so is good service and food. People in Quincy seem to be very conscious of getting a decent price, so you have to try and cater to your customers," said Pat.

According to Fallon, it was a process of rebuilding from the ground up—expanding menus, offering more specials, and trying to lower the prices. The work has paid off.

"People come in, have a good lunch or dinner at a good price, and they come back. We have customers who come in from the neighborhood as well as some of the people who used to eat at my old place [the Ashmont Grill]. It has become very much a neighborhood place, and that wasn't the case in the beginning," said Fallon.

As for entertainment, Pat points to the jukebox and the four televisions in the bar. "We have Keno, too. We're a neighborhood kind of place, and we don't really need a lot of entertainment. We're a place to have a good meal in a quiet setting at a good price."

And as for St. Patrick's Day—which falls on a Sunday this year—Fallon has nothing special planned. "Sunday is our busiest day of the week, anyway; we're filled up by 1 and people are waiting in line."

The laid-back atmosphere of the Adams Restaurant has made it an ideal place for elderly customers and families, according to Fallon. "At lunchtime during the week, we get a lot of elderly customers who like the idea that we have good food at low prices and a quieter atmosphere. And we get a lot of families for dinner and take-out at night," said Fallon.

Take-out is becoming a very good cottage industry for the Quincy Adams Restaurant. "A lot of neighborhood people in the area get take-out from us because they know how busy we get. It has become a big part of our business, and it keeps us on our toes with all the orders."

Any expansion plans? No, says Fallon, who believes the Quincy Adams Restaurant is the last stop on his restaurant odyssey. "I spent 22 years in Dorchester and I enjoyed my time there a lot. I thought I had it out of my system, but after I retired I found out I couldn't stay home—and I still had two kids in college [Fallon and his wife, Ann, have four children—two boys and two girls]—so I have to keep it up."

"This is definitely my last stop, though. When this is over, I'll retire and head down to Cape Cod. I'm too old to make this place any bigger—35 years in this business is a long enough time," said Fallon.

The Quincy Adams Restaurant is located at 62 Sumner St. in Quincy (behind Baxter's Pharmacy) and is open 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday and Sundays from 12-10 p.m. They offer a take-out menu and can be reached at 472-1900.

So for a good meal at a good price look up the restaurant named for Quincy's most famous residents. And maybe you can bone up on your Quincy history while you're dining at the Quincy Adams Restaurant.

Kickoff Held For MBTA Railroad Safety Program

Patrick J. Moynihan, general manager of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, recently announced the official kickoff of the MBTA's railroad safety education program during a ceremony at the Quincy Fire Training Center.

The program is being held in anticipation of the reopening of the Plymouth and Middleborough branches of the Old Colony Railroad in December. Moynihan awarded certificates of completion to 54 graduates of an MBTA-sponsored course in the nationally-recognized Operation Lifesaver program.

"Trains have not run on the Old Colony since 1959, and so the Operation Lifesaver training program will provide the community with trained individuals who can spread the word about railroad safety to elementary and high school students, as well as adults," he said.

Prior to the event, state Secretary of Transportation James J. Kerasiotes said,

"It only makes sense to invest in a program like this. Operation Lifesaver has a proven track record for reducing collisions at highway rail grade crossings and increasing public awareness about the dangers of trespassing along the right of way. We are glad to have the assistance of so many police, fire, and other safety officials in this public education effort."

Randall Dickinson and Larry Hasvold of the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) were present at the event, and were involved in the training program, dealing with trespasser and crosser safety. Chris Schulte, also with the FRA, served as an Operation Lifesaver trainer.

Mayor James Sheets assisted in the kickoff ceremony and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman hosted the event.

Beth Boardman, state coordinator for Operation Lifesaver, who also works for the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction (EOTC) and Bill Hallene from the Providence and Worcester Railroad Company worked with the MBTA's Old Colony Communications Office in Braintree since November to coordinate six training sessions for the Old Colony/Operation Lifesaver presenters.

Officials from Quincy and 17 other communities were among the participants who received certificates.

The MBTA's goal is to reach all 265 schools in the Old Colony Project area by December, and the program has already been announced to each school. The MBTA is providing training and safety education materials for use by certified presenters of the Operation Lifesaver program in the South Shore project area.

For more information, call 222-3074.

Raymondi Seeks Permit Change To Block Beer, Wine At Supermarket

authority.

The City Council, in granting the 1994 permit, ruled that the proposed use of the Quincy Point site would be "not detrimental" to the surrounding neighborhood. Raymondi said the new request for a beer and wine license may change that.

"Some of the facts the City Council found in 1994 may not be facts today," he said. "I don't know that the special permit granting authority would find that a liquor license would be appropriate for this site."

The request for the liquor license at press time was pending before the License Board which was scheduled to discuss the issue yesterday (Wednesday).

Raymondi said he planned to present information to the board that would help his argument against the license, although he would not elaborate.

The request has already run into opposition, including that of former Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, at a previous License Board meeting.

Raymondi said he hopes the special permit can be amended whether or not the board grants the license. There are already enough package stores and "pouring establishments" in that area, he said, and therefore there is no need for another.

He added that amending the special permit to exclude the sale of alcohol at the Granite Crossing shopping center will also send a message to other businesses to be "up front" about their intentions to seek liquor licenses. Raymondi said he is convinced those requesting the beer and wine license must have known about their desire to sell alcohol in 1994, although no such request was made at that time.

Last week, Raymondi introduced a city ordinance amendment stating that any business that requests a special permit must wait at least two years for a liquor license if such a license is not part of the original permit request. That matter is currently pending before the City Council.

How Population Density Impacts Property Values

By ART FOLEY

The following statistics are the average selling prices for single-family homes in 1995 in the respective areas with the number of sales for each.

I've also included the population, density and tax rates of each community. See chart accompanying story.

While it is always dangerous to draw conclusions from raw statistics, it is interesting to note that the communities with lower population density seem to have the higher property values. The exception is Weymouth but it is that much further from the employment center, Boston, than the other communities. Tax rate doesn't seem to have much correlation; with the Milton rate by far the highest yet, their property values are considerably higher.

Some conclusions? People are willing to pay property taxes for services if it enhances their quality of life.

The lower the density, the higher the property values. An oversimplification: maybe in Quincy they built smaller, lower-priced homes for first-time homebuyers. One thing about Quincy is most of our children can grow up and afford to buy their first home in the community.

Realtors Assn. To Hold Conference, Trade Fair

The South Shore Association of Realtors will hold its 1996 Business/Education Conference and Trade Fair Thursday, June 13 at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The event will provide an opportunity for individuals to meet and market their services or products to those directly involved in the real estate industry on the South Shore and in the surrounding Boston area.

Participants should understand that the background and interests of Association members are not limited to the real estate market and are reflected by the diversity of the group's marketing needs.

Exhibitors will be offered the same pricing offered to participants in 1990 when more than 300 people attended. Cost is $350 which includes luncheon and refreshment breaks for two.

Booth assignments will be made on a first-come, first-serve basis. Participants should send in their application forms and checks no later March 30.

To obtain an application form or for more information, call 773-0770.

DANIEL J. FLYNN & CO. Inc. Commercial Real Estate of Quincy recently sold this Hibernia Savings Bank property at 222 North St., Hingham, for a price of $389,000.

Flynn & Co. Sells Downtown Hingham Commercial Building

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc. Commercial Real Estate represented Hibernia Savings Bank in the recent sale of their property at 222 North St., Hingham, to Douglas J. McCaig for $389,000.

The two-story retail and office building has almost 10,000 square feet of space and is close to the central business district and waterfront. Jay Nuss, senior vice president of Flynn & Co., handled the negotiations. Daniel J. Flynn III listed the property with Hibernia Savings Bank, Quincy.

The amount of activity we had on this property still shows that location is a driving factor in real estate sales," said Dan Flynn, president of The Flynn company. "Hingham, being a very desirable locale, and the fact that the property is in a high visibility, high traffic location were key factors in marketing efforts and attracting prospective buyers to the property."

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., located in the Heritage Building, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy Center, is a commercial real estate and auction firm with offices also in Springfield and Hyannis. For more information, call 479-9000.

Floodplain Management Presentation March 26

The City of Quincy and the Town of Braintree will co-sponsor a presentation on floodplain management topics for community residents Tuesday, March 26 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Braintree Town Hall, One JFK Memorial Drive, Braintree.

Quincy and Braintree participate in a voluntary program called the Community Rating System. By performing activities that raise awareness about flooding and improve local floodplain management, Quincy and Braintree municipal officials have enabled property owners who carry flood insurance to receive a discount on their yearly premiums.

The presentation is designed to help Quincy and Braintree residents maintain their rating status in the program and will provide additional information and assistance on floodplain management issues to residents.

State and local officials will be presenting information on flood insurance (coverage limits and purchase requirements), flood hazard mapping, floodplain construction regulations, and local flood protection systems.

KRISTEN MANCHESTER (center) of Quincy Hospital recently participated in a regional corporate kickoff luncheon for the American Cancer Society's annual Daffodil Days fund-raiser. Joining her were Kay Miara of Braintree Medical Associates and Dr. Jack Evjy, president-elect of the Cancer Society.

Squantum Point Park Receives $3,000 For 'Wild Work' Project

The Department of Environmental Management (DEM) has awarded a $3,000 Coastal Access Small Grant award to the non-profit group, Outdoor Exploration, announce state Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Belotti.

Outdoor Exploration, in cooperation with numerous partners, will use the money to conduct a one-day "Wild Work" project at Quincy's 78-acre MDC-owned Squantum Point Park.

The organization helps unite people with various abilities to go on outdoor excursions and environmental projects.

Statewide, a total of $64,500 was set aside for the project and out of 26 applicants, 22 different groups received awards. This is the second year funds have been made available to directly support and promote public coastal access on a local and regional level.

Squantum Point Park currently lacks appropriate signage and facilities and suffers from illegal dumping. The Coastal Access grant will support planning, production of brochures, recruitment of up to 50 people both with or without disabilities, development of a short promotion video and three projects based upon a master plan such as cleaning the coastline of rubbish, erecting signage and an informational kiosk.

The Coastal Access

Small Grants Program is part of the DEM's Coastal Access Program. The program is designed to initiate and acquire coastal pathways, as directed by Section 4, Chapter 176 of the Acts of 1991. The goal of the law is to acquire legal rights-of-way along intertidal zone for the public to walk during daylight hours.

Nearly every coastal state has a version of the law and has safe public access to the coastline.

D'Amico Neighborhood Crime Watch Meeting

Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico will conduct a Neighborhood Crime Watch meeting Wednesday, March 20 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

D'Amico will be joined by Quincy Police Officer Robert Hanna for what he said will be a continuing dialogue with residents on the issue of public safety.

"I think an active Neighborhood Crime Watch is imperative," said D'Amico. "It is very important that residents unite and take a solid stand against lawbreakers."

D'Amico added that since taking office, he has worked with the Quincy Police Department to increase foot patrols and crime prevention efforts in the Brewer's Corner area and throughout the ward.

Quincy Silver Bullets Are Special Champions

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

The beauty of the game of basketball is that all it takes to play is a ball and a basket. Unlike football or baseball, you don't need a lot of equipment of eight other players to make a team. And the best part about the game is that anyone can play. Man, woman, child—it doesn't matter. All you need is a ball and a basket.

Bill Ketchen, a teacher in Mission Hill, knows just how universal the game of basketball is. He knows firsthand that anyone can play. You see, Ketchen coaches—along with his assistant, Mark Lomansey (of Quincy)—the Quincy Silver Bullets basketball team. His team does it all: They play defense that would make John Chaney proud, rebound like Wilt Chamberlain and Bill Russell combined, and run the fast break like the Showtime Lakers of the '80s.

The Bullets do all of the above so well, in fact, that they are the defending state champions—Massachusetts Special Olympics State Champions—with every intention of repeating.

The Bullets are actually called the TILL (Toward Independent Living & Learning) Silver Bullets. The team is made of players from 18 to 31 who have used the TILL program to become independent—and who love the game of basketball.

Ketchen explains: "When special needs kids go through schools [like Cardinal Cushing or St. Colletta's], they learn as much as they can. But according to the state, they lose their funding for schools at age 22. Where do they go? Do they have the skills to be independent and provide for themselves? That's where TILL steps in."

TILL is a private non-profit organization that helps disabled people lead normal lives in the community, according to Ketchen. "Basketball—and recreation in general—teaches teamwork and learning to work with others, which are skills that we want to teach these kids. What they learn on the courts and the playing field can be put to use in everyday life," said Ketchen.

Using the basketball court as a classroom is not a new concept by any means—every good coach does it. Most coaches, however, would give a great deal to have the enthusiasm and spirit of the Bullets.

Quincy Youth Baseball League Seeking Coaches

The International League of Quincy Youth Baseball is looking for coaches for the 1996 season. The league is for boys ages 13-15.

For more information and/or registration, contact Jack McCue, president of Quincy Youth

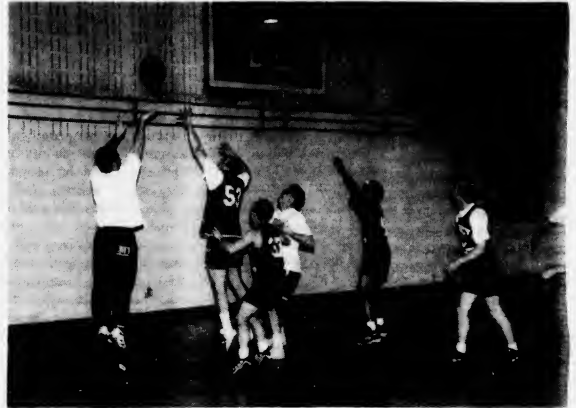

As 28-year-old Mark Smith, a forward who bears more than a passing resemblance to Charles Barkley, puts it, "We want to win every game. We practice hard every week, and we want to be state champs again."

That enthusiasm was on display Feb. 3 at the annual Milton Academy Tournament, which the Bullets have won three straight years. While the other teams were sitting in the cafeteria awaiting their games, the Bullets were running plays and scrimmaging in the gym, getting ready for their game with arch-rival Cardinal Cushing Academy.

"The games are a great tool for us. The players can focus their energy and work together—and it lets them see that they can be successful at something that they work at," said Ketchen.

That success breeds a desire to keep working, which is why the Bullets are the defending state champs. "It's something that we look forward to every week," said John "Elvis" Fabello, who at 31 is one of the Bullets' elder statesmen. "I don't think I've ever missed a game. It keeps me young."

The Bullets have two squads—a varsity and junior varsity squad—and play a 25-game season from December to April. All 24 players have either a part-time or full-time job, yet nearly every one makes every game. And so do the "Bullets," the team's cheerleading squad coached by Dierdre Hennessey.

The teams have a total of 14 Quincy residents on their rosters, including a brother-sister combo, Robbie (varsity) and Alice O'Keefe (J.V.). The others are: on the varsity—Fabello, Smith, Stephen Kearns and John Weltman; on the junior varsity—Jim Gillis, Ricky Fry, Kevin Hanley, Donald Keene, and John Mattson. And three cheerleaders: Cathy McDonald, Elaine McKeon and Erin Riley. All the other players are from the South Shore.

"These kids are really dedicated. They make an effort to make every practice and game. They're never late to a game, practice or more importantly—their jobs. The commitment to the team shows in their everyday lives," said Bill.

Most of the players live either in group homes or with their parents. Some, like John Fabello, are almost totally independent and live on their own.

For Ketchen, it's not

about winning and losing. It's about seeing his players do well and become a family. "The best part about this team is that everybody sticks together, on and off the court. They all cheer for another and keep in touch."

The program has been very successful. Even after expanding to two teams, there is still a waiting list of players who would like to join the teams.

Unfortunately, one of the problems for the Bullets—and programs like them—is that funding is not always readily available to sponsor them. The Bullets are responsible for raising all the necessary funds to keep the program going. They try and raise money anyway they can, whether it's by sponsoring TILL dances, fund-raisers or selling bumper stickers.

But none of that matters to Ketchen or his players when they play. "I've been coaching for 11 years, and these players will never let me quit. Their excitement and enthusiasm is contagious.

"These are the best kids in the world. I'm proud of them, they're proud of themselves, and the city of Quincy should be proud, too," said Ketchen.

The Bullets play their home games at the Lincoln Hancock School gymnasium. Last season, they went 9-0 at home and posted a 24-3 record overall. They have home games every Friday at 7 p.m. and will be defending their title at the 1996 Massachusetts Special Olympic Spring Games beginning April 20.

So far this season, the Bullets are 9-1. This past weekend (March 8-11) they swept teams from Peabody, Norwood and Springfield at a tournament in Worcester in pursuit of another state title.

If you or someone you know would like to help sponsor or assist the Silver Bullets, contact Program Director Billy Ketchen at TILL at 1-800-696-6150, ext. 713, and leave a message.

Former Basketball Great George Burke Calls Minutemen A Team Of Destiny 'UMass Has The Horses To Go All The Way'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Forty years ago, the men's varsity basketball team from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst was "assured" of the school's first-ever post-season tournament berth if they defeated the University of Connecticut in the regular season finale.

They did win, 87-85, with the help of a local ballplayer, Quincy's George Burke, who poured in 21 points.

But after the victory, Burke and the rest of the team were told they would be staying home. UConn, which had a higher win percentage thanks to three victories over Yankee Conference dormat Vermont, was tournament-bound instead.

"That was a great big disappointment," Burke recalled this week.

Four decades later, that tournament snub can be corrected immeasurably if UMass can ride their number-one regular season finish to the Div. I championship.

And that's precisely what Burke, one of the Minutemen's biggest boosters, is hoping for.

"UMass ended up the number one team in the country. They've got the team to do it this year. Do they have the horses? Yes they do. They've had a great year, they've got a great team and they've got a great destiny," Burke said on the eve of "March Madness."

Burke, a hardwood wizard for UMass in the mid-1950s, knows a thing or two about basketball and the program in Amherst.

Nicknamed "Trigger" for his shooting prowess and deft ballhandling, the star guard held school records for points and assists until NBA Hall of Famer "Dr. J" Julius Erving broke them 20 years later. But Burke, who still holds the highest scoring average for point guards (17.3 ppg) in UMass history, is perhaps the authority on this year's team.

Burke, a former city councillor and district attorney who played for the Celtics as a rookie, travels to Amherst to watch every home game, and for the past several years he's joined the team on the tournament road. The well-known Quincy attorney has even served as an assistant coach to close personal friend John Calipari, the man credited with turning UMass into a national power.

As the number one seed in the 64-team tournament field, UMass is expected to make some serious noise. The team has already left its mark on the Bay State's basketball scene.

"This is the best (men's collegiate) team in Massachusetts history. We're number one in the final rankings and no team in Massachusetts has ever done that. We're the only team with 30 wins (31-1) in the state's history."

"This is just fabulous," Burke beamed. "It thrills me to no end. It's been a truly amazing season."

Many area college basketball fans (sorry, BC alumni) are hoping UMass and UConn (top seed in the Southeast region) meet on Championship Monday, April 1 at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J.

Burke calls that a "dream match-up."

While helping to put UMass on the hoop map, Burke, albeit indirectly, has had a hand in the Huskies' success.

"After (UConn coach) Jim Calhoun graduated from Braintree High School, he asked me if he could play for me," Burke explained. "I was a player-coach in a semi-pro league in Quincy. He played two years for me in that league, and also played for me in the YMCA summer league at the old Coddington St. courts.

"Jim was a good shooter and a great passer and I encouraged him to go to college. That's how he ended up going to college."

Without Burke's encouragement, it's conceivable Calhoun may have never made it to the UConn sideline.

But this post-season, Burke's eyes are focused squarely on the Minutemen. To win the coveted NCAA crown, UMass must win six straight games. It opens with Central Florida, considered the weakest in the field with an 11-18 record, today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. UMass would then play the winner of the Bradley/Stanford game Saturday around 12:10 (TV determining tip-off.) UMass defeated Stanford in last year's tournament.

Burke, who will travel with UMass along the road to the "Final Four," said the team to beat in the East region is Georgetown, seeded second.

"They have a tremendous team and they've got a great coach (John Thompson)," Burke said scouting the Hoyas. "Both UMass and Georgetown play great team defense."

Whether this team can deliver a championship to our state university depends on two things, Burke said: intensity and defense.

"I think the key for UMass is to play with intensity. When UMass plays with intensity and plays great team defense, they can beat any team in the country," he said.

Another factor will be star center Marcus Camby, one of the best players in the country. Burke noted UMass, which won its fifth straight Atlantic 10 Conference on Saturday, has been winning despite Camby's off shooting.

"If he (Camby) can play great defense and block shots like he has, I think we can advance in the region and hopefully go all the way."

It would be redemption, for Burke, 40 years later.

Pee Wee A's Finish With Wins

The Quincy Pee Wee "A" squad, sponsored by the Quincy Elks, finished its season with two straight wins.

The first game was a 7-1 romp over Mid-State. Quincy was led by Frank Currier, who scored two goals and had an assist, while teammates Charlie Sorrento and David Germain each had a goal and an assist.

Mark Griese, Shawn Richardson and Steve McGonagle rounded out the scoring, getting one apiece. Jim Cashins had a pair of assists and Ryan Doyle and Dan Kennedy contributed one each.

Matt Gregory played a strong game in the win, while the defensive trio of Stephen Goff, Paul Campbell and Domenic Papile kept Mid-State at bay the whole game.

Dan Kennedy's hat trick led the way for the Pee Wees in the second game, a 6-4 win over Framingham. Kennedy scored the game-winner in the third period to put the A's over the top. Teammates Ryan Doyle and David Germain scored goals as well, with Doyle adding an assist.

Jordan Virtue and Mark Gibbons also played well in the Quincy victory.

Pee Wee C's Second At State Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association's Pee Wee "C" team rolled to the finals of the Massachusetts State Hockey Tournament before bowing to a tough Medford team 3-1 in the championship game.

The first four games of the tournament featured a round robin format to determine the north/south regional champions. The winner of that game would go on to face the winner of the east/west regional in the championship finals.

Quincy's first game was a 12-1 drubbing of Duxbury. Brian Scott led the offensive outburst with a hat trick, while Paul Zenga scored twice and had two assists. Teammate Jon Paquette earned "Playmaker" honors with his three assists, and Martin McGrath and Pat Mullen had a goal and two assists apiece.

Rounding out the goal scoring were Pat Lahar, Chopper Walsh (one assist), Jim Mateu, Kevin Patten and Matt Miller. Contributing assists were Peter Turowski, Dan Jones, Kris Farr and Joe Callahan.

Quincy squared off against Woburn in the second game, a 7-0 victory led by Zenga's two goals and a pair of assists by McGrath. Jones (one assist), Mullen (one assist), Paquette, Patten and Turowski (one assist) all had solo tallies, with Scott and Callahan notching assists.

Next up was a chippy and aggressive Falmouth squad, a penalty-filled game that saw Quincy prevail 8-0. The front line of Paquette (four goals and an assist), Lahar (two goals and an assist) and McGrath (two assists) accounted for 10 total points, with Zenga and Scott lighting the lamp for solo goals. Mateu and Farr had two assists each, and Jones and Patten each notched one assist apiece.

The north/south regional game pitted Quincy against a tough and experienced Medford C-2 team. But thanks to a three-point game by Paquette (one goal and two assists) and the trio of McGrath (one assist), Scott and Turowski—who each scored two goals—Quincy rolled to a 7-1 win. Farr, Jones and Lahar had two assists apiece, with Zenga contributing one assist in the win.

Quincy then advanced to tourney championship game against a very tough Medford C-1 team, dropping a hard-fought 3-1 decision. Brian Scott's unassisted tally was the only goals for the QYHA Pee Wees.

Throughout the tourney, goaltender John Mooney was spectacular between the pipes, allowing just five goals in five games, including a pair of shut-outs, keeping his team in the championship game right up to the end.

Quincy's defense deserves special mention as well, led by Bill Barrus, Joe Callahan, Jim Mateu, Kevin Patten, Kris Farr and Matt Miller. Their great play limited their opponents to just a goal a game and helped the offense control the puck.

The Pee Wee C coaches would also like to recognize the contributions of defenseman Jill McInnis and back-up goalie Tom Shruhan, both of whom were important parts of the team's success. Despite being injured for the tourney, Jill's strong playing helped her team to a strong start, and Tom was a positive influence both on the ice and in the locker room.

Coaches John Nee and Jack McInnis also deserve special congratulations for molding the players into true winners and competitors.

The Pee Wee C's continue their season in the Hyde Park Youth Hockey Invitational Tournament, being held this weekend, March 15-17.

Mite House

Lydon Doubles Paul Harold Club

The Faherty combo—Mike and Tobin—sparked Lydon Russell to a 4-2 win over the Paul Harold Club in Mite division action. Mike Faherty scored two goals to lead Lydon, with teammates Bob Newcomb and Matt Tobin added a goal apiece. Dan Giannotti contributed a pair of assists, while Tobin Faherty and Jeff Bailey added one each.

Mike Lohnes and Glenn Gibbons scored one goal each for the Harold Club in the loss, with Jimmy Fitzpatrick contributing a pair of assists and Jonathan Conso adding one assist.

Purdy's Ice Cream doubled up Samoset Pharmacy 8-4 behind a hat trick and an assist by Kevin Shinnick and three assists—and a goal—by "Playmaker" Pat Malone. Dave Arrufat, Brendan Mulcahy, John McInnis and Ricky Penzo also scored goals for Purdy's, with Sean Warwick (two assists), Dennis Magaldi, Mike Little, John Kurpeski and Matt Lawlor contributing assists.

Samoset got a pair of goals by Matt Connors and one each by Jessica Harrington and Bret Martinson. Zach Deegan (two assists), Steve McDonough, Mike MacPherson, Ed Laura, Steve Anderson, Joe Morris and Emily Ross all had assists in the loss.

Barry's Deli topped Doherty & White 9-5 behind Mike Calley's four goals and three assists by James Callahan. Mike Powers and Andrew Donovan added a goal and a pair of assists each, with Terrence O'Connell adding a goal and an assist and Joe Sweeney a pair of assists. Brian Carney had a solo tally for Barry's, and Kevin Lewis and Mike Gillespie added assists.

Brian Sorenson had a hat trick for Doherty in the loss, with Bob Gagliardi and Jim Dunn adding a goal and an assist apiece.

Squirt B's Fall 2-1 In State Tournament

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association Squirt "B" squad went all the way to the finals in the State Tournament held this weekend at Reilly Rink in Cleveland Circle.

The Squirt B's, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, rolled all the way through before losing a tough 2-1 heartbreaker to South Boston. The QYHA Squirts gave up only eight goals in the five-game series under goalie Nick Manning and back-up Matt Peters.

In the first game, Rob Mooney's hat trick was all the offense Quincy would need as they topped Falmouth 3-1. Ryan Tobin and Kenny Young also had great games for the Squirts.

The second game was a 5-2 win over Pembroke that saw Josh Giordani score three goals, with Liam Powers and Justin Swierk adding a goal apiece. Bob Donovan, Mooney and Swierk all contributed assists, with Brendan Craig and Pat Clifford playing well.

Swierk continued his scoring in the third game, scoring two goals and adding an assist to lead Quincy past Arlington 4-1. Dan Sullivan and Giordani (one assist) had solo tallies in the win, with Sean Moriarty, Craig and Mooney getting assists.

In the semi-final game, Rob Mooney scored the game-winning goal in the last two minutes to lead his team past Andover 3-2. Jake O'Donnell and Giordani accounted for the other two goals, with Swierk and Craig assisting. Mooney's goal came right after Andover had tied the game with 2:41 left.

The Squirts finally fell 2-1 in the title game to South Boston, who scored their two goals in the first period. Giordani unassisted blast in the second period brought Quincy to within one, but they could not score again.

The players and parents of the Squirt B's would like to thank coaches Pat Clifford, Kevin Craig and Mark Giordani, along with team sponsor Continental Cablevision for all the support and guidance in the state tournament.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"I can't carry a tune in a bucket!" a friend once said. Some people do not hear sounds in a way to be able to reproduce them accurately. Some cannot hear at all. But we can sing in our own ways. We can live lives that express our gratitude to God for every minute we've been given. Taking a deep breath on a beautiful evening and thanking God for life or goodness is its own song. We can also recite psalms, for psalms are the songs of Scripture. They do not require a tune to express the music of praise to God.

There is music in all of life; the tender promising song of a new baby's sighs; the powerful and enabling music underlying all acts of sacrifice on behalf of others. We are blessed with the music of joy, when people laugh together or clap their hands in encouragement or appreciation. Sorrowful music is also a part of life, tears, the winds of conflict and the long, deep sounds of grief.

The greatest music we sing, however, is revealed in our acts of faith in love. When we bring God into the daily routines of others by assisting them, inviting them to worship or eat with us, praising them or comforting them—these are songs of inestimable effect and power. We need not wait for musical talent and perfect pitch. We have only to express our gratitude, compassion and service.

Shipbuilder Hopes To Start Work By May

since the shipyard closed in the 1980s, Raymond showed a letter of support from President Bill Clinton.

Raymond said support from the President "speaks well for the integrity of Mr. Emmanuel and his proposal since he's made a financial commitment to the shipyard."

Mariano said the fact that Emmanuel has made a personal commitment of "out-of-pocket costs to just get to this stage is significant."

"We're talking significant amounts of money and that is what excites me," he said.

Mariano added that the most important thing that separates Emmanuel from others who have proposed revitalizing the shipyard was his quote about "failure not being an option."

Raymond said the proposal will compete against others from shipbuilders in Newport News and Louisiana, and noted, "We've heard many positive things about this proposal. It can withstand any scrutiny by any entity."

Sheets said Tuesday, as he did last week, he is being cautiously optimistic about Emmanuel's plan.

"If MARAD approves the loan guarantees, Mass Heavy Industries will begin building ships at the Fore River Shipyard," he said. "I am guardedly optimistic that this will happen."

When asked why his plan will be successful when previous proposals have not met with approval, Emmanuel said this is the first time there are signed contracts and letters of commitment.

Emmanuel was former chairman of the European and Greek Shipbuilders in Europe. He holds a law degree and a master's in shipbuilding administration from MIT.

He first became interested in the shipyard when he visited his daughter, who attends Clark University in Worcester. At that time, he read about the vacant shipyard in the newspaper.

He said he "loves Boston" and that it was always a dream of his to come to the area.

"My wife comes from Boston," he said. "This is a civilized place."

Emmanuel added that building ships is something he truly enjoys.

"Some people like golf, I like shipbuilding," he said.

'Strategic Plan' For Tourism

By CHRISTIAN POTTS

The Quincy 2000 Corporation officially unveiled their "Strategic Plan" to make Quincy a major tourist attraction at a Tuesday afternoon press conference in their Presidents Place offices in Quincy.

Quincy 2000 executive director Joe Mannarino and Dan Yeager of Yeager Communications—who had been selected to help spearhead the city's marketing efforts—hosted the press conference, which also served as new Tourism Consultant Jo-An Thomas official welcoming party.

"This is an important day in the history of tourism in the city of Quincy," said Mayor James Sheets. "Quincy is a city rich in historical sights—it is second only to Boston. This plan, along with the appointment of Jo-An Thomas, signals a new effort to make Quincy attractive to tourists and to improve the economy."

Thomas was welcomed by Mayor Sheets, City Councillor Michael Cheney, Sheets' administrative assistant Bernice Mader, Mannarino, and Yeager, all of whom called her appointment the first step in a concentrated effort to make Quincy a major tourist attraction.

"It means a great deal to the city of Quincy to have a tourism director," said Michael Cheney. "Quincy tourism needs strong leadership, and Jo-An can provide that. Tourism brings in business, provides jobs, boosts the economy, and generates interest in the city. We have a lot to offer as a city, and a full-time director will help to show people what we have."

Bernice Mader emphasized that Mayor Sheets has been wanting to promote tourism for a while, but hadn't wanted to make a mistake of "bringing people into the city when the city wasn't ready. When you have people over your house, you want it to look the best it can. The city is the same way; if it looks nice and is clean, then people will come away with a good experience, and they will tell other people that Quincy is a nice place to come to."

For her part, Jo-An Thomas said she is very excited to be a part of the Quincy tourism effort. "We

Official: Plan Best For Shipyard

A state official told the City Council Monday night the current plan to revitalize the Fore River shipyard is the best chance the city has to bring shipbuilding back to Quincy.

John Regan of the state Office of Economic Affairs spoke before the council at the request of Councillor Paul Harold who has voiced concerns about the plan and wanted an update on its status. The meeting also included some verbal sparring between Harold and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, whose ward includes the shipyard.

Regan, whose office has taken a leading role in trying to find a company to reopen the shipyard, told Raymond and the other councillors the proposal by Sotiris Emmanuel—owner of Mass Heavy Industries of Swampscott—to build oil tankers at the site is the strongest hope Quincy has of doing so.

"You're convinced this is the best proposal?" asked Raymond.

"I'm absolutely convinced," said Regan.

Meanwhile, Harold grilled Regan on his knowledge of William Gilliam, a South Carolina businessman with whom Emmanuel previously had entered into a partnership agreement.

Gilliam had proposed leasing the shipyard from Emmanuel for the first year to build barge-mounted power plants. During the past several months, however, questions had arisen about Gilliam's financial background and he dropped out of the plan.

Harold, who was among those who had learned of Gilliam's financial woes, told Regan that he was under the impression that Gilliam was "the money man" in the Fore River shipyard proposal. Regan, however, told Harold that Emmanuel never needed Gilliam's money to go through with his plan.

Regan added, however, that it is true Emmanuel

QP School Qualifies For Reimbursement

State Seen Paying 63% School Cost

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city will more than likely be reimbursed for 63 percent for the construction and interest cost of a new elementary school planned for Quincy Point.

School Supt Eugene Creedon said this week he has been notified by the state Department of Education that the city's proposal for the school qualifies as "approvable" under the current School Building Assistance Act and Regulations.

Creedon said the department made its decision after representatives from the Quincy School Committee met with members of the department's School Governance Services Office staff last week in Malden.

"It's excellent news," he said. "Although it's not a guarantee we'll get the money, when a project is deemed 'approvable,' you generally do."

The state indicated in a letter to Creedon that the city must now present its project to the Board of Education by the end of Fiscal Year 1996 (June 30).

"The current reimbursement rates for your school district is 63 percent," the letter states. "These rates will be in effect through June 30, 1996. If your project is presented to the Board of Education before that date, the grant will be 63 percent of construction and interest cost."

The letter also states, "Please be advised that all required documentation for an approved capital grant application must be received in the Department of Education on or before June 1, 1996 in order to be placed on the FY97 Pri-

Council Makes It Harder For Adult Clubs To Locate

The City Council Monday night passed an amendment to a city ordinance that will make it more difficult for adult clubs to set up shop in Quincy.

The original ordinance made it difficult for adult movie theaters to open in Quincy but made no provision for strip clubs.

The decision to amend the ordinance to include adult clubs followed the recent attempt by The Foxy Lady strip club of Providence, R.I. to open in Weymouth.

The ordinance amendment previously received support from city residents at public hearings held by the council and the Planning Board. One person at the City Council hearing suggested that such operations be banned entirely from the city, calling them "evil."

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, however, said any outright ban on such operations could be legally challenged as being in conflict with the U.S. Constitution.

As a result of the amendment, strip clubs will only be allowed to open in Quincy in areas zoned Industrial "A" or Industrial "B." In addition, the City Council, rather than the Zoning Board of Appeals, will be the special permit granting authority that will have the final say on whether such an establishment will be given permission to open.

An application from an adult club could also be challenged on the basis of traffic and other reasons.

Public Hearing April 22 On Granite Crossing Permit

A public hearing on the 1994 special permit allowing construction of the Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point will be held Monday, April 22 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers in City Hall.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond is seeking to amend the permit so that alcohol can never be sold at the site, which is located near The Falls condominium complex. The Granite Crossing project includes a Roche Bros. Supermarket and a Wal-Mart store.

His action follows a recent attempt by Roche Bros. to acquire a beer and wine license at the new supermarket—which is scheduled to open next month—despite the fact that alcohol was never a part of the original permit request. The Quincy License Board denied the license request last week, saying there is no public need for alcohol at that location.

Raymond said he wants to reexamine the permit—which was granted to developer Atlantic Development of Hingham—to see if facts found by the council in 1994 remain the same today. When the permit was granted, he noted, the council found that the project would have no detrimental impact on the neighborhood, and he said he wonders if a liquor license would change that.

Raymond added that he thinks the request for a liquor license may have affected the council's decision to grant the permit, and he said he wants companies requesting such licenses in the future to be "up front" about their intentions.

During last week's License Board meeting, Raymond presented some startling facts about liquor licenses in the neighborhood. He said there are four beer and wine licenses and five all-alcohol licenses within a one-mile radius of the store and added that within a two-mile radius, there are 57 stores, bars or restaurants that sell or serve alcohol.

Patrolmen Settle For 11% Pay Increase

Quincy's police patrolmen have settled on a new three-year contract with the city, Mayor James Sheets announced this week.

Sheets said they will receive an 11 percent increase over the three years. The pay hike calls for a 3 percent increase for Fiscal Year 1996 and subsequent 4 percent increases in FY97 and FY98, the same deal most of the city's other employees received.

The mayor said at press time Tuesday he had not yet signed the contracts but planned to do so either later in the day or on Wednesday.

"It's a happy feeling," he said of the deal. "We're pleased that we now have settled all of the major contracts. It helps in the city's budget-building process."

Sheets said the patrolmen are the last major municipal union to settle with the city. Part of the reason the negotiations took longer, he noted, was because Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger—who helped negotiate such contracts—left the city in December to take another job. Finding a replacement for her then became a priority, Sheets said, and longtime Quincy Savings Bank official James Chicino was named as Yaeger's successor.

Sheets said the School Committee is still negotiating with "two or three" of the smaller school unions, while "one or two" other unions may still be negotiating with Quincy Hospital.

The City Council put the pay hike into committee without discussion Monday night and will vote on them at a future meeting.

SACRED HEART SCHOOL kindergartners Samantha Stohberg and Zack Deegan look at photos of Mayor James Sheets, Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and historic homes during the school's recent "Q-Week" when students learned about the history of Quincy.

DPW Opens Pothole Hotline

The Quincy Department of Public Works announces the opening of its Pothole Hotline, 376-1914.

In an effort to assist Quincy residents with the reporting of potholes within the city, a special number is available to call on a 24-hour basis. DPW crews have already been busy working around the city to repair damage to the roadways resulting from the long, tough New England weather experienced this year.

All pothole-related calls should be directed to 376-1914 for immediate action. The pothole hotline, available every Spring, has been in existence for several years and was initiated so that citizens would be able to have direct contact when reporting pothole problems.

DPW Commissioner David Colton said, "the hotline has become a widely used tool for the public to communicate with the department, handling hundreds of calls and requests each year."

City Targets Yellow Water

The city is taking action to eliminate the cause of water discoloration in homes on Southern Artery between South Street and Fifth Ave.

The City Council passed a resolution toward that end introduced by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi Monday night. Raymondi said the problem makes drinking water yellow and can stain bathtubs and sinks.

The resolution, which was referred to Mayor James Sheets, states that Department of Public Works Commission David Colton and Sewer-Water-Drain Supt. George Clark take "immediate corrective action" to eliminate the problem.

Clark told councillors the problem has indeed caused difficulties.

Clark said the problem is being caused by a 102-year-old underground main that supplies water to the affected residences. He said the city will begin tying those homes into a separate, safer main across the street around April 15.

Until then, he added, the city will use a "temporary water service" to supply the homes with water.

Praises License Board For Sanctions On Pub

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of our community-based coalition, we would like to applaud the Quincy License Board for its recent decisions placing severe sanctions upon a local bar that was the site of drug-dealing activities.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, Police Chief Francis Mullen, Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman are to be congratulated for their strong stand. The suspension of the offending tavern's license for 21 days and the banning of three bartenders from working in licensed establishments in the city sends an important message to bar owners and employees alike that they are responsible for the activities that take place in their establishments.

Many others equally deserve praise for working to eliminate such activity from our city. Police Sgt.

Richard Laracy, the city's liquor inspector, and Detective Patrick Glynn and the other investigating officers should be commended for their work in identifying these crimes, as should the anonymous community member who tipped the police to such activities. Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond and former Councillor Ted DeCristofaro should also be commended on speaking so forcefully in representing their constituents' concerns about these activities within their neighborhood.

This episode highlights the successful efforts that can be made at reducing the availability of drugs within our community when all of us work together. We are proud of our many public servants and interested citizens who are working to make Quincy a healthier community in which to live and work.

DON'T DEPEND (ONLY) ON MAMMOGRAM

There is no doubt about it, mammograms can save women's lives. There is a risk, however, and it is one that is potentially far greater than any concern over the radiation used in mammograms, which is quite small. The greatest risk of mammography may be in the false sense of security some women assume it promises. While a mammogram is perhaps the single most important tool in diagnosing early breast cancers, it is not foolproof. Occasionally, the procedure may miss a lump or seem to indicate a tumor is benign when it is actually cancerous. That's why women over 40 should combine regular mammograms with annual visits to the doctor, monthly breast self-examinations, and keeping alert to any changes in the breast. P.S. How often women should have mammograms depends on her age and family history of breast cancer. Mammograms are no substitute for routine monthly self-exams of one's breasts because often you may be the first person to detect changes in your breast tissue. Emergency Dept. To Stay

There is still some concern that the Emergency Department at Quincy Hospital might be closed if the hospital affiliates with Carney Hospital. Concern that in the case of an emergency, Quincy residents would have to go all the way to Carney instead of to Quincy Hospital, reachable in just a few minutes.

But apparently they have nothing to fear.

The current issue of The Monitor, the Quincy Hospital's newsletter, addresses the question: "If Quincy and Carney affiliate would they consider closing one of the Emergency Departments?"

The answer is "no," according to the newsletter which says:

"The Emergency Department at Quincy and Carney Hospitals are both very busy.

"Our Emergency Departments are important access points for people in our communities who need medical attention, and the affiliation is being discussed so we can enhance our services for our communities.

"In addition, our Emergency Departments are essential to maintaining our patient base.

"We would not consider closing the Emergency Department at either hospital if an affiliation occurs."

COUNCILLOR Tim Cahill has been moving around Norfolk County in his quest for the county treasurer post in this year's election.

"I'm getting out and meeting people," he says. "The reception has been good."

He's no stranger in Dedham. His mother Theresa Fitzhenry's family comes from there and while she now lives in Quincy members of the family are still in the Dedham area.

Cahill will officially announce his candidacy Wednesday, April 3, 7 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy.

Tickets are $15 and can be had by calling 328-6699 or 773-3029. Also available at the door.

CAHILL

JOHN ADAMS, the first vice president, didn't think much of the job. He thought it was useless or needless, or words to that effect.

KOLSON

the speakers.

"He's got quite a sense of humor," Kolson says.

Major government officials, as you know, have Secret Service protection and to make their security as tight as possible are given code names.

When Gore was introduced to those attending the conference, Kolson quotes him as saying:

Merrymount School Offering $200 Book Scholarship

The Merrymount Elementary is offering its annual book scholarship in the amount of $200.

The PTO will randomly draw three separate scholarship winners from applications received by April 22. Applicants must be graduates of the fifth grade at the Merrymount School.

For applications or more information, call 984-8762.

"I'm (the vice president's job) so boring that the Secret Service code name for me is--Al Gore."

COUNCILLOR Paul Harold, who attended the National League of Cities Conference with Peter Kolson, reports they ran into a Quincy connection.

They met Jeff Wenberg, mayor of Rutland, Vt, who is originally from Quincy. He attended the Beechwood Knoll School.

Listed as members of the National League of Cities was Quincy, Mass, and sister city, Quincy, Ill. There was also the city of De Quincy, La. which has a population of 3,474.

Harold notes "The Norman form of the Quincy name is a reflection of the origin of the family name which came to England from the Normandy section of France."

SUSAN GALLAGHER, running for the U.S. Senate, found an unexpected ally as she started circulating her nomination papers as a Conservative candidate.

Gallagher, former Quincy resident who has a Beale St. Wollaston real estate agency, was long active in Quincy Republican circles and was chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee.

Tom Gilmartin, political analyst who is a conservative Democrat, and Gallagher didn't often agree on political matters.

But they apparently do this year. Gilmartin was the first to sign her nomination papers.

She needs 10,000 valid voter signatures by July 29 to get on the ballot. She hopes to get there by mid-April.

Gallagher, now a Milton resident, is running against both Democrat incumbent John Kerry and Republican Bill Weld for the Senate seat.

MARALIN MANNING, the perky executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, might have a political career in her future.

Running for the Republican Town Committee in Milton, she polled 930 votes--the third highest. And it was only her first run as a candidate.

You'd get our vote too, Maralin.

MILESTONE: Tony Delmonico, one of the top masons anywhere, is marking his 80th birthday. When Tony, a working stone mason with the Quincy Park Department many years before his retirement, built anything, it stayed built.

He finished the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater after the project had earlier problems, rebuilt the Abigail Adams Cairn on Penn's Hill and built the Grossman Family Memorial at Fenno St. and Quincy Shore Drive. And he put his artistic skills to many other projects.

Happy birthday, Tony.

P.S. The wall is still standing strong.

SIGNS OF SPRING: The calendar says so. The first robin has been sighted. But the real sure sign of spring is at Wollaston Beach. Tony's Clam Shop is open for the 31st spring-summer season.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1919 POSTCARD view of the Fore River Shipyard was one of a series showing the types of work done to produce ships at the yard at that time. Here a riveting gang is at work on deck plates. Notice how young some of these fellows look. This card was sent by a man boarding on Baxter St. in Quincy to a lady friend in Hubbardston reminding her to write.

4-Year-Old Children Don't Need That Much Bilingual Education

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At the risk of being labelled Pat Buchanan-esque, I have a hard time swallowing a novel bilingual preschool for 4-year-olds in the Wollaston School district.

To be eligible, the children must be low-income with at least one working parent. The program will serve six children who are English-fluent and 12 children who are not. According to Wollaston School Principal Elizabeth Bostrum, "We're really excited to be able to offer children this opportunity...giving them a chance to start a little earlier."

The preschool will run from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Children will spend three hours in a classroom and the remainder of the day will take on a daycare structure. Bostrum believes the preschool's teaching focus will be language-based, helping minority children attain a better command of English before kindergarten. The six English-fluent children will serve as language role models for the others.

This whole bilingual preschool is being financed by grant money from the state Department of Education to expand early childhood education opportunities for low-income children from working families. Quincy Community Action-Head Start will administer the 18-month grant. At Wollaston, according to a Patriot Ledger news story, the grant will pay to hire one full-time teacher, three aides and a half-time social worker. Of course, a social worker; where would we be without one of them, huh?

Having said all this, here is my reaction. Why in the world do we need a bilingual preschool for 4-year-olds? Apparently, folks must have seen this state money dangling out there and sat down, apparently, to create a need for it. And what of this talk about English fluent preschoolers being role models? The last time you heard 4-year-olds talking with each other, could you recognize which one was the role model?

As an opponent of endless bilingual education--and by that I mean keeping kids on a bilingual track in school far too long--aren't children harmed more than helped? Bilingualism sometimes has the appearance of linguistic ghetto-ization. Children need to learn English as quickly as possible and I'm not sure bilingual preschool helps fluency in young children.

Yep, Quincy got over a cool half-million in grants for early childhood education and some of the money sounds like it will be well-spent but grant money is not free money. It is tax-generated dollars and ought to be spent wisely. I'm not sure that this bilingual preschool isn't merely just full-day daycare financed by Bay State taxpayers.

My bottom line: 4-year-olds really don't need that much bilingual education. Kids learn from each other in the playground far more than the classroom at that age. My grandparents spoke a Sicilian dialect to my father and their other three children. But when they went to school, it was English only. My grandmother never allowed any of her children to speak to one another in anything but English at home. She understood what all these social workers and case managers never have, and that is: the best way to learn a language at early ages is immersion, plain and simple.

I can understand some transitional bilingual education, but the shorter the stay, the better for each and every student. As the grandchild of immigrants from both Sicily and from West Cork, I remain proud of my rich ethnic heritage but as an American, I am more proud of the new life my grandparents created for their respective families. So don't call me anti-immigrant or intolerant or right-wing because I fail to understand the logic behind bilingual preschool for 4-year-olds.

Remembering Larry Zwicker Jr.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It took a tough man to run a tender.

We learned with deep regret of the passing of Larry Zwicker Jr., former member of Squantum Yacht Club and chairman of its tender committee. Under Larry's leadership, Squantum Yacht Club enjoyed some of the best tender (small boats maintained for club use, both motor and manual, as well as a scheduled launch) service in the club history. He was an absolute stickler for detail, maintenance and cleanliness; woe to any launch operator or club member from commodore to the newest member who failed to leave a boat the way they found it.

Although he could seem gruff at times, he was a true sailor, an extremely competent boat handler and always willing to help anyone in need. His loss will be felt by many and he will be missed, especially by those of us who sail the bright blue Quincy Bay.

Woodward School Case In Dedham Court

By PAUL HAROLD

The Trustees of Dartmouth College filed a petition in Norfolk Superior Court to enjoin the Woodward School from admitting girls not born in Quincy.

March 21 - 27
1969

27 Years Ago

Under the terms of the will of Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, the school was established for Quincy-born girls only. If the school closed, the remainder of Dr. Woodward's estate would then go to Dartmouth College.

Mayor James McIntyre sought the modification as a way to keep the school open, effectively ending the 75-year-old restriction on student enrollment.

Atty. Ruth Paven, an alumna of the school, was scheduled to defend the city's position in modifying the original bequest of Dr. Woodward.

LOCAL 5 CONTRACT VOTE

The 5,300 production workers in Local 5 at the Quincy shipyard voted on a five-year contract. The balloting took place at the rear of Jimmy's Cafe on DesMoines Rd.

If approved, the contract would strengthen the yard's position when it formally bid on April 3 on a contract to construct a fleet of destroyers.

The contract called for a 73-cents an hour increase with a fringe benefit package for a combined raise worth $1.10 an hour.

NQHS BOOSTERS SEEK NEW MEMBERS

Daniel Dieso, Jr. of Newbury Ave., chairman of the NQHS Boosters Club, called for an increase in membership, with the goal of a total of 2,500 members.

He noted that the club financed 3,000 trophies and 4,000 plaques to members of the school's athletic teams and aided in the completion of the Walter "Cap" Bryan gym.

In addition, it provided bus transportation to school athletic events as well as thousands of dollars in scholarships.

Nancy's Shrimp and Curry Pasta

When our daughter Nancy recently cooked a new shrimp pasta entree, she brought her father and me a taste. We enjoyed it so much that I'm sure you will also.

She got it from her customer Louis at her barbershop.

SHRIMP AND CURRY PASTA
3/4 pound fresh shrimp (peeled and deveined)

8 ounces heavy cream
1 tablespoon ketchup
1 tablespoon curry powder
1 red pepper (cut up in strips) salt and pepper to taste olive oil for saute

1/2 to 3/4 pound pasta grated parmesan or romano cheeses

In about a tablespoon or so of olive oil, saute the red peppers. Add the cream, ketchup, curry powder, salt and pepper. Heat, but don't boil.

In a small amount of olive oil, saute the shrimp until pink. Add to the cream mixture and blend. Pour it over either angel hair or a favorite pasta. Top with grated cheese.
